It is evidently the interest of a guild of millionaires somewhere to arrest the payment of the National debt. That policy means to take the millions which are now annually devoted to the extinction of the nation's indebtedness and slip them into the pockets of some plotting conspirators against the nation's welfare. For instance the distillers are beginning to clamor for a reduction in the duty on their poison whisky, which, without adding a cent to the retail price, could well afford to pay double its present tax and then yield profits unheard of in any honest business. And the same could be said of the beer traffic.

After all the frauds and thefts they have committed, after all the millions of taxes which they have stolen, they have the impudence to propose the reduction of the tax on whisky from 90 to 50 cents a gallon, which means a clean transfer of 36 millions a year from the revenue which pays the national debt and interest and let it slip into the pockets of the distillers; and this too while they are under vigorous suspicion of smuggling nearly one half of the product of their infernal stills of death.

The first step to this end is now a labored editorial every now and then in the colums of the whisky fed press, trying to prove that it would be better not to pay off this debt too fast; that the more and longer we pay interest to a few millionaires,—the more we impoverish the masses and stuff their savings into the useless vaults and cellars of the dog-in-the-manger bond holders—the more and longer we retard public improvements and discourage private enterprise,—the better for the country.

The Post of last Saturday, treated its readers to one of these sophistries, which shows that it is wholesome and consoling to be in debt, and that it is going to wrong posterity if we deprive them of the luxury of paying for a dead horse, and one with which they never had anything to do. It displays an immense emptiness of the upper story or a very heavily weighted judgment, when any one tries to prove that a commercial course which is known to be invariably fatal to the financial existence of an individual can be wholesome for a nation or a state. Every man and woman too, that has brains and no corrupt reason to think otherwise, knows that now is the best time to pay any debt if the debtor is prosperous and able to meet it; and if he cannot meet it this year, he ought at the earliest moment possible without undue sacrifice. Whoever teaches otherwise, might as well say that our rules of arithmetic are applicable to sums under 100 but not over that amount.

Look out now for editorials in the whisky interest. It can afford to plant a few millions in hiring them.

CHEAP JOHN IN CONNECTICUT.

The proceedings of the Grand Lodge of Connecticut, at its 18th annual session in September, have been published, and a very well got up copy forwarded by Brother L. N. Olmsted, the faithful and efficient G. W. Sec'y. Present membership, 3,415, which is 202 less than last year; 5 Lodges have been organized and 4 lost; present number of Lodges, 62. Total receipts of the year, $1,370; expenditures, $1,549. Balance in treasury at beginning, $325; at end of year, $145.

The committee on "State of the Order" asks, "Has the Order in Connecticut met the responsibilities pressing upon it?"

In answer, it mentions that in 1870 there were 9,862 Good Templars in that state. In every one of the 11 years there has been a decrease of membership to the present 3,415, which is less than the number when the Grand Lodge was instituted in 1865. In 16 years 144 lodges have gone out of existence. It asks the cause, and "What shall we do about it?" and attributes the cause to selfishness—"too many of our members being sponges, seeking everything, and doing nothing for others." It commends more devotion, more of the spirit of faith, hope and charity, etc., so that all the dead Lodges and members may be resurrected, etc.

Now it is respectfully and earnestly submitted to our Connecticut brethren, that this same talk and this same action have brought them 11 consecutive years of disaster; melted them down to one-third of their membership, and there will be another loss to report next year, for nothing has been done to prevent it; the old policy will produce the old result. The cause of all this declension is to be found in the first line of the receipts in the report of the G. W. S., which shows the year's per capita tax $1,096, which for 3,415 members is just 8 cents a quarter. All the devotion and faith, hope and charity in the world that can be measured by 8 cents a quarter would not produce anything better than a heavy decline in the membership of any Good Templar organization.

A philanthropy that cannot rise above the sacrifice of half a cent a week never has been known to improve the condition of the world a particle. A Grand Lodge of Good Templars in proper condition has under its orders and ready to obey its call, such a force of willing, ready cooperators to do and help its work gratuitously or at mere expenses, that it can carry on a progressive reformatory mission, on a pecuniary basis that would starve out any other organization. Thus a Grand Lodge is able to do an aggressive and successful temperance work with a 25 cent quarterly capita tax, aided by the willing efforts and contributions which success attracts and inspires.

But when it makes cheapness its first and foremost article of faith and practice, and subordinates every thing to the cheap john policy, it must expect a cheap john result. Connecticut a few months ago starved out its prohibition paper; and no amends are proposed for that; that was no misfortune, but it may be depended on that its next session of G. L. will lament double the average loss for the coming year, because it has not done any thing to guard against it.

There is no reason why Connecticut should not have as many members as California and as good an income, and report an equal annual accession—no reason except an utterly rat-hole financial system and incompetent management. And that State has and always had of its own raising, a body of men and women as devoted, as able, as sincerely philanthropic and as laborious in our great cause as could be desired. But like every other Grand Lodge which has blundered along on a 5 or 10 or 15 cent financial basis, it has expended its powers and its pennies all these years in actually bringing a grand, noble Order into contempt and aiding its enemies to pronounce it a failure; as it really is and has been under the dead cheap john Grand Lodges, and will be in the future unless a radical change is promptly effected.

Every Good Templar who desires this Order to live and not rot out, should steadfastly set his face against the "tinkling cymbal" policy, and above all things reform the cheapening craze which has so nearly paralized the Order forever. It is not overlooked that the Good Templars of Connecticut have done a large amount of lasting good, but their rapidly dying out is what we have a right to exclaim against, and it is done in no carping or invidious spirit; the object of such strictures is to save the Order. If it goes down, no amount of either faith, hope or charity will ever build another to fill its place effectively. The first rational act the G. L. of Connecticut can do is to raise its per capita tax to 25 cents a quarter, and go to work and build.

SPELING.

Wun ov the ridikulus folliz ov our old fossil sistem ov speling is exibited in the wurd Read, hwich wun time spels reed, and another red. For instans: "I read the paperz every day, and I read it yesterday," are tu sentences in hwich the same letterz are supposed tu spel tu entirely different words, hwich are quite unlike each other when spoken. When we want to no whether it is reed or red, we kan only study it out by pondering over the rest ov the sentens and guess at what the riter ment tu sa.

Again, He took the lead; that dont tel us whether the fello started on ahead, or made the first speech at a prayer meeting, or swallowed a pound ov duck shot, or whether he jumped a silver mine in Arizona. Why should not he "led" the wa and white "lead and black "lead be all speld alike?

Several partiz hav ov late tried tu defend the old sistem, one sez he protests agin the nue method, because he has an aged aunt in England hooze name iz Alborough, and how dare any one spel her name Albo ro, the way the Rescue spels thoro. It would brake the deer old ladyz hart.

Anuther sed the letterz which form a word aut not tu have the sound ov the wurdz tha reprezent, but tha should be a kind ov lesson objekt by which tu remember that word. On the same principle it would be best in the childrenz speling buks tu teach them r-a-t spels elefant and put the picture ov a rat underneath, and the boy would alwayz think ov elefant when he saw a rat as long as he lived. That would be so handy.

Another party rites. "i Doant approove off yousing A temppern Payper too spile hour spellin what we larnt at schooll and they teechers gnew more an you evver did, gimme a man az cann spell propper."

Thus the wait of argument iz going strong against the change ov the dear blessed old superstishun ov beleeving that there iz no other religious, decent, orthodox way ov riting than to rite C-o-l-o-n-e-l when you mean to say Kurnel—you kan remember Solo so much better than you could Kur. How wise it would be tu spel pigs with seven gs; if there iz any good moral tendency in speling falsely, seven gs in pig would certainly have a good moral effekt upon the rising generation.

IMPROVED DWELLINGS.

Mr. Baron Dowse, one of the judges of Ireland, recently addressing the grand jury of Dublin commented on the terrible increase of crime. There were 4,398 offences in the city of Dublin in 11 weeks, an increase of 1670 over the quarter preceding. Of these offences, 2995 were convictions of drunkenness, disorderly conduct and vugrancy. He allowed this was a very formidable increase and that a great deal of it arose from intoxication; that "the qnantity of alcohol consumed in a district was the measure of its degradation." He then asked how are we to grapple with the evil?" So far the judge talked like a competent, reasonable, scholarly gentleman; but right there he turns away into an old side path of most profoundly insipid twaddle and nonsense. He believes the vice of drunkenness arises principally from the bad dwellings in which the working classes are compelled to live. "Improvement of dwelling houses would have a most beneficial effect, as men are more the victims of circumstances than of a desire of their own for drink."

Years ago somebody who was either a partial imbecile or desired to falsely attribute drunkenness to something else beside the grogshop, patented the miserable lie that it was due to bad dwellings, and here and there and everywhere it has been the fashion to repeat it with occasional variations, such as the Chinese, labor saving machinery, scolding wives, extravagant wives, defective cooking wives, incompetent mothers, cold weather, comets and thin shoes. Anything to avoid the truth.

It is a well known fact that a very large proportion of the drunkards who live in wretched abodes became drunkards in very comfortable dwellings, and nearly always in better ones. And there is not an instance on record of a drunken man or woman having ever been reformed by placing them in more comfortable houses or circumstances, but everybody has been a personal witness of numerous failures of those experiments.

In the formluation of his theory, the Judge unintentionally expressed one important truth, which would lead any reasonable man to the light; "men are more the victims of circumstances than of a desire of their own for drink." That just covers the whole ground. When a poor man lives happily in a comfortable dwelling with his family, and you put the circumstance of a grogshop on each side of his front entrance, and on each side of his back door, and half a dozen such circumstances across the street, and at every corner and between every two corners on the way to his workshop, and on the way to church, and on the way to market, and in the market, and in the grocery store, and when his wages are paid to him in a grogshop, the poor fellow is surrounded by altogether too many circumstances, and is almost sure to fall a victim to them; he is apt to lose his own home and gravitate into the slimy abodes which no one but the drunkard or his victim dependants, ever need descend to.

When people have for a long series of years, been endeavoring to give the poor a chance of better dwellings and to do away with the suffering, starving, naked poor altogether, as might so easily be done, it is irritating to have heartless blockheads and hypocrites interposing obstacles with a view to fasten the chains of drink upon the poor, and prolong the existence of a real, live, positive, burning hell in our midst.

Another block of land is now to be placed on the market, and a temperance building society is in contemplation, from which beneficent results are expected.

It is suggested to our Australian friends that one of the very best features of the Vineland colony system, due to the remarkably clear brain of Mr. Landis was that the terms of purchase compelled every buyer of a lot to put up a dwelling of some kind, and make certain impronements before receiving a final deed of conveyance. This had to be done in a year from purchase and execution of bond. Thus speculators were prevented from coming in and doubling up the price of lots on the bona fide colonist, as they appear to have done in some instances in the Australia colony. That is a matter of peculiar importance—to keep the lot gambler out from cursing a new colony.

The temperance colony wherever started successfully will never need any trades unions or greenback societies any more than they will law courts and charity soup kitchens.

SUNDAY LAW AND BUSINESS.

A gentleman, whese business keeps him constantly traveling, reports that in one interior town, a German store keeper informed him, that he had resisted the enforcement of the Sunday Law, as an injury to his business, but now when he has seen the results, he is warmly interested in its maintenance as a financial measure of great advantage. He now enjoys the day of rest and recuperation; men who formerly could buy nothing, wasting all their money on Sunday, now come in and make cash purchases from him, and after a month's trial, he says people who owed him hopeless debts of small amounts, are paying them off, and have become again cash customers. He thinks his monthly profits have already been enhanced from 5 to 10 per cent by the Sunday Law.

In another town, a store keeper told him he had regarded the law as a serious menace to his business; for more than a dozen years, he had known no difference between one day and another. He would have paid money to beat the law, but since it has gone into operation, he is delighted with its good effects in the improved condition of society; he loves to have his day of rest now; he has better customers and more of them, and would cheerfully contribute $200 or $300 to save the law if it was in danger of defeat.

In another town, the Sunday was usually the occasion of 4 or 5 fights, and frequently serious cuttings &c.; but now quiet and order prevail thruout the week, and people are for the most part supremely gratified at the improvement effected which is manifest in many directions.

Our traveler says that wherever he goes, public opinion approves and rejoices at the happy results of the enforcement of this beneficent law.

And taking a square, unprejudiced, financial view of this matter, figuring the immense loss occasioned to reputable business and industry by a dissipated drunken Sunday in this city of San Francisco, there is no doubt that if it was necessary to expend half a million dollars in 1882 to establish this beneficent commercial law in this city, the business men including the Jews and Germans who are not engaged in the drunkard making business, could well afford to be assessed that amount and recover it thrice over in one years extra profits on a vastly increased business and better paying customers.

And if it was necessary to assess the working men to pay that half million dollars equally apportioned between them to fortify and secure this day of rest and comfort, they could afford to pay it themselves and then divide or put in the Savings bank in the ensuing year four millions of dollars hitherto wasted by them in Sunday dissipation and added to the hoarded millions of their monopolist oppressors.

There is more wealth to this city to be gained by a strictly enforced Sunday law than would accrue from a hundred million bonanza discovered under Telegraph Hill. The latter with 4600 grogshops open all the time would only produce more crime poverty and suffering.

TEMPERANCE COLONY.—In New South Wales a Vineland project has been successfully started. A township of 378 lots was surveyed and all sold very rapidly; then 200 more lots were added and almost immediately all sold under strict deed conditions of no place for sale of liquor of any kind. The Social Reformer of Sidney says that they are making preparations for building, many of the lots have changed hands already at double the purchase price, and there has been but one defaulter in payments.

Bro. Fred Esmond of Temescal Lodge, Oakland, is actively exerting himself in pushing the Mutual Aid interest in his vicinity and deserves much credit for endeavoring to use this most important and efficient support to the completeness and importance of our Order.

Rev. J. H. Neal, Madera, reports a constant upward tendency in the temperance movement in Fresno county, and wishes success to the RESCUE and the cause it advocates.

FROM AMITY, OREGON.

AMITY, Or. Nov. 12, '81.

I am much interested in the spelling reform, tho it is rather hard for old people to change their customs, but I sustain you in your way of spelling, and shall try to conform to it. The reform should extend to all silent and double letters.

There was held at this place, during this week, a conference or co-operative meeting of delegates from the Christian (Campbellite) churches of this state, at which a resolution was adopted unanimously, favoring prohibitory laws, amendment to State Constitution &c. The delegates and members present joined in petitioning our next legislature to take action in that direction. They also passed a resolution recommending the congregations to use unfermented wine in communion. A grand forward move! I am sure it will give a new impetus to the work thruout the state.

But I cannot forbear expressing my regret that some of those present seemed unwilling to affiliate with "temperance" organizations; wishing to confine all such efforts to the church. Yet I know many of that church who are earnest workers in the G. T. Lodge and other temperance organizations.

I wish to say a few words, by way of exhortatio to your Oregon readers; (your California readers do not need it so much.) Dear Friends, can we not do more for the boys and girls of our state than we are doing. Our youths are being enticed into the snares of intemperance and we are careless and unconcerned, almost every boy in our whole state uses tobacco and drinks beer or something stronger, many parents seem to think nothing of these things, and I know even some Good Templars who think beer is not only harmless, but beneficial. O friends, beer and the so called milder drinks are but the devil's bait to lure our sons to ruin. I feel deeply on this subject, would that I could arouse parents to a sense of the awful danger.

Mothers, how could you bear to see your son going in the drunkards way ? would not your heart break with anguish ? and yet many of your sons are just entering that way and very soon it will be too late to save them. Parents! let me entreat you to unite in bringing an influence to bear upon the minds of our boys that will counteract the influence of the saloons; begin at once. I have tried to arouse an interest in the matter in Amity, but not one will promise to take hold in earnest. If one other will help me we will have a Band of Hope and save the boys, but I cannot do this alone; my health will not permit. Let us hear from you.

As I have seen nothing in the RESCUE from Sheridan I will remark they have a Lodge of 50 members. MRS S. A. MCKUNE.

OREGON.

Astoria lodge, I. O. G. T., has ordered for free distribution over the city, a large supply of National Liberator, No. 15, containing the rousing speeches of John B. Finch, . Miss Willard aud Gov. St. John of Kansas. Will any Lodge in Oregon fail to strengthen, enlarge and enrich itself by this grand opportunity ? Only think of it! Three first class and most telling prohibition speeches for a trifle over a half-cent; $6 per 1000.

Address, National Liberator, 106 Franklyn St. Chicago.

Astoria's two Bands of Hope have decided to consolidate. The work is highly prosperous, many young ladies and gentlemen rallying round the glorious juvenile banner. Lodge also very prosperous and growing. T. J. ALLEY.

THE PRESS.—The Chicago Daily News is one of the influential newspapers of the country which advocate prohibition. Slowly but surely the press, that Archimedian lever, will wheel into line in this country, and give the death blow to the rum traffic. —S. C. Transcript.

There is going to be a sudden change in a great many papers ere long. The News will prosper in its new departure, and if the San Francisco Chronicle would hoist the "down with the grogshop" flag, it would lose the support of a few outlaws of the League of Libertinism, but it would gain a tenfold addition of better constituents and would build itself in the hearts of the best people in the state and nation, a foundation of prosperity that would place it forever out of sight, ahead of all competitors as the paper of this coast and people.

The Chronicle deserves credit for unveiling the infamy of the Sugar Monopoly and its slave market. It is to be hoped that the treaty is doomed beyond question. But the extortion of Spreckles and the whole slave system, if the worst aspects given of it are true, present an almost Eden-like innocence when compared with the atrocious villanies, the crimes, the cruelties, the heartless atrocities, the loathsome debaucheries, the persistent robberies and the altogether devilish infamy of the San Francisco grogshop and beerdive, which the Chronicle so far dares never to mention reprovingly or disre spectfully.

THE Crusader and perhaps other journals may have misunderstood the accusation made by the Orillia Packet against the RESCUE. The simple facts are these: Sometime ago Prof. Geo. E. Foster enclosed in a private letter several of his leaflets. One was published in the RESCUE headed: "Who is the Rumseller ?" by (Prof. Foster.)

At the close was (what he is and where he ought to be classed, leaflet No. 4 will tell). In due time the Social Reformer in Australia copied the article headed just as in the Rescue with (by Prof. Foster), and at the close credited it to this paper. Then the Orillia Packet says: "An instance of how many American newspapers of considerable influence are edited, is supplied by the Sydney Social Reformer, which contains an article credited to the California RESCUE that was originally issued as a tract by the Scott Act Association of Hamilton, Ontario." Now, that is a plain statement that the contents of a tract were stolen and published as editorial in the Rescue, when the Packet man had the evidence before his eyes that his statement was absolutely false, and he never had reason to believe the Rescue had ever done so in any other instance. The motive of thus assaulting an entire stranger may be inferred from a quotation which appeared in a Canadian paper some months ago credited to the O. Packet, advising the Canadian temperance people to dissolve all connection with their American brethren. What the Packet may have said since the 6th of October on this matter is unknown to the writer.

NEWCASTLE, Cal. Nov. 20, 1881.

DEAR RESCUE:—Newcastle Lodge, No. 339, I. O. G. T. is keeping right along in the even tenor of its way, having pleasant, harmonious and we trust, profitable sessions regularly on Sunday night of each week. Among the things that give us especial cause for rejoicing is that every place of business together with the saloons of this place are closed on every Sunday.

Thus does this pleasant village keep pace with the advance of the observance of law, order and civilization.

To the credit of the legitimate houses of business every one of them closed up on Sundays several weeks before the law was decided to be constitutional, thus proving that popular opinion and virtue as well as law are ready to approve the wonderful (?) decision of our supreme court, and so may it always be. GEO. D. KELLOGG.

ALTURAS, Nov. 16, 1881.

ED. RESCUE:—I approve of a Home Protective party; let us keep it before the people until prohibition is the theme of every state and nation and every family made happy by a law that will protect them and punish the keepers of the pauper and thief schools, licensed by the government that violates every principle of a free government.

I organized Band of Hope on Sept. 11, 1881. Rising Sun is the name of the Band having 20 members ten females and ten males; Sister Mary Estes, Superintendent. Our lodge is not gaining any but brotherly love prevails. PRESTON HAYES, L. D.

CORRECTIONS.—This paper professes never to take an article or an item from any other paper or pen, without due credit. But last week in the juvenile department, the "Bar Room Verdict," and the little poem, "Woman's Rights," appeared without credit thru neglect of the printers; it almost needs the services of a special detective to prevent the frequent occurrence of such careless omissions.

LEFT OUT.—Every week a good deal of matter is left out or over for want of room. It may be wondered at that sometimes a communication is left out, and several articles are in, that might as well have been deferred till next week. One side of the RESCUE is printed on Monday. On the other, the reports of the G. W. S. andthe lecturers &c., leave little room for communications that come in after Saturday.

THE TEMPERANCE ALMANAC is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages: list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1.00 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St. New York.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE,

Below is a list of a few of the most useful and excellent works with which every reformer should be supplied, and in which he should be well posted:

BACCHUS DETHRONED.— A Prize Essay; Cloth, $1; paper edition, 50c. Completely masters the whole subject. Everybody ought to have it.

TEMPERANCE LESSON BOOK.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., M. D., LL. D., F. R. S. 220 pp. Cloth, 50c.; paper, 25c. This is a series of short lessons on alcohol and its action on the body, accompanied with suitable questions, designed for study in public and private schools, and reading in schools and families. Send for it; read what this brightest and and best of medical scientists has discovered regarding all kinds of drinks; be sure to lend it to your family doctor.

TEN LECTURES ON ALCOHOL.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., F. R. S. Comprising the six Cantor Lectures: "Action of Alcohol on the Body and on the Mind," "Moderate Drinking," "The Medical Profession," and "The Liberty of the Abject." 338 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c. The ablest and cheapest lectures ever presented to the American public,

ON ALCOHOL.—By Dr. B. W. Richardson, F. R. S., of London. 12mo., 190 pages. Six "Cantor Lectures," showing the nature and effect of alcohol on the body and mind. Cloth, 75c.; paper, 25c.

OUR WASTED RESOURCES.—By Dr. Wm. Hargreaves. 12mo., 202 pages. The Missing Link in the Temperance Reform, giving the most valuable statistics ever published. Price in cloth, $1.50; paper edition, 50c.

This book contains ten sermons and talks by this eminent divine. They are filled with sound, convincing arguments against the lawfulness, morality and necessity of the liquor-traffic, as well as stirring appeals to all Christian men and women to take a firm, decided, out-spoken stand in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, Send for that and lend it to the ministers in your vicinity.

ALCOHOL AND THE STATE.—A discussion of the problem of law as applied to the liquor-traffic. By Robert C. Pitman, L.L.D., Associate Judge of Superior Court of Massachusetts. 12mo. 411 pages, $1 50.

It is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. It shows that the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the State; and the foe of all the objects for which the State exists; and presents such strong arguments, statistics, appeals, authorities, as will add greatly to an intelligent and wise solution of the Liquor Problem. The economy and legislative aspects of the Alcoholic discussion have never been so ably presented, and it should be in the hands of every citizen and in every library in the land.

THE MEDICAL USE OF ALCOHOL.—95 pages. By James Edmunds, M. D., of London. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 60c.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND ALCOHOL.—12 mo., 33 pages. By B. W. Richardson, M. D., 10c.

PROHIBITION DOES PROHIBIT; OR PROHIBITION NOT A FAILURE.—12mo, 48 pages. By J. N. Stearns, 10c.

JULIA COLMAN'S WORKS.

SPECIMEN SETS.—Beer Tracts, Handbills, etc., 6 cents; Leaflets and Children's Tracts, 5c.; Tracts and Leaflets on Wine, 5c.; File case set of Union Leaflets, 18c.; File case set of Children's Tracts, 25c.

These file cases are of strong manila paper, nicely lettered, and they open like a port-folio, disclosing the sets; can be closed and fastened with a rubber ring; can be used for specimens for a long time, and are a great convenience in the use of tracts.

Contains full directions for the management of young and older people and children, in the study of the nature and effects of alcohol, so that they may never be tempted to learn by experience. The school is conducted on the model of the Sunday-school, both because that is a proper model and because people thus learn with so little explanation. Hundreds of these schools are being opened and are becoming very popular. The Text Books used in this Temperance School are

A work for the children. Simple, direct, concise and popular. They enjoy it much; study and learn to recite it all through—and explain it, too, provided the teacher uses also the

The object of this book is to assist the teachers in the use of the catechism on alcohol. It is arranged in short lessons, each of which is accompanied with a note giving directions for simple experiments, object lessons, blackboard exercises, followed by a little lecture on the above methods with facts and illustrations and incidents which may be used by the teacher. Every teacher and reader recognizes this Manual and Catechism to be just the thing needed: their suggestions and deductions are those of a thorough practical teacher, completely armed and equipped for that duty. No better help to temperance education has ever been produced; probably nothing that comes near it in usefulness.

These three works are especially intended for use in temperance organizations of various kinds, and there are many helps to go with them, such as the children's tracts above named, one of which is selected for each lesson. Then there are

CHROMO TEXT CARDS.—Per 100, $1. Sewall's Stomach Plates, $9. same, mounted on rollers, $12.

And many others named and priced in the Temperance School above named. For teaching Temperance in the Day School, a movement coming now into very general favor, the new book has been prepared, entitled

An elementary text book for schools. This work is approved by the most experienced and distinguished advocates of Temperance

Miss Colman is always promptly willing to answer questions, and give explanations and make selections with the most scrupulous attention for all who call for her services in the line of temperance literature, and the RESCUE particularly recommends its readers to make liberal use of her admirable publications, and to apply for them at once at her new address,

MISS JULIA COLMAN,

☞ To get all the works in the two lists above, including 1,100 beer tracts and 1,000 leaflets, will cost about $11 if the books are bound in cloth, or $8 if in paper covers. Every lodge ought to get just the entire outfit at once, well bound for the use of its members.

HELP Yourselves by making money when a golden chance is offered, thereby always keeping poverty from your door. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. We furnish an expensive outfit and all that you need, free. No one who engages fails to make money very rapidly. You can devote your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

Startling Exposure of the Liquor Traffic.

A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books giving receipts for making and doctoring—advertisements of essences, facsimiles of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel and made at less than 25c. a gallon. Wine that never saw grape juice—cider that never saw apples—beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing, whisky from arsenic, millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten foot square cellar—more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France.

This book is no mere toy, but an exhaustive work—a work of years of close research and investigation, and cannot fail to prove an invaluable auxiliary to the temperance cause. It forms one volume of our "Popular Temperance Library," and we shall sell it at the following fabulous prices:—Single sample number, 10c. Five or more sent to separate addresses for 8c. each—5 or more to one address 5½c. each—25 or more to one address 5c. each. Special rates on large lots. Book nearly ready for delivery. Orders filled in turn.

We also publish 90c. to $1.50 story books in large newspaper form. One complete book, illustrated, in quantities, at 2c. each. Samples of three books already issued, for 10 cts. A whole library of choice $1.00 to $1.50 story books in book form (paper covers) especially for Sunday-schools and Bands of Hope, for only c. each (sample copy 8c.) Eighteen monthly papers at 5c. a year, (samples of each for 10c.) We take contracts to sow towns knee-deep with temperance literature for a song, and that, too, with papers in place of tracts. A full line of Band of Hope supplies so cheap that the penny collection pays for library, weekly paper, badges, pledges and all. Also a host of other temperance documents, all at revolution prices. Send for catalogue. We have the indorsement of the press, societies, and prominent workers in all parts of the country The following was recently received from Governor St John, of Kansas:

State of Kansas, Executive Department, Topeka, Oct. 22, 1881.—I heartily approve of your plan of work. Your publications will accomplish great good, and should be liberally patronized by the friends of Christian temperance everywhere. Very truly yours, JOHN P. ST JOHN.

An Appeal. We wish to reach every temperance worker in the land, man or women, with our samples, catalogue, etc. We can do nothing if we cannot reach the people. Will not every one send us names of workers? It only costs a postal card and a few minutes' time. Please say where you saw this. Address "REVOLUTION TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING HOUSE," DAVID C. COOK, Manager, 148 Madison St., Chicago.

Lecturers' Reports.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

Saticoy.—Bro. Guthrie brought me here, and his daughter, Miss Mary, accompanied us. I had contracted a violent cold and was more than half sick; so Sister Guthrie kindly voluntered to speak part of the time that night. And very ably and acceptably she did so. Modest and unassuming, but earnest and full of feeling. Her address was well received and produced a good effect. She has good command of language, reasons out her subject well, and abounds in apt illustrations. I predict that besides Sisters Stevens and Richardson, we shall ere long have a third lady lecturer in the field. Sister Guthrie has promised to lecture in Ventura, and other parts of the county, shortly, and to deliver an address to the Springville Band of Hope next Sunday. I hope at Grand Lodge, next Oct., she will make the acquaintance of, and be heard by many. Meeting at Saticoy, fair in numbers, good interest, lodge not large, but true, and looking for a number of accessions. Lodge lately had successful meeting and a full house. Stores, &c., closed on Sunday.

Mound, a school district three miles from Ventura, has a thriving and most harmonious lodge. Bro. Ben Dudley, W. C. T.; Ex-Assessor Harky and other influential citizens are active members. Called at school, welcomed by Miss Faddis, the teacher, a Good Templar, tho not just now situated so as to be in the lodge, explained Band of Hope work, asked for co-operation which was cheerfully promised, took a vote of the scholars as to how many would join, and found response very general. Appointed recess next morning for the purpose of organizing.

At night all the neighborhood seemed to be out. Visitors for Hueneme and Ventura Lodges, notably the Alexander brothers and Sisters and Bro. Kelsey who here and at Dist. Lodge rendered such appropriate and excellent music and songs. A first rate program, in which the W. C. T. and Sister Belle Cannon, took part. The lecture was very attentively listened to and a most liberal collection for the Lecture Fund taken up. I want to come here again.

Thursday morning duly organized the Band of Hope with 21 members, Miss Faddis, Supt, it will meet on Sunday afternoons, took names and money for Temperance Literature. Appointed Bro. Harkey agent for Rescue.

Ventura. What a change for the better here during the six years I have known this county seat! When I first lectured it was difficult to get a good hearing or to sustain a Lodge; now the largest church is always well filled; the Lodge is earnest and numbers 96. Bro. Edward Sheridan, Editor of Signal, Democratic paper, his brother Sol., W. Sec. and their father, City Marshal and W. C. T., are members. So are W. W. Weed, Court Reporter, R. R. Tanner, Deputy Post Master, and many others. Gave four addresses at public school; Principal Oliver is member of lodge. Band of Hope, under able superintendency of Sister Bard, (wife of a leading physician, also a member,) prospers and is preparing for a public concert; it numbers over 100. Saloons and stores closed on Sunday.

Appointed Sister Myra Walbridge agent for Rescue.

The Good Templars have a well patronized coffee house, and good sitting room supplied with papers; paying expenses and with "nest egg" in bank. The lady managers have twice taken contract to supply refreshments at race track and succeeded in preventing liquor selling, and adding to treasury.

Had good meeting in Presbyterian church; fine singing by choir of Good Templars. W. C. T. presided, and Pastor, Rev. Mr. Seward, just from the East, earnest Good Templar, assisted; as did Bro. Peters, Pastor M. E. Church.

C. N. GOULDING.

Should you examine the map you would discover that Henly (where I am at present) is in Siskiyou County 442 miles from San Francisco, 133 miles from Redding, and 18 miles above Yreka the county seat, so much for location. I left Redding Saturday morning 19th and arrived at Berryvale or Stranbery 8, A. M. Sunday morning 20th, Berryvale is a large place, five houses, several stables I found upon inquiry that four persons had turned out the night before to hear me lecture, and an old lady had sent word that she would have been present but was taken with a "misery" in her side, I was sorry to disappoint them but couldnt help it —I lectured in Edgewood on the 21st, had 12 interested spectators. Gazelle was my next appointment I found only one house in the place, but the lumber is on the ground and they propose building another house in the spring, I didnt orate at Gazelle.

It is said of John B. Gough that in one place where he lectured, he had an audience of three, when questioned regarding the audience he said "God was there, the Devil was there, and I was there," an unregenerated mind would conclude that Gough had matters his own way.

I lecture here to-night 25th also 26th, and have rearranged the routes in the county so as to be in Yreka, Fort Jones and Etna on Sunday. My experience has taught me that in order to reach the people. and present the claims of our order, the grand Lecturer must go where the people are, and it is a waste of time and money to attempt to lecture in sparsely settled communities especially at this time of year, in this county

I shall report every two weeks, and will do what can be done to advance the claims of our Order; as you are aware, this is the stronghold of the "Champions and Sons.

I find that some of our lecturers have deemed it necessary to abuse the Champions of Honor, Sons of Temperance, Odd Fellows, Masons, Red men, etc.

No good can possibly come from any such course, only harm. We have a foe, strong, resolute and determined, and to overthrow king alcohol should be our only aim and purpose.

Oh yes, I had thought of mentioning the weather but will omit the same, only remarking that there is no sign of a thaw out as yet.

Henly, Nov. 25, 1881.

W. CROWHURST.

At 27th, St, M. E. church, Rev. Geo. Beatty preached a sermon containing some very strong arguments in favor of personal abstinence, so that no doubt could exist as to where the Brother stands in our cause.

On Monday night, installed the Officers of International Lodge. Bro. Kerr is doing good work as Lodge Deputy. An excellent program was well carried out. Rescue, temperance tracts and pamphlets were distributed to all present. One of the prize compositions on the "Twin Evils" was recited by a little girl of 13 years, who will be initiated next week. Thanks to Dr. McDonald for the prize composition and for bringing that little girl to show what may be done by proper and well directed effort. Quite a number of names were added to the lodge.

Rain, snow, hail, darkness cold and an impossible program ! Such was our introduction to Calaveras county. Hence we had no meetings at Sheep Ranche, El Dorado, Railroad Flat nor West Point' On about seven hours notice, we lectured in Cong. Church at Mokelumne Hill to a small though appreciative audience. Went to Gleucoe and lectured one night—could not stop two nights except by having private conveyance—and organized Garfield Lodge with 21 charter members, Thomas Cox L. D.

Announced for two nights work at Gwin's mine. A free-love party on the first night, and a Thanksgiving party on the second, prevented any meeting for temperance. The program up to date has been one that could not be carried out, except at an enormous expense, and in one or two instances, not at all; no conveyance being obtainable "for love nor money." Programs should be arranged with reference to economy of time and money. We come now to a part arranged by the G. W. C. T,, a former resident of the county. From this on, we are "safe." By agreement with Mokelumne Folks, Friday night was cancelled there, and we journeyed to West Point, where in spite of thanksgiving ball effects, we organized West Point lodge with 21 charter members—Harry Greve, Lodge Deputy. Mrs. Haskins and family were very kind in several ways. The thanks of our order are due and hereby tendered to them.

Mokelumne Hill, Nov. 26, 1881.

H. R. HUGHES.

Grizzy Flat Nov. 22nd 1881.

Editor Rescue:—Left home the 16, bound for Eldorado Co. At Mokelumne Hill, no Lodge on account of storm; met a few brothers and their W. C. T. Bro Page, who is determined to prosecute violators of the Sunday Law. Had a fair audience at Sutter Creek the 17, and the same may be said of Live Oak, and Oleta, on the 18, and 19th. The 20th at Mt. Aukumn, I was surprised to find the School house filled with Good Templars in their Regalia, and discovered that Live Oak Lodge had come over in a body, and Oleta Lodge had also a good delegation. On the 21, they favored me with another visit, and assisted me to organize Mt. Aukum Lodge, with 20 charter members Charles Richardson W. C. T. Susan Choate L. D. I come back next Sunday to lecture and complete the organization. When Good Templars drive 10 miles, these cold nights and the same to return, two evenings in succession, It shows their zeal ardor and love for the cause and Order. Hugh R. Hughes.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

Sutter and Yuba District Lodge meets at Yuba City Dec. 7th at 10 A. M. Public meeting in the evening. Come everybody.

FARM FOR SALE.

Nine miles from Los Angeles Court House between Florence and Downey, bounded by Anaheim Railroad and Old San Gabriel river, 270 acres with 270 shares of water in San Antonio Irrigating Company. Orchard of over 2,000 apple and pear trees. House of four rooms, barn, etc,. Splendid opening for large dairy business; 100 cows could be milked at a gross profit of five thousand dollars per annum.

Lands specially suitable for alfalfa—10 tons per acre per anumn. A large portion of the land particularly adapted for the plum, prune, apricot, chestnut, etc., also for Muscat grapes for raisin making which would be very profitable. The whole Farm is fenced and cross fenced, and being well supplied with water, it is one of the very best Stock Ranches in Southern California. There are a few acres in Willows, Forest Grove Station is at corner and School adjoins.

$12,000 was refused for this property by late owner, who valued it at $$18,000. It was sold under foreclosure mortgage and is now offered for $10,000 cash. Date of redemption is past; and an absolute and perfect title will be given.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.—H H Peckinpah. Many Good Templars and others will hear with extreme regret that Bro. H H Peckinpah, District Deputy of Sonoma Co., died Dec. 2, at Guerneville. That community and the order generally have suffered a serious loss. His place as a citizen and a helper of all good institutions will be hard to fill. No particulars have been as yet received.

DIED.—Near Madison, Yolo county, Cal, Nov. 16, 1881, James McHenry, after a long and tedious illness.

Brother McHenry was one of the charter members of Madison Lodge; No. 463, I. O. G. T., organized Aug. 14, 1881, and was the first to be called from our Lodge, as we trust to the Lodge above.

S. WOOTTEN,
F. O. SWINNEY,
L. C. HAWK. } Committee.

DIED.—In Monterey, Nov. 30, of disease of the heart, Col. W. H. Clipperton, editor of the Monterey Californian, a native of England, aged 43 years.

He was a participant in the Crimean war, and Captain in the First Michigan Cavalry in our late civil war; and at the time of his sudden death was a member of Monterey Lodge, I. O. G. T. Was buried at Salinas by the Order and the Salinas Engine Company. The mother and sister of deceased are in Australia, and a brother, Captain Clipperton, is British Consul at Philadelphia. He was of a tender, kind and generous nature, and in the absence of relatives many warm friends gave, at his funeral, testimony of their loving appreciation of his many good qualities.

Calaveras County which a year ago reported 6 lodges has now 17.

THE Alliance News has a list of about 300 subscriptions and donations for the week ending Sept. 17, 1881. The first seven amount to $2175. The others run from$25 down to $1. Mostly $5 and $2.50,

IN England the food of the people reaches the consumer at an advance of 28 per cent on the net cost. The drink bill charges 196 per cent profit on net cost without counting anything for adulterations.

IT is impolite to speak disrespectly of a man for selling liquor and killing lots of his neighbors: but you can blackguard him to any extent for being a Democrat or a Greenbacker; no fanaticism in that.

International Lodge had a time of refreshing on Monday last: more than 200 present and 13 Lodges represented by fraternal visitors, 7 initiation and 9 last week keep the roll growing.

The city council of Los Angeles a few days ago, voted 6 to 4 to enforce the Sunday law, but later decided 7 to 3 not to do so. The weather is variable, and so are other things.

—"Queer people, those Kansans," says the Cleveland Herald. "They get rid of a man who borrows a horse in an hours time, and yet it takes them over a year to make up their minds how to dispose of a man who buys up a legislature."

OUR UNION makes kindly mention of the RESCUE as a good friend of the W. C. T. U,. If any advocate or friend of temperance fails at all to render to that organization and its membership the most cordial help and sympathy and encouragement, he surely fails in his duty to our cause and lessens his influence for good.

THE argument used to be made, that legal prohibition would disband the Good Templars, and Michigan and Ohio were taken as examples. But it was the five cent capita tax that slaughtered them. In Maine they are as lively as ever; their finances in good condition, with 20,000 members and 5,000 juveniles.

LOMPOC.—The San Louis Obispo Tribune says every available acre of land in the vicinity of Lompoc and Los Alamos has been either rented or purchased lately, which was never before the case. Parties 20 miles from a landing are giving one-forth of the crop for rent, and thousands more acres could be similarly rented on same terms, if to be had; which is news we all like to hear as it bodes good to Lompoc.

IN 1879 the sugar used in the U. S. was 743,174 tons which is nearly 30 lbs for every individual. Of this enormous quantity only about 110.000 tons were produced in the country, the remainder being imported. And there ought to be at least a million tons raised in the various districts favorable to the growth of sorghum, cane and beets.

THE WAY of the (Maine law) transgressor is hard; in six years he has paid in Cumberland county fines and costs amounting to $125,231 and the barrels which contained his confiscated liquors sold after spilling their contents for $7.130. After paying all expenses the county was $58.400 ahead, besides preserving the lives and properties of its citizens.

THE SCOTTISH TEMPERANCE LEAGUE has 400 societies with 120,000 members and employs 8 agent lecturers right along. That is because the American cheap john never got to be a member of that society. The lowest fee for membership is 62½ cents a year: cheap john would have voted off the 60 and left it at 2½ and then when the membership had gone down to about 1200. would have reported the "work progressing splendidly."

COL. GOULDING.—The Yreka Tribune and Journal both give complimentary notices of Col. Goulding's lectures there; and the former devotes nearly a column and a half to the arguments made.

PASKENTA Lodge passed resolutions Nov. 26th, calling upon all Good Templars to use every effort to enforce every section of said law as rigidly as possible, and when an action is commenced against an offender, that the person commencing such action shall make a demand on the justice of the peace before whom such action is brought, to notify the District Attorney to appear before such justice and prosecute such case, either in person or by deputy.

J. R. Wilson, W. S.

BROTHER HANSON of Forestville calls for some one to write a stinging rebuke of the iniquitous practice of clothing young girls in short and insufficient dresses in this cold weather and sacrificing them on the altar of fashion. The only solution to be offered from here is to commend Bro. H. to get them all to take the RESCUE, read it regularly and get cured of all their bad habits, and this thotless but serious sin among the rest. Looking at the wretched mail list of this paper for Forestville, the only wonder is that things are not seven times worse there.

OUTRAGES of the most fiendish and horrible character are reported every few days committed by drunken men. It is a fact that where the grogshop is plying its infernal traffic, little girls of seven years of age and upwards need a constant guardianship to protect them from the assaults of the crazed frequenter of tho bar-room. The last case so far is of a married man 48 years of age and the details are said to be too horrible for publication; still, we must have men licensed to produce just such crimes as this and a dozen murders and 250 untimely deaths every day.

A PROFESSOR Lockwood in Ripon, Wis, has mounted his Rosinante and opened a Don Quijote campaign against prohibition. The Free Press says it would reply, only that it knows it wrenches one sadly to kick against nothing. The Professor starts out with the following substitute for prohibition:

* * * place a permanent restraint upon man's tendencies to vice, by the evolution of his inner vision, and a true knowledge of the relation existing between his organism, and life and happiness.

If Guiteau is acquitted soon, the Professor will probably start an inner-vision-evolutor factory on a large scale and we shall be astonished at the reformatory results.

COMMON SENSE.—Inconsiderate people are frequently heard speaking of the various movements and propositions of temperance people as rash or unreasonable or impossible or silly. But they should remember that while all classes of people are compelled to admit that the grogshop is the most iniquitous, cruel, bloody, deathdealing, pauperizing curse that ever infested a country; that it is worse every way than war, pestilence and famine combined; yet all the modes of dealing with it except those proposed by the temperance people, have been the ten thousand times refined essence of jibbering folly. Whatever methods have been suggested by opponents of prohibition, whether by scholar or boor, by saint or sinner, by statesman or clown, have without one solitary exception been nothing else that the most chaotic, bedlam-inspired nonsense, and have put upon their authors the indelible stamp of "fool."

They are made of buckskin,
With the fleshy side in,
Embroidered with beads of bright hiouxs.

When out on the warpath the Siouxs
March in single file never by tiouxs
And by "blazing" the trees,
Can return at their ease,
And their way thru the forest n'er liouxs.

All new-fashioned boats he eschiouxs,
And uses the birch bark caniouxs,
They are handy and light,
And, inverted at night,
Give shelter from storms and diouxs.

The principal food of the Siouxs

TEMPERANCE PEOPLE INTEMPERATE.

One of the sins laid at the door of temperance people is, that they are intemperate; not in the use of liquor but in their language. They abuse those who are opposed to them; they will not even give them the credit of being honest, etc. This is one of the points upon which the venerable Chancellor of the University of New York dwells with special emphasis. There is much truth in the charge. We regret it. Abuse is a very poor argument. Every one should be accorded the credit of sincerity if his acts and words coincide. There, are however, several things to be said in extenuation, altho they might with a good deal of propriety be so applied, but to show that temperance people are very much like other folks. Very few men are perfect, or even always considerate either in word or deed. The fact that men take high or strong grounds on the liquor question, does not make them exempt from the frailties or peculiarities of human nature. They are battling with a great sin. It is not reasonable to expect that they will pat on the back the abettors and promoters or even the apologists of this sin, and bid them God speed in the work of death. It is their duty to speak fearlessly and plainly. Plain words are not necessarily abusive words, tho often taken as such. Then again men should not forget the school in which we have been trained. Intemperate as the language of temperance men may be, is it not far less intemperate than the language ordinarily used by the two old political parties in relation to each other? Children are from childhood brought up in the belief that no good thing can be found in the opposing party. * * *

Not one in five hundred but readily concedes that the sin against which we are fighting is the most crying iniquity of the age, but they wish us to handle it as tenderly as we would handle a new-born infant. This can hardly be. We must rebuke the sin. We earnestly desire that this could always be done judiciously. This cannot be expected, however, until we have a more advanced civilization that we now have. But we would remind Dr. Crosby, and all others who charge us with the use of intemperate language, that the merits of a cause are not affected by misjudged words. Our errors are no valid excuse for opposition to temperance principles, and we would suggest if it would not be better for the great cause of humanity that they would labor for the overthrow of the rum demon instead of finding fault with the methods of those who are laboring for that end.—Living Issue.

And our brother might have added, there is no recorded instance in the past 20 years of a temperance advocate having used such intemperate, abusive, unjust, vituperative language as Dr. Crosby used on that occasion; and he used it against a class of men entirely innocent of doing a particle of harm or wrong by the propagation of their principles.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

By far the greater part of the hundred kinds of bitters sold during the past 25 years, have been merely bad whisky slightly doctored, made, purchased, sold and used for exactly the same purposes as other kinds of whisky in nearly all cases; but sometimes tried by innocent invalids as a remedy for disease; in the latter case, and in all cases they have led to more drunkenness. They had from 40 to 50 per cent of alcohol, and were enticing to the whisky trained palate: the most part of them were consumed at the bar of the grogshop.

About seven years ago some one analyzed Walkers Vinegar Bitters, and reported 7 per cent alcohol. Revenue officers had analyzed them before and found that altho no alcohol had been used in their manufacture, some had formed from the partial fermentation of a syrup, which was one of the ingredients, and they freed them from any liability to pay spirit duty.

They contain about the same proportion of alcohol then as ale or beer, but it must be remembered that beer would never have harmed anybody, if only one or two spoonfuls of it could be taken in a day, and if then the patient had to put himself thru a clotheswringer to keep it down. Even if that percentage of alcohol had been purposely put in to preserve the mixture from spoiling, there was no danger whatever of any one getting fond of it or cultivating any closer intimacy with the vinegar bitters than he would with epsom salts.

Therefore the vending of a very repulsive medicine, the taste of which is by no means modified or mollified by a small percentage of alcohol in it, and which no one would ever dream of using as a beverage—has no parallel whatever with the traffic in whisky slightly flavored and called bitters as a blind. It does not seem at all likely that any more harm could arise from the alcohol in those vinegar bitters than from the same proportion put into shoe blacking or white paint. Certainly the design was entirely innocent, and the proprietor has all along been a consistent advocate and exponent of total abstinence.

It is almost a pity to interfere with the laudable industry of peddling round the story that the proprietor of the article in question made a fortune by selling whisky bitters; but when such a story is in the market it is fitting that the exact truth should be known.

HOW ARE WE PAYING OUR NATIONAL DEBT?

[FROM THE MINN. REVIEW.]

The war of rebellion left us a debt of several billions, to the payment of which the national honor was pledged. How to pay this vast sum was a problem for statesmen and financiers to settle. Happily however, experience has proved them equal to the task. Tax the luxuries largely and the necessaries lightly, and in this way raise a revenue sufficient to pay the interest promptly and reduce the principal gradually. This was done, and in this way the liquor traffic in all its departments pays the government the sum of $73,981,561,10 per annum, this being about the average income from the business for several years past. Allowing the debt to be $2,000,000,000 this income would pay the debt in something less than thirty years, and the pressure would scarcely be felt. If nothing further could be said, and no harm come out of this arrangement, there should be, and doubtless would be universal and joyful acquiescence in its adoption. But what are the facts in this case? The liquor traffic thus authorized and practiced by law, and taxed to pay our national debt results in the death of 60,000 American citizens per annum, or about one in every ten minntes killed: or if you please, murdered in and by the trade. Supposing these men to average one hundred and fifty pounds each, and to be sold as other meat is sold in the market, the price would be a trifle more than $8.21 per pound, which would be a very high price for any other kind of pork or flesh, but this seems to be the price fixed upon by our financiers to pay our indebtedness.

To carry out this plan we shall be obliged to murder about 1,620,000 men, or near one-thirtieth part of our present population, about twice as many as were killed on both sides of the war itself. If this were all we should have less to say than we shall say on this subject. But the fact is, we make these men whom we kill in this process pay the most of this money before we kill them. We also generally ruin their reputation, beggar their families, poison their blood, push their poor loathsome bodies into a premature grave, their souls into the presence of God, who says, "No drunkard shall inherit the kingdom of heaven." And further, in order to make the ridiculousness of this whole process to equal its enormity and cruelty, we then pay from our own pockets in maintaining paupers, orphans, poor houses, alms houses, criminal prosecutions, county jails, penitentaries and lawyers' fees, just about as much as we receive from the traffic! Could anything excuse the folly and absurdity of such a scheme? And what must a holy God think of a nation, many of them professed Christians, who by their votes authorize and carry forward this vast work of death?

Strip this case of what is advantageous, and we have the following facts;

1. We murder 60,000 men annually.
2. For this we receive $73,981,561.10.
3. We pay nearly an equal sum as incidental in running the machinery that murders these men.

Can it be possible that this nation will permit this outrage longer to exist? C. HOBART.

Red Wing, Nov. 12, 1881.

WEEK OF PRAYER.

The following program for the Week of Prayer has been issued by the executive committee of the Evangelical Alliance:

"Sunday, January 1st.—Subject for disconrse: 'Renewed Consecration.'

Monday, January 2d.—Thankgiving for the blessings, temporal and spiritual, of the past year, and prayer for their continuance.

Tuesday, January 3d.—Humiliation and confession on account of individual, social and national sins.

Wednesday, January 4th.—Prayers for the blessing of God on his Church and his Word.

Thursday January 5th.—Prayers for the youug and all agencies for Christian training.

Friday, January 6th.—Prayers for the universal prevalence of peace and righteousness,

Saturday, January 7th.—Prayers for Christian missions, the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, and the conversion of the world."

Last year two programs appeared, one without a temperance clause, the other with one interpolated afterward. The above is copied from the Pacific Methodist. If it is correct it is an evidence that the Executive Committee of that Alliance are bigoted enemies of temperance, aud are by no means a proper source to dictate or direct the prayers of a nation which believes in a real and rational God.

They have been most humbly and urgently petitioned and implored year after year by most excellently Christian people to make some recognition of the evils of intemperance, to ask, among the long list of minor objects generally specified, for God's blessing on the efforts made to remove man's greatest curse, satan's most potent weapon against the gospel, in a program which it is proposed to present to the God of heaven; but they have persistently and contemptuously refused for a dozen years to pay the least heed to it.

It is enough to have the devil and his brewers and distillers control our national and state politics; it is too much to ask a Christian people to consent that they shall exercise a supervisory censorship over the national prayers.

Of course those who dont believe in temperance or who think temperance is not a fit subject to be prayed for, will object to these sentiments and will say that you can fill in temperance where you want to and are not prohibited from including it, and that certain clauses in the program may imply what is so carefully omitted. But it cannot be denied (if the above is a true copy) that its authors had more respect in its compilation to the devil's wine interests and beer agencies than they had to Almighty God, and the presentation of such a program as it now stands by the people of this country, while the rumfiend is carrying to hell 100,000 of our people, and of the children of the Sabbath school, and of the church every year, and trampling God's altars under foot everywhere, would be a wholesale, mocking, defying, hypocritical blasphemy.

It is time, and it is to be hoped that the Christian people of this country will next year make out a Christian program that Christian people can use without the brewers and wine guzzlers of Europe and America having any voice or vote or part in its preparation. Better not pray than pray a prayer that denies the truth and offers a lie to God.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

Some time ago, a notice was inserted in the RESCUE, inviting all persons who could and would help the work of the Prohibition Reform Party by lecturing or arranging for lectures, or by organizing prohibition clubs in their respective communities, or in any other way, to send their names to the Secretary, Rev. Geo. Morris, West End, Alameda. A number of persons have already done so, but many places in the state are yet to be heard from. Responses are respectfully and earnestly requested, so that the state central committee may know how best to arrange work for prohibition.

PROGRAM: WEEK OF PRAYER.

Our Union gives the following as the program arranged by a committee of the National W. C. T. U. for observance by the local Unions in connection with the services appointed by the Evl. Alliance:

TOPICS.

Sabbath afternoon, January 1. A gospel meeting with Old Year memories and New Year resolves; pledge and appeals to drinking men.

Monday, January 2, Personal consecration to God and the Temperance cause, and prayer for the present baptism of the Holy Spirit on all our workers.

Tuesday, Jan. 3. Prayer for our Temperance organizations, our unions local, state and national, for wisdom in planning and courage in carrying on our work, for our juvenile work, and all societies not our own, but working with us in a common cause.

Wednesday, Jan. 4. Prayer for the church of God in this and all lands, that to it may come a realization that intemperance is its greatest foe, and that an aroused conscience may quicken it to duty.

Thursday, January 5. Prayer for the homes of the nation—its fatherhood, motherhood, childhood for the young men and women of our people to whose shoulders the government of church and state will soon come, that pure home life may give purity to the nation.

Friday, January 6. Prayer for the political forces of our country, as they stand related to the Temperance reform; for all men in authority; for National and State legislators, and for the voters of the Republic who stand back of all other powers—that these may have that awakening of moral sensibility and power which shall make them faithful to their oath and blind to bribery, and that laws in the interest of virtue, morality and temperance may be made and enforced; also, for the few men in high places who, like Senator Blair, are not ashamed to speak for the truth.

Saturday, January 7. Prayer for drinking men and their families, for reformed men, and all who in their weakness have passed under the curse.

Sunday, January 8. Temperance sermons, addresses, call for new workers, and a collection for temperance workmen, women and money.

STOP THE GAP.

BY THE REV. CHARLES GARRET.

It has been said that only one in ten of the scholars in our Sunday-schools becomes a member of the visible church. Teachers, is this what you contemplate in your self-sacrificing toil. Ministers, is this the end of your labors and prayers, anxiety and care? Can we bear the thot that only one in ten of those for whom we have written and preached and prayed and toiled, should leave the school members of the visible church? The thot should fall on our hearts like a spark from hell! Only one for Christ! Where then are the nine? With more than a mother's anxiety that question should be asked by the Christian church. Here is a young woman who is blessing God for the Sabbath school and for the influence it exerted upon her. But where are her nine companions? Here is a young man rejoicing in the favor of God, but where are the nine lads who used to sit by his side? Some of them thotless and worldly, some of them by and by to have old memories revived, and stand as monuments of mercy; but others, alas! passing from the school to vice, brutality, crime and destruction. Where are the nine? You will find one in that poor creature, with wasted constitution, dying on a workhouse bed and going to the pauper's grave. Where are the nine? You will find another in that brutal wretch who, as his heart broken wife tries to gather a smile on her face and greet him with words of kindness, fells her to the earth, and with oaths and curses, kicks the trembling form he once swore to love and cherish. Where are they? There is one in that guilty creature who stands at the gin palace lying in wait for the passer by. Aye, shrink not back; vile as she now is, she was once a happy child in your school. You took her by the hand, you polished her by your intercourse—you, by your kindness and care, rendered her more womanly, and beautiful and sensitive; and there she is now doing the devil's work and earning the devil's wages. Where are they? There in that poor girl hastening thru your streets, bent upon destruction. Her father loved her as I loved my children, prayed for her as I pray for mine; and when she was born said —this same shall comfort me; and now, sick of a world, which to her eyes seems filled with foes, she leaps from the bridge—

Mad from life's history,
Glad of death's mystery;
Swift to be hurled
Anywhere—anywhere—out of the world!

Where are the nine? In your prisons, in your lunatic asylums, at the hulks and swinging from the gallows! Yes, fellow teachers, tho you have to look at the scene with aching heart and tear filled eyes, there are your scholars. You cared for them and toiled and prayed, and yet the wolf of hell has dragged them to destruction. You say, this is terrible! So it is; so terrible that my lips quiver as I speak. And oh! would to God that it were not true! Would that it could be shown that we had only lost the one and saved the nine!

Would not the shepherd be filled with anxiety if every year his flock was thus thinned by some destroyer? Would not the farmer be startled if only one-tenth of his seed came to perfection? and would he not set himself most carefully to seek a remedy? And shall we be heedless of the terrible loss to which I have shown we are now subjected? No; surely, no. Our love to souls—our love to God—forbids it. Creatures for whom Christ died must not be lost, if there be any possibility of their salvation. I ask, then, as I look at these schools feeding our workhouses and our prisons, whence is this waste? Is there some law of heaven which compels it? No; thank God; no. The declaration of God is clear and full. "It is not the will of your Father in heaven that one of these little ones should perish." That is decisive; and at once the dark fear which had crept around us rolls away. God wills the salvation of every child, and therefore there is no insurmountable difficulty. The cause is from beneath; it can be ascertained, and by the blessing of God, removed. There has been a gap left somewhere, and thru that gap the wolf has entered, and out of that gap the poor lambs have been borne to destruction. What is that gap? You have warned them against the wiles of the devil, against bad books and companions; you have told them to be true, and brave, and honest; but you have not said—"It is not good to drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak."—Templars Standard.

Years and years this same terrible showing has been commented on; and always it is urged that the curse and the cause is drink—and still it is unfashionable to introduce the subject of total abstinence in the pulpit, in the Sabbath school, at the dinner table, in the social party. Fanatical to urge temperance lessons in the public schools, to do anything for temperance. But we may be thankful changes are manifestly taking place: the objectors are becoming fewer and there is a general waking up to the necessity of a temperance education for the young. And let us hope there will be soon no place or time too sacred to warn the coming generation from that awful seine net of Satan which has been sweeping right in the church and carrying away nine of the ten of its children.

Too Radical. It is a fact, said a friend recently that a minister who keeps harping on the use of liquor and tobacco and that kind of thing, dont draw large congregations. You see people tired of it and drop off. Now, there is Rev. M. C. B——, for instance: his talents and personal qualities should secure him a large, a very large following; but you see his church is not nearly so well filled as you would expect, because he wont desist from introducing those subjects into his addresses." It is a pity that the Savior of the world had not received such a hint as that in time; he might have been a much greater favorite with his hearers and secured the friendship and cooperation of the Pharisees and priests and the money changers in the temple. But he would persist in talking about things which people did not applaud and he had small congregations as a general thing. Still his preaching was a success in the long run.

The boss again reigns at Washington; the spoils system has full sway; and when the first citizens of the republic are at the capital, successfully lobbying for this or that friend, it is time for civil service reformers, to go to work.—Ex.

NEW TEMPERANCE TALES.

ONLY TEN CENTS EACH.

"FIFE AND DRUM" SERIES.

The National Temperance Society has commenced the publication of a series of cheap and thrilling Temperance Tales, from the pens of some of the best writers on temperance in the world, giving a greater amount of valuable and interesting matter than ever before, for the small sum of ten cents. The object is to supply a great amount of matter calculated to aid the advancement of the cause of temperance, for a very small sum of money. These stories will be adapted to home and fireside reading, the railroad train, and for the young in every class of the community. Four of these are now ready, and others will soon be added to the list. The following have already been published:

"Fife and Drum," by Mary Dwinell Chellis. (12mo., 79 pages) This is a new and thrilling story, with an excellent spirit and moral instruction, from the pen of this well-known and brilliant writer.

"The Quaker's Rule," by Earnest Gilmore. (12mo., 72 pages) This new work is fully equal to the other writings of this talented author, and is worthy of a place in every family.

"Drinking Jack," and other stories, by Mary Dwinell Chellis. (12mo., 78 pages) This popular author has few equals, and these stories are among her best. We cordially commend them to all friends of temperance, and the right training of children. Let the friends of temperance everywhere unite and send for a number of copies of these interesting stories, and circulate them in every community.

The friends of temperance who desire to see the reform progress, and to have a literature accessible to all classes of the community, have now an opportunity to carry out their wishes. We ask all the friends of the cause to aid us in the circulation of this class of literature. Send along the dimes.

GRAND LECTURERS.—The Grand Lodge of California has now in its employ six Grand Lecturers who are devoting their entire time and energies in behalf of the Order. Mrs Emily P. Stevens is laboring in San Joaquin, Wm. Crowhurst in Calaveras, Hugh R Hughes in El Dorado, C. N. Goulding in Siskiyou, James W. Webb in SanDiego and Will C King in Tulare county. Public lectures are being delivered, lodges are receiving visits and instructions, new lodges and Bands of Hope are being organized and temperance work generally and vigorously prosecuted. To date twenty new lodges have been instituted.

PARKER'S HISTORY OF THE I. O. G. T.—Word

comes from the publisher of the authorized history of the I. O. G. T., Rev. T. F. Parker of Pennsylvania that the first edition of the book has left the press, and will be delivered within a fortnight. The book is much more elaborate than was at first contemplated, and comprises a volume of 311 pages, embellished with cuts of the various R. W. G. T.s and other prominent members of the Order. The book will acceptably fill a long felt want, and should be in the hands of every member of the Order, who is at all interested in its rise and remarkable progress, and all are, or should be. The book will be bound in two styles, cloth and half morocco. The cloth edition will be sold at $1.25 and the morocco at $1.75. The G. W. S. will receive and fill orders for this truly valuable work at the publisher's prices as above. Cash must accompany orders to receive attention. Orders will be received and filed at once, and filled in the order of their reception upon receipt of the first invoice of the new book.

Receipts of Evening.—A new edition of the W. F. S. Receipts of evening account book has just been issued. The book is neatly ruled, handsomely printed and substantially bound in cloth sides. Each page is so ruled as to contain the entire receipts of the evening as paid in by the members under appropriate headings, a recapitulation by the W. F. S. and blank for the W. T.'s receipts, thus showing the entire financial transactions of the lodge for each evening upon one page. Price as usual $1.50 or $2.50 for the set of receipts of evening and constitution roll books. These books greatly simplify the W. F. S. work and are highly commended by all lodges having them in use. They can be procured as supplies from the Grand Lodge office.

Personal.—During the week the Grand Lodge office was favored with a passing call from William H Barnes, G. M. W. of the Grand Lodge of California, A. O. U. W. Bro. Barnes is an entertaining and pleasing speaker in the general cause of fraternity. and is one of the few who can advocate alike the cause of all, supplementing his words by his acts. It is a source of gratification to note tle continued increase and prosperity of the Order over which he presides, and the high moral ground taken by it. Bro. Barnes is also the editor of the popular department known as the "Fraternal Index" in the Sunday edition of the Daily Morning Call in which is epitomized the progress of all fraternal organizations.

Corrected.—The Lodge Directory appears in this issue corrected to date. If any errors or omissions are found to exist they should be promptly reported te the G. W. S. who will endeavor to rectify them.

Gleanings.—Bro. W. J. Stockton L. D., of Central Point Lodge No. 298 writes "we are trying our hand on the Sabbath breakers and intend to set an example for the larger places.....Independent Lodge No. 119 of College City operates in a community in which intoxicants are not permitted to be sold and the L. D., Prof W. H. Reardon reports the Lodge as fully alive with interesting meetings. .....Prohibition Lodge No. 412 of Oakland is forging ahead in the good work and its W. C. T. Bro. J. A. Fairbanks sends cheering reports from a prosperous Lodge. The Lodge proposes to inaugurate a series of public Sunday evening meetings in connection with the local churches.....Donner Lake Lodge No. 304 of Truckee, which recently lost its Hall and property by the conflagration which consumed the greater portion of the town has risen, Phoenix like, and is on the road to prosperity. The L. D, Bro. Wm Douglass reports the leasing of a new hall 27by 50 feet with an ante room added, which it is proposed to furnish nicely and make "Old Donner" what it once was. Propositions are being received and all looks encouraging once more .....'"Nov 20th" writes Bro. M. F. Quinn of El Monte No. 258, "the Sunday law was respected. The Good Templars and Churches combined and notice was given of the intention to enforce the law. So far the first time in the history of this place, all saloons, whisky shops and stores were closed..... ',Ceres Lodge No. 109 is doing very well and we hope to make the present a lively term. The only liquor shop in Ceres closes its doors now upon the Sabbath thereby showing its disposition to be law abiding "is what the L. D., Bro. P. W. Cook writes." .....Bro. J. E, Murphy L. D. of Vesper Lodge No. 268 Guadalupe reports the stores and saloons all over his county, Santa Barbara, now closing upon Sunday: And he adds, "those who do not close will be made to, as knowing we are right, we intend going ahead".....The L. D. of International Lodge No. 291 of San Francisco, Bro. David Kerr, is in high feathers over the success of his Lodge and has good reason to be as he reports 15 propositions and 9 candidates initiated as one evenings work recently. Also a visitation from other Lodges at a later meeting when there were present 190 members of the Order in regalias .....San Luis Obispo Lodge No. 144 had 150 of its members present on installation night and enjoyed a good time. The meetings are all well attended and the good work is being prosecuted with satisfactory results. So writes the L. D. Bro. W. P. Barnett....

LOS ANGELES.

A few days ago it was reported that the city council of Los Angeles had decided to enforce the Sunday law. That looked as if that city was reaching out for a higher and better condition, moral and financial. It gave some encouragement to believe the city of the angels was going to move towards driving out the augels of death and vice and pauperism that are the only hindrance to its being an earthly paradise in every respect. It gave some promise to incoming worthy settlers that they might select Los Angeles for their future homes, with a hope that they and their children there, would live under good wholesome laws and customs and have their homes protected.

But the decision has been most unfortunately revoked, and right after that we read of two shooting scrapes occurring there on last Thursday. If Los Angeles desires to keep good citizens from coming there, and to induce her many present good citizens to move out, one good step has been taken in that direction.

TEMPERANCE ALL THRU.

I am a little bewildered at the logic of that brother who ordered his Advocate stopped, with the triumphant explanation: "I am temperance all thru, and dont need it."

I am a business man all thru, so stop my market reports and bulletins, and commercial publications of all kinds.

"I don't need them."

I have been over the road a thousand times, so "I dont need my eyes, put them out." I know every step of the path, and have trodden in its winding course again and again. What if the night is pitchy dark ? I "don't need" a lantern. Put it out.

No, I am a temperance man "all thru." I dont need a paper to bring me intelligence of the cause I love so well; I dont need a paper to lend to my intemperate neighbor, and help along the cause a little, I dont need to do anything to prove my love for the cause, I love it so profoundly! I "dont need" to make any sacrifices to sustain the interests of temperance literature for the benefit of those who are not yet temperance men "all thru. Oh no, I have such a marvelous temperance faith that I do not need to make any sign or expression of it. My faith is good enough without works! [Rev. A. P. Burgess.—Prohibitionist.

Wernersville, Pa.

I was greatly pleased to receive your letter of late date, giving me a few encouraging words. I find it much easier to find those who will denounce one for attacking the popular profession than will commend him, no matter how convincing his arguments may be, or overwhelming the facts that may be stated. For nearly twenty-five years I have labored in the cause of temperance, but latterly have rather centered my efforts in an attack on the greatest stronghold of intemperance, the medical profession. It seems to me that as long as the physicians who are supposed to represent scientific truth, consider alcohol necessary to the healing of the sick, those who are neither sick nor well will prescribe it for themselves, and drunkenness will result. I feel confident that the next important step of the temperance reformation is to insist upon abstinence from alcoholic medicines, as well as alcoholic beverages. But here again we will be met by an inconsistency. If it is right and proper to abstain from alcohol as a medicine, it is equally important to abstain from arsenic, strychnine, prussic acid and the other deadly agents of the pharmacopea.

Indeed I assert that the whole system of medication as it now exists, must be overthrown before the temperance reformation shall have attained to a complete success. Twenty-five years ago I believed that alcohol was good as a medicine, and occasionally as a beverage; and my first step in the way of reform was a very hesitating one. To-day I am overwhelmingly convinced that it is destructive as a medicine and destructive as a beverage.

I wish you every success in the work in which you are engaged, shall hope to receive your Rescue in exchange for our journal, I think we formerly received it, tho of late I have not seen it. Fraternally yours, Robert Walter.

During the four years of our late war, 300,000 fell in the defense of our country. During the sixteen years that have since elapsed, more than four times that number have fallen victims to the avarice of King Alcohol.

The war cost us $3,000,000,000. The direct cost of alcohol, to say nothing of the indirect loss, during the sixteen years that have followed, has been eleven thousand millions, or nearly four times as much as the war cost us.

During that sixteen years, 800,000 have been dropped from the church through the use of alchhol to say nothing of the many times that number who would have come into the church but for strong drink. In that time, more than a million of criminals have been the direct result of this traffic. It has made over sixteen hundred thousand paupers to be supported by the industry of other people. It has done more to corrupt the public, than all other causes combined.—Alert.

"Adulterations in food and drink are almost too common to attract notice nowadays. The sudden death of the leaders of the orchestra in two large beer halls in New York, however, has spread dismay among the patrons of the establishment, as the men were in good health, but succumbed suddenly to Bright's disease, due, the physicians said, to a free use of beer. Good beer is a healthy beverage; but good beer is very scarce in these days."—Chronicle.

Another way of putting the last sentence is "good diluted poison is a healthy beverage; but good diluted poison is very scarce these days." The only quality in beer that induces any person to drink it is its alcohol which never can be anything but a deadly poison, either in its purity or diluted with water and drugs.

Bro. A. D. Boren writing from San Bernardino says that the Southern hotel and all the merchants there obey the law and close on Sunday. Judge Morrison's decision has had a good influence; even the saloon keepers agree to close if the law is impartially enforced. Bro. B. was handed some blank complaints, but says they are not needed but had better be used in Los Angeles and San Francisco: says temperance and religion have no affinity with saloons and complaints should be made and officers obliged to do their sworn duty.

The $1,000 and gold medals given by Dr. R. H. McDonald, president of the Pacific bank to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of California for distribution in the public schools of San Francisco for the best essays upon the Twin evils, Intemperance and Tobacco, will be presented at the Presbyterian Tabernacle, Tyler St., between Taylor and Jones streets on Friday evening Dec. 9th at 7:30 oclock. Admission free. Interesting program arranged. All are cordially invited. Doors open at 7

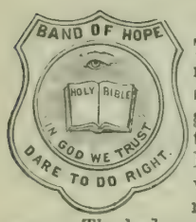
Hillsboro Oregon Nov, 26th,

We desire to say from this portion of the great field of temperance effort that our cause is holding its own with us; but there should be a greater interest taken in the work. Just here we are doing well. Our Lodge No. 17 has 122 members in good standing. Great help is expected when Col. Long arrives: shall then try to organize 5 new lodges in this County (Washington). In Hillsboro we unfortunately have 6 saloons and a drug store which latter in Oregon is the same thing.

Forest Grove No. 150 is also doing well and adding its quota to the great sum of the work necessary to be done to redeem this world from the dominion of the great overshadowing evil. T.



"Rex Ringgold's School, or the Imperial Club" is the title of a new book published by the Nat. Temp. Society. Price $1,25. It is a good work fully illustrating the character of a young man from childhood. His early years being sadly neglected he was on the downward path, the road which leads to destruction. Being rescued in time by a good christian gentleman, he immediately evinced a strong desire to lead a better life; and it was thru his aid and influence that many of his former associates were also placed upon the right track, the road which leads to success and happiness.

Joseph G. Mysell, of San Francisco, and T. J. Sutton, San Jose, are agents for the Rescue.

A few copies of the Proceedings of the recent National Temperance Convention at Saratoga, for sale at this office, 25 cents each; sent free by mail. Every Good Templar ought to have one.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the G. W. C. T., Robert Thompson, 1,531 Golden Gate Avenue, or the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., or Geo. B. Katzenstein, 328 J street, Sacramento.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

THE ALRATROSS.

That is a bird which no inducement will ever tempt to emigrate to San Francisco alive. The albatross proper is never found in the northern hemisphere, nor near the equator, altho in the North Pacific there is a large black bird which resembles it a good deal in all but its color; but this kind exists also in the Southern seas and has been by sailors harnessed to the name "cape hen," without regard to its sex.

The albatross has probably a greater spread of wing than any other bird, being fitted with a long, hollow extra bone and joint in the wing. A great many sailors, mates and captains, with whom I conversed upon this subject years and years ago, had every one of them caught an albatross that measured exactly 18 feet from tip to tip of the wings, and it became of course a conviction with me that my sea life could never be more than half a success till I should catch an albatross that spread out 18 feet of canvass, and if possible a few inches more. It became an ambition to catch an 18 feet 3 albatross and have him stuffed as a family trophy.

My day came in time to see these magnificent birds sailing so grandly and gallantly upon the chariot of the winds.

For days and weeks they keep company with a ship, and there can be no doubt that the same ones follow a ship 1000 or 1500 miles at times till it gets too warm for them to continue farther. So long as it blows from a gale down to a four knot breeze, the albatross never beats the air, never flies; he soars or scales, with his wings spread out to their utmost reach, and steering with his tail feathers, he poises and keeps himself right above the passengers on the quarter deck, sees what is going on with an eye enquiring for fat or meat or anything thrown overboard from the cooks department, dropping astern a few yards; then by merely canting himself at a little different angle to the wind, he shoots upward and away 200 yards to leeward, then with wondrous velocity he makes a majestic swoop downwards and forward reaching away a quarter mile ahead of the ship and almost down to the water's edge. There with a motion as graceful as the play of the swallow, one wing is elevated, and away he goes up again with the speed almost of an arrow, and careers above and around the ship, sometimes but a few feet above, sometimes 200 or 300 feet up, going all day thru his routine of exercise; a grand sweep to leeward and up, up, up, and falling behind, then a shoot ahead and to windward and down and up again—and all this repeated from morn till eve without one beat or stroke of his wings; all this acrobatic performance executed by presenting wings and tail and body at different angles to the wind and sweeping the air in any direction with seemingly equal facility with or against the wind, and never a motion of the wings except a slight canting of their surface.

During all these most graceful and most puzzling movements and gyrations the bird has a keen eye to business: a little piece of pork or fat, a chip or rag, or even a bucket of water thrown overboard will at once bring him to investigate; the moment one albatross makes a dip for anything, every other one in sight will make for it at the same moment, no matter how far away and will endeavor to establish a squatter's title to whatever spoil there may be in the bonanza discovered. When the Albatross alights he pushes out his great No. 16 web feet ahead of him to slow his motion, folds away his long wings and becomes a less bird than a goose; being long feathered and very lean, he is not half the weight of one.

When he rises out of the water, he uses both feet and wings to get a start, striking very quickly and powerfully with the feet about a dozen times till the wings catch the wind. In calms they are mostly seated on the water talking politics or something like it; when the ship fans away from them they will get up and fly to overtake her and again alight: when anything is thrown over they fight for the pieces in a selfish and undignified manner: and they can dive several feet under too, in search of niceties that are sinking. In calms or light winds they are quite easily caught with a fishhook baited with a piece of pork which they alighting grab for with avidity; hauling them in, they brace their feet against the water and it requires a strong pull to get them.

It was a serious disappointment to me to only catch 8 or 9 ft. albatrosses; it gave me an unpleasant feeling of inferiority to be only able to tell of a 9 ft. albatross against other people's 18. So I was always on the look out for my prize bird; the idea of having to splice on 9 ft. or any feet to my story, was not satisfactory. At last in the vicinity of the Crozet Islands, and in the far South where these and other birds were numerous, my hoped for 18 feet story hero was espied. My anxious hopes were perhaps to be realized. There was a patriarchal old giant, so much beyond the ordinary as to seem of another species. The tempting hook was soon out, and the occasion favorable; half a dozen birds made a rush for it, but by a little partiality in favor of the big fellow, he was hooked and my 18 feet standard of reputation established. I have before and since seen vast numbers of albatrosses in their cruising grounds all round the world, and that specimen seemed larger than any other ever met with. I would place no confidence whatever, in any report of one that went 6 inches beyond this; but all the stretching we could put on that poor fellow without dislocating his means of livelihood, only spread him out to 11 ft. 2 inches, or 12 ft. 2 in.; cannot remember surely which, but am pretty positive it was the former.

But since then, lots of people have confidently assured me, that they have several times caught 18 feet specimens; how they got the other seven feet is a mystery, I have offered $50 for a specimen, but was never favored. The bill of this bird is about 4 or perhaps 5 inches long, and the upper jaw is nearly an inch longer that the lower, and the end is bent at a right angle, shutting down over and beyond the lower. When you haul one on board, beware of getting a rap from either his elbows or his beak. My prisoners were always released after measurement and inspection; but cruel people kill them and use the beautiful soft pink skin of their feet for tobacco pouches. What a degradation of a magnificent bird.

FOOTPRINTS OF A SAINT.

INTEMPERANCE is a hydra with a hundred heads. She never stalks abroad, unaccompanied by impurity, anger and the most infamous profligacies.—St. Chrysostom.

That was the written opinion of John Chrysostomos, an eminent Christian scholar, preacher, orator, biblical student, writer and bishop, who died 1474 years ago. His career as a bishop was marked by an economical management of the church revenues, and an overflowing, abundant, helping charity to the poor; and he made earnest efforts to reform the already dissolute and vicious habits of the clergy.

His honesty, purity and virtue, excited envy; and his outspoken condemnation of vice, made him the subject of persecution; he died in old age, while being driven on foot and bareheaded, to a distant place of exile, to which he had been condemned by his enemies. After he was dead, the church discovered that he was a saint and canonized him; but that did not help him any; his canonization papers were not of as much value to him, as a ten cent meal ticket is to a live man.

But what does especial honor to his memory here, and we have every reason to believe makes him a prince in heaven, is the following record which he lived.

"He was a lovable, manly Christian, hating lies, worldliness, hypocrisy and all manner of untruthfulness, with that honest warmth of temper, which all vigorous people relish." That is what the great Wm. Chambers says of him, and it is doubtful if a conference of the most learned men of the age, could with a months labor, compile a grander, no bler description of a grandly noble man.

He was a lovable manly Christian, — hating lies, worldliness, hypocrisy and all manner of untruthfulness. Every young person ought to write that out and keep it where it will be frequently in sight as a reminder of the model by which he or she ought to fashion a character. Whoever shall truly deserve to have that record written of him, will have lived a grand success, and inscribed in the book of this world's history one of its most glorious pages.

Beside such a record all the triumphs of the hero characters that have sought human praise and glory in the fields of cruel bloody war and overreaching statesmanship and tricky politics and polished scholarship and all exploring science are poor and empty and insignificant.

And still his example is no impossible one to follow: every one of you can deserve all that is expressed in the eulogy above; and it requires no sacrifice, demands no cross to do so. Look at it again, and see if there is any word or part of it you can afford to dispense with in the character model you are are going to build; not one; you will confess that you ought to live entirely up to it; how easy it is, and what a grand prize is to be won by doing so. What a lamentable, irreparable loss to come short of it.

This great model man and saint hated intemperance too; not with a faint half heartd, whining, double-meaning, compromising lack of approval; but he denounced it with an extraordinary vigor of feeling and language. He hated lies and hypocrisy and he loved his God and his fellow man. You can be lieve him and the Bible in preference to the wicked unfortunates and mischief makers who tell you that the use of depraving wine was ever allowed or approved by God's true servants of old.

If all the members of our Bands of Hope and temperance organizations, male and female, would train quite up to the standard of character proposed, the conquest of the whole world to virtue, peace and godliness would be an easy task. We should be the most powerful army the world has ever seen, and the coming of the kingdom would be realized.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPT.

MURPHYS, Calaveras Co., Nov. 25, 1881.

Have mailed this evening 1427 Band of Hope badges, filling 37 orders and wish to address a word of caution to all Supts of Bands. These badges, altho furnished to all bands in this jurisdiction free, are paid for by the Grand Lodge and cost quite a handsome sum each year. Now will you not each make it a special charge to childreu under your care to be just as careful of their badges as if they had bought and paid for them. It is quite a prevalent idea among children that what comes to them free of cost can be replaced in the same way if lost or destroyed, and hence it is no matter how it may be treated.

It is very natural for children to feel thus; many older people learn to prize blessings by being forced to work for them. But I speak of this that adults in charge may impress it upon all children when their badges are given to them, that they must be careful and preserve them.

The Band of Hope is assuming an importance, which argues well for the advancement of the temperance cause. To traiu the youth of our state in the principles and practice of temperance, is laying a solid foundation for a perfect structure a few years hence. When our Band of Hope boys are men, they will be thoroly imbued with temperance, not only in habits, but in principles; and will have an answer to give to every scoffer; "a reason for the faith that is in them;" and tho the work of educa ting and leading them may be arduous, when they shall shortly step upon the stage of action, presenting, as they surely will, an almost unbroken phalanx, to reinforce the armies battling the Rum Traffic, then they, who now are sowing, it may be, in tears, shall reap in joy. One immortal soul saved from destruction, is well worth the sacrifice of a life time; and when, by the same exertions, we can influence not one alone, but many, for good and right, let us with renewed courage labor on. There is no work which will yield so rich a harvest as that of educating the young. Then let us freely give our time, our strength and our influence to this task, remembering that those who faint not "shall reap in due season."

One suggestive feature of the work as reported by lecturers is this; many men who have used tobacco for long years are giving it up for the sake of the boys. Men who are willing to sacrifice for the good of others, that which they regard as a comfort, carry a vast influence with them; and even boys and girls are quick to see and appreciate it. Our Savior says that no man who leaves lands or home for his sake shall lose his reward, and he will not forget those who having been slaves to tobacco for years, at last burst their chains and deny themselves for the sake of "these little ones."

It is important that this movement should extend also to young men. Many of them are imbued with the idea that the band of Hope is a baby institution and that to join it is quite beneath their dignity. At a recent meeting of Calaveras D. L., and before a crowded audience a young man in reporting his lodge had the moral courage to say that he belonged to the Band of Hope; and so far from lowering him in the eyes of those present, all respected him for it, especially those who knew that in order to join he had broken himself of two bad habits. Will not other young men follow his example? There is no prouder victory than a conquest achieved over one's own evil tendencies. To stand masters of ourselves, having our appetites, and above all our tongues under subjection is a position that may well command respect. There is no place so exalted that wearing the badge of the Templars Band of Hope will not bring an honor to its occupant. Let all Good Templars then wear this badge, and "dare to do right.

THE SAILOR'S STORY.

I've been fourteen years a sailor, and I've found in all parts of the world I could get along just as well without alcoholic liquors as with them, and better too.

Some years ago, when we lay in Jamaica, several of us were sick with the fever, and among the rest, the second mate. The doctor had given him brandy to keep him up, but I thought it was a queer kind of "keeping up." Why, you see, it stands to reason, that if you heap fuel on the fire, it will burn the faster, and putting the brandy to a fever is just the same kind of a thing. Brandy is more than half alcohol, you know.

Well, the doctor gave him up, and I was set to watch with him. No medicine was left, for it was of no use. Nothing could help him, and I had my directions what to do with the body when he was dead. Towards midnight, he asked for water. I got him the coolest I could find, and gave him all he wanted, and if you'll believe me, in less than three hours he drank three gallons.

The sweat rolled off from him like rain. Then he sank off and I thought sure was gone, but he was sleeping, and as quietly as a child. In the morning, when the doctor came, he asked what time the mate died.

"Won't you go in and look at him?" said I.

He went in and took the mate's hand. "Why," said he, "the man is not dead! He's alive, and doing well! What have you been giving him?

"Water, simply water, and all he wanted of it!" said I.

I don't know as the doctor learned anything from that, but I did, and now no doctor puts alcohol down me, or any of my folks, for a fever, I can tell you! I am a plain, unlettered man, but I know too much to let any doctor burn me up with alcohol.—Selected.

Did the drinker of spirituous liquors ever calculate the cost in dollars and cents? Suppose it costs only twenty cents a day—a very moderate estimate—this amounts to seventy-three dollars a year. In ten years it would amount to $730., and with simple interest added at eight per cent, it would imount to $788.40. Many a man built up a prosperous business and become rich, on a capital much smaller than that. Think of it, young man, you who are just attaining your majority, and remember that if you let the glass alone, you will have, at thirty years of age, nearly $900. more in your pocket than you will have if you drink only in moderation. This is taking merely a dollar and cent view of the subject, leaving the morals of drinking, and the danger of becoming an habitual drunkard, entirely out of the question. Again we say to young men, look at this matter and see if it is not worth thinking about.—Lever.

ONE GLASS OF RUM.

Mr. Barnett, while conducting a temperance meeting related this incident: "What one glass did for a man."

He said he was attending a meeting where temperance experiences were told. One man arose and told what one glass had done for him. He said:

I had a little vessel on the coast: she had four men beside myself. I had my wife and two children on board; the night was stormy, and my brother was to stand watch that night; the seamen prevailed on him to take one glass to help him to perform his duties, but being unaccustomed to liquor, he fell asleep, and in the night I awoke to find my vessel a wreck: took my wife and one of my little ones in my arms, and she took the other, and for hours we battled with the cold waves. After hours of suffering, the waves took my little one from my embrace; then after more hours of suffering the waves swept my other little one from my wife's arms, and our two little dears were lost from us forever. After more battling with the storm and waves, I looked at my wife, and behold she was cold in death. I made my way to the shore, and here I am—my wife, my children and all my earthly possessions lost for 'one glass of rum.' "—Anvil.

DRINK.

I stood by the side of the murderer,
Close on to eternity's brink;
I asked him why his hand shed blood—
He sighed, and answered "Drink."

I stood by the side of the felon dark,
I heard his manacles clink;
I asked him how he came to steal—
He cursed, and answered "Drink."

I stood—but why need I speak thus?
Why waste my pen and ink?
Go, reckon yourself the countless host
Slain by the Demon "Drink."

Think of the numberless broken hearts—
Of the ruined households think—
Of the widows old and weeping wives,
And orp kiled by "Drink!"

Call up the dead from their cold, cold graves,
Summon up memory's link,
And say if a human tongue may tell
The millions lost thru "Drink."

THE LOST ART.

(Translated from the original Chaldean.)

Ages ere Cock Robin died;
Long before to headlong flight
Tom, the piper's boy, did play,
"Over the hills and far away.
Shamgar Nibo Snodgrass bold
Reigned a king in Babel old.
(Other names did Shamgar sport,
So they called him Sham for short.)

Sham, while he was yet a lad,
Studied how to pass the hat.
When upon his throne he sat
None could pass like him the hat.
When his army forth he led,
Sham must needs first pass the hat;
If it conquered, fell or fled,
Sham alike would pass the hat

Came the mail with tidings glad,
Smiling, Sham would pass the hat;
Bad the news, with visage sad,
Sham made haste to pass the hat.
Died a friend and tears were shed,
Sham would weep and pass the hat.
Kitten'd but *Pat Murphy's cat,
Sham was round to pass the hat

Shamgar died. With parting breath,
Fled the art to pass the hat,
Many seek in vain this day;
None, like Sham, can make it pay.
Church and State inquiry spread;
Science gropes in darkness dread;
Trade and learning bate their breath,
Seeking how to pass the hat.

Sam, our uncle, tries his hand,
Granting knaves thruout the land
License young and old to slay,
Blind and crase, to pay his way.
Is it lawful, crime to nurse,
It must be to steal his purse;
Thus vice gathers, crime grows fat,
While he learns to pass the hat.

LOOK OUT FOR LITTLE ROPES.

My Dear Juveniles:—Sometimes, when circumstances permit, I go down to the wharf on "steamer day," and look among the crowd on deck for familiar faces, thinking it not impossible to see some familiar, laughing juvenile eyes.

Recently, on such an occasion, as the great ship neared the wharf, I stood conveniently near, and by the side of a young man who did not seem to be posted on such matters. When a small cord was thrown from the deck on to the wharf, and grasped by a pair of strong hands, my inexperienced neighbor provoked the bystanders to a little titter of laughter by the expression, "Yes, they'll nearly hold that ship with that little string!" But the boy's puzzle was soon solved as the "little string" proved the means by which the immense cable was drawn and the ship made fast to the wharf. So you see, boys, what that "little string" did, and that may assist us who are sharp enough, to find other strings that are drawing huge cables.

Both wicked and thotless men are everywhere throwing little ropes, while satan is hauling on them with all his wiles, and making the weak, silly ones fast by his strong cables of bad habits. A thotless man—possibly a Christian man—puffs a cigar or pipe, and that throws a cigarette rope on to some silly boy, and soon he is moored by a strong cable to a loathesome spittoon. Little cider ropes draw great alcohol cables, and tie people to rum-shops. "By golly," and other idle words are little ropes attached to profanity cables that bind weak people to the meanness of cursing and swearing. The little departures from strict truth and honesty are the little ropes that draw on the shameful thief and liar cables.

Boys, I have been thru a good many schools, and yet I continue learning all the while. I find it to be a fact that satan and his men do all their mischief by means of small ropes. They never throw heavy cables onto the people. A big drunk cable, or a big profanity cable, or a big thief cable, or a big pipe-cud-spittoon cable thrown from satan's black ship at a decent, cleanly, honest man or boy, would frighten him almost to death, and that dark crew would never get in reach of that man or boy again. Yes, boys that's their plan; they throw the little ropes that dont scare any body, and then draw on the big cables gently until their victims are made fast. Lets look out for the little ropes, and we're safe. T. J. Alley.

Astoria Nov 30th 1881.

Bro. Webb writes; "People often say that children will not realize and remember their Band of Hope pledges, when they get older. Last Sunday night I addressed the Presbyterian Sunday school at San Diego. The Supt. followed with remarks in which he said he was glad I gave tobacco a good blast, for as he did not use it, he enjoyed that part of my speech the more. He then said he so well remembered being elected Secretary of the Band of Hope when ten years of age; could not have felt the honor more had he been Secretary of State. He took some three hours to write out his first minutes, determined to have them right.

FARM FOR SALE.

Nine miles from Los Angeles Court House between Florence and Downey, bounded by Anaheim Railroad and Old San Gabriel river, 270 acres with 270 shares of water in San Antonio Irrigating Company. Orchard of over 2,000 apple and pear trees. House of four rooms, barn, etc,. Splendid opening for large dairy business; 100 cows could be milked at a gross profit of five thousand dollars per annum.

Lands specially suitable for alfalfa—10 tons per acre per anumn. A large portion of the land particularly adapted for the plum, prune, apricot, chestnut, etc., also for Muscat grapes for raisin making which would be very profitable. The whole Farm is fenced and cross fenced, and being well supplied with water, it is one of the very best Stock Ranches in Southern California. There are a few acres in Willows, Forest Grove Station is at corner and School adjoins.

$12,000 was refused for this property by late owner, who valued it at $$18,000. It was sold under foreclosure mortgage and is now offered for $10,000 cash. Date of redemption is past; and an absolute and perfect title will be given.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

UNFERMENTED WINE.

The Rev. J. C. Simmons, in the Pacific Methodist of Nov. 25, has an article in defence of fermented wine at communion. Not that he loves that kind of wine, or is jealous of or hostile to temperance principles and organizations, or desires to shine as a controversial athlete, but evidently because he believes the interpretation which some men have put on certain scriptural utterances on that subject to be correct, and having no desire to conceal or pervert the truth, he openly avows his opinions and their grounds.

In doing this, he has not in the least damaged his title to the most respectful consideration, but has equal right with any of us to be heard; we can accord to him exactly the same motive that actuates his apponents—the desire to get at and accept the truth, not to conceal or distort it. In that same spirit it will be attempted to show that the premises upon which he has based his argument are incorrect, and some of his authorities quoted are unfaithful.

He says, "mere tyros in theology and science often catch a few thots at second hand, and denounce those who have grown gray in their religious and literary labors, and such men become fanatical." Now it is well known to all impartial men who have read up this subject that the great majority of disinterested Christian scholarship that has most laboriously for years and years with no possible motive but the desire to discover the truth in a spirit of love to God and to their fellowmen—is emphatically and unanimously of the opinion that there is no ground whatever for any uncertainty, as to whether the Savior selected from all objects of creation to be the most venerated of sacred emblems, a thing which it is a crime to make at all; which never did anything but evil, which incites to everything fiendish and filthy, which robs the church of scores of thousands of its members every year, and which is more than any other thing a fitting and actual emblem of satan worship, accursed and denounced as venom and poison and vomit and uncleanness from Genesis to Revelation.

It is granted that probably a majority of the scholars who were capable of making these researches or of qualifying themselves to do so, and never gave the subject a moments study are against us. Like Henry Ward Beecher and the editor of the Boston Congregationalist, and Dr. Crosby, they have dismissed the whole subject by the unmanly fling that it was only "third rate scholarship" that rated Christ as an abstainer from the habit of drinking and commending what science has proved to be immoral, wicked and suicidal to use at all. And that is exactly what the infidels claim.

A great many well meaning, truthful men have been led astray by following without question these false lights, believing that they had qualified themselves to issue a judgment on the question, which they never did. These leaders have seldom claimed more than a right to dismiss the case without trial on the ground of their superior natural intelligence, and have industriously circulated the idea, that those who differ from them are either fools, fanatics or intentional deceivers.

First class scholarship!—those words have an awe-inspiring effect sometimes, but it is submitted without any violence to modesty, that either Mr. Simmons or the editor of the Rescue is as capable of passing judgment on this question as the greatest scholar living, provided we patiently examine the texts and contexts and their interpretations and explanations given by the unanimous, best Christian scholarship of the world—and that too if neither of us had ever studied Greek or Hebrew at all.

But if we are not, we cannot deny the competency of such men as the great Eliphalet Nott who died in 1866, after a 62 years presidency of Uuion College; one of the most distinguished of American scholars and educators; a man of most masterly ability in everything from theology to finance and steam-engines. He says, "I will affirm that for the wine biber to claim for intoxicating wine the exclusive commendations of Moses and the prophets in favor of the vine and vineyards, is as absurd as to claim the commendation of the appletree by Solomon for cider, the commendation of barley by Jeremiah for beer or whisky. Dr. F. R. Lees of England, is as capable a scholar to treat this matter, and he began 47 years ago to write and study and learn all that is possible for human mind to acquire on the subject, and has been at it ever since. Moses Stuart, who passed away in 1852 at 72 years of age, one of the finest Hebrew scholars, author of a Hebrew grammar, who was a most eminent bible student and writer, is one of our great standards, and his opinions arrived at from a long course of consciencious, prayerful, impartial research, are of more value than those of a million men of the Dr. Crosby stamp, who tho learned enough to undertake this study, never gave it a moment's attention, but drank their wine and snapped their fingers at the solem declaration "wine is a mocker," so wonderfully verified in them.

Another faithful witness was Dr. Albert Barnes, and many more eminent divines and scholars; thousands might be added of Christian men whose learning, with the lights at their command, qualified them entirely to judge as intelligently as the committee who are translating the bible.

To show how Mr. Simmons has been misled by the authorities to whom he has given credence, he tells us that one Wilson has written a convincing book on the wine side, and the scholarly Dr. F. R. Lees after reading it, openly confesses his defeat and allows that "his own works, the result of a life study into the history of 2000 years are worthless.

Now the author quoted here by Mr. Simmons must have stated a positive wilful untruth. The book of Mr. Wilson—the only written defense of scripture-favored alcoholic wines, ever attempted in our day, has been criticized as a silly, illogical, worthless argument, got up in the winebibbing interest and on a par with all that kind of literature. Its absurdities brot out Dr. Norman Kerr in a pamphlet giving the great weight of his authority to the fact of unfermented scripture and ancient wine. Dr. Kerr says in a preface to a second edition that "the eminent philanthropist to meet whose objections founded on Wilsons book the pamphlet was written, has now become an ardent total abstainer."

And just about the time Mr. Simmons was penning his recital of the recanting of Dr. Lees, that most eminent scholar was addressing an audience of 1200 people in London (a few days ago) telling of his 47 years of labor in this business of showing how the Bible from first to last "teaches our doctrine;" showed how his works had at first been received with distrust and hesitation and had always steadily gained in the favor of learned and Christian men. And the President of that meeting the famous Dr. B. W. Richardson, stated that he had in preparation for this meeting gone over Dr. Lees works attentively, and discovered that in his own writings of the past 15 years he had not uttered a single physiological argument against the use of drink, that had not been foreshadowed in the writings of Dr. Lees (his biblical deductions). He admired Dr. Lees consistency, always holding the truth in its simple purity. Next week the evidence will be reviewed.

SUNDAY LAW A HARDSHIP.

It is claimed that the law which prevents a foreign clothier on Kearney street from selling coats on Sunday, is a hardship and does him an injustice. Now altho it can be asserted that more clothes and better ones can be sold in a year on Kearney and other streets, if all places are shut including the grogshop on Sunday, and the clothier can make more money under a well enforced Sunday law than he can now—still let us allow that it is a hardship and an injustice to the foreign born citizen who wants to keep his store open, and it is a pity he was ever deluded into coming to this country; we acknowledge it a very great outrage indeed and we will mark up a hundred against the Sunday law.

Then there is another stranger who knew no Sunday in his own country; it was a day of fiddling or dancing or working or getting drunk there just as one might choose, and it is a very outrageous wrong to the Frenchmen and Italians who have sacrificed their native patriotism for the good of this country, to shut up the wine shops and the dance houses on Sunday, which can only run by making people drunk. Let us give them the benefit of this claim, and mark up 500 more against the Sunday law.

Then there is the foreign brewer and whisky seller wholesale and retail, and the man who keeps women and beer kegs down cellar to entice and drug and rob ignorant greenhorns from the country and from the mines and from sea, and who make a very pleasant and comfortable living by peddling drunkenness and pauperism and disease, and sending American citizens, their skinned victims to thehospital and police court and all the jails and prisons and the morgue and the graveyard. The Sunday law is a grossly oppressive wrong to their business, and is an impertinent and irritating interference with their liberty to rob, poison and kill the people of this country. The Sunday law is bad for them, and it is a misfortune for them that such a country ever existed for them to come to. Let us put down 100,000 against the Sunday law for that and allow it to be an intolerable nuisance.

And again there are about forty-five million Americans in this Republic, who have seen this country prosper under a people that loved and practiced the system of one day of rest and decency and good conduct in every week. With them are the Danes, the Swedes, and all the better class of Germans, English, Irish, Scotch who love decency and sobriety, and respect law and order and good citizenship. The country and the Sabbath belong to them, and they dont believe the most important interest of this country of fifty million people, is to sell shirts on Kearney or Dupont street on some special afternoon, nor to rob drunken men in a beer cellar, nor to booze and dance and quarrel over poison beer in a Sunday drunkery. But they are concerned to fit this country to hold a first place among the nations of the world, and they desire to fit their children to deserve such a country. They are in favor of the most perfect liberty for all men to do everything they please, except to wrong, and injure, and ruin and kill their fellowmen, and the sons and daughters of this country and people. And they desire the man on Kearney St. and in the dives and beer gardens, to let them enjoy the liberty of their own Sunday rest and Sunday respect, and of having sober, decent behavior, and no shooting and stabbing and wife beating on the first day of the week. Therefore, they put down forty-five million for the Sunday Law, against 100,600.

It will be remembered here, that the advocates of the Sunday law dont raise the question of nationality at all, and never did; but every opponent at once raises the cry of German, Hebrew, French, and asserts the claim of the law breakers and evil doers only of those classes as of more weight than all the respectable foreigners and the whole American people combined.

GRAND LODGES.

Maryland.—The G. L. met in Baltimore Nov. 22 The G. W. C. T. reports the most trying year of their existence. That might have been foreseen with absolute certainty, for the per capita tax was 5 cents; Every year a Grand Lodge runs on that, is sure to be a little more disastrous than any preceding one. There are 20 lodges, 1200 members; 3 lodges are increasing rapidly and a better showing is expected from the separation of some sore headed lodges. The colored lodges remain about the same. Financial condition said to be good; and the per capita tax was raised to 10 cents a quarter!

On the following day the Dual G. L. of the same state met. 23 lodges; 1200 members (singularly even numbers); slight decrease last year in lodge and members. Receipts for the year $670; disbursements, $663. In view of the decrease, a spirited debate was had on the question of reducing the per capita tax, but it was left as formerly. The Grand Lodge of Virginia sent greeting and a visitor, its General Supt. J. W. Mrs. Gilbert. It was also resolved to engage a lecturer for the G. L. this year. This with a raise of the capita tax to 25 or 50 cents next year may restore the Order in Md. to usefulness.

New Jersey.—The Sunbeam says the Grand Lodge of N. J. convened on the 12th and 13th Oct; it was a harmonious session. The G. W. C. T. reports that the work was progressing rapidly, but as he reported same time a decrease of membership the progress seems to have been down hill. No statement is given of number of lodges or members, nor of receipts or expenditures; but there is a debt of $1550 still, the result of a cheap john policy and a paupercapita tax, under which the Order has progressed rapidly and satisfactorily towards insignificance, uselessness and dissolution. No mention made of any alarm at this state of things, no promise of amendment: nobody seems to care that the leading and most powerful agency of temperance and Christianity in the world is dribbling to death. A careful search thru the columns of the Sunbeam discovers no remark on this subject.

New York—The Grand Lodge Ex. Com. of New York lately let their official organ the Gem, go into its grave, when about as much money as will get out two issues of a new one would have saved it. There was then the Living Issue, published at Cooperstown, one of the best weeklies, a handsome, cheap, very able and acceptable paper which they could have adopted, and which would have done ten times the work for them and at one tenth of the cost to them, that a new organ can; but they ignored it probably because it advocates the rational view of a temperance party, and has no wooden legs and stuffed clubs and paper bullets and popguns and blank cartridge moulds in its office furniture. So they start a new official organ that will be at war with half the membership, and a splendid collapse may be looked for in this years work in that state.

THE SECESSION.

There have been indications promised of a reunion of the English and American Good Templars. If it could be accomplished successfully and amicably, it would be a matter of rejoicing to all lovers of the order. But if the attempt to unite is a failure, it may make the separation still wider. And that seems to be the probable outcome of the recent arrest of legal proceedings.

If an agreement could be effected by which the original body would humbly take upon itself all the blame of the separation and entirely exonerate and acquit the other party of the slightest departure from the most exalted propriety in all their acts in connection with the separation—and if the seceding party would also with profound humility bow its head, and confess that all the sin and fault of the separation lay at their own door all thru, and all the acts of the original parent organization have been spotlessly pure and undefiled with the least taint of infidelity to their cardinal principles of faith, hope and charity—then we might look for a peaceful and happy reunion.

But there are already rumors that neither party in England is going to do that thing, altho each is beginning to prescribe that dose for the other.

The two leaders have been engaged in a lifelong fight against a mightily fortified enemy, and knowing that they have in almost every phase of that warfare been in the right, their naturally positive dispositions have been case-hardened into a persistent obstinacy, beside which that quality as highly developed in the most enlightened and experienced mule is docility itself. And they will each feel that "I" am altogether right, and "you" are altogether wrong. If they had not posessed these obstinate persistent qualities, which in this particular instance may be detrimental to the cause they equally advocate and love, they never would have been qualified to be the leaders and champions of a great reform, and to so well fulfil their respective onerous and responsible duties.

Is a most distinguished physician of London, an eminent scholar, a sturdy enemy and opponent of all new and unsupported extravagances of theory, of misleading statistics etc.; a champion of the truths of science and history. He says of the book written by a Rev. Mr. Wilson to prove that it was impossible for the ancients to have unfermented wine, that "he might as well have asserted that no child was ever born in England with a nose on its face. He, Dr. K gave some of his friends imported unfermented wine six years old, and feeling that no one could disprove accomplished facts, he thot no more of the book or the reverend demolishers of fact till lately he found an earnest Christian philanthropist conscienciously objecting to total abstinence on the ground that Mr. Wilson had proved the Bible to sanction the use of intoxicating liquors."

"In deference to him, and finding that this book (Wilsons) has been extensively quoted by Christians against the teetotal movement and by infidels against the bible I have read the whole volume with care and attention, and have found the entire argument based upon a misunderstanding of popular chmeical deliverances which could never have arisen had the author been skilled in organic chemistry or practically acquainted with many eastern and southern wines of whose existence he seems to have been quite unaware."

Such men as Drs. Kerr, Richardson and Lees are a blessing to the world. They have stood up manfully for the people in defence of the bible against its two most dangerous enemies; first the class of believers and professors of Christianity, who after distorting it and striving to prove it untrustworthy, selfcontradictory and an unsafe guide, insist upon our accepting the falsehoods they attribute to it as divine revelation, and 2d the infidels who delight in taking them at their word and holding up the bible as upon the evidence of its professors, a fraud.

It is recommended to those who desire the truth on the subject of wine to send ten cents to the N. T. society and get Dr. Kerr's "Unfermented wine a fact."

ELDORADO CO.

A conference of lodges I. O. G. T. held at Placerville, El Dorado county to consider the proper action on the Sunday law, adopted the following resolutions;

1. The time has fully come when the Sunday and liquor laws of this state should be enforced.

2. That for this purpose we shall endeavor to enlist the influence and aid of all religious, temperance moral and law-abiding citizens in the county by procuring their signatures to the following pledge called "The Citizen's Sunday League:"

We, the undersigned, citizens of El Dorado Co. and state of California, believing that the laws enacted by our justly constituted legislators should be obeyed, pledge our obedience to the Sunday laws of this state, and we will give our influence and aid to their enforcement.

3. That for this purpose one or more proper persons be appointed in each election precinct or school district to canvass for names to the pledge endeavoring among the first to procure the officers of law.

4. We believe that all business men wish to be law abiding citizens, therefore we we will present to them the following business Men's Sunday Compact, by which they can mutually agree to close their stores, shops, etc. as required by the laws of the state.

Business men's sunday compact..

We the undersigned, citizens of El Dorado County State of California, not wishing to live in violation of law, promise to close our places of business on Sunday, in accordance with the laws of this state, providing others will do the same voluntarily, or that the law shall be enforced against them.

5. That in each elective precinct or school district a committee of one or more of the most influential citizens that can be obtained for that purpose be appointed to obtain evidence and bring suit against those who are determined to defy the law.

6. That each Lodge in this county elect a committee of one, or in absence of such election the W. C. Ts. shall act, as a committee of Conference, with power to procure legal counsel to aid the District Attorney, when necessary in managing any cases that may be prosecuted.

7. That we appoint Bro. J. H. Gilmore Corresponding Secretary and General agent of the League in this county, to whom reports and communications shall be sent, and who shall be President of the committee of Conference, with power to call them together at any time and place they are needed. CONSISTENCY.

Some one has been writing in the Rescue on the above subject. It strikes me that there is a strange consistency in the practice of many of those who consider themselves "called by the Lord," to preach the gospel of the world's Redeemer.

In some places where the liquor traffic seems to hold and control everything, where men and women are degraded and drunken, where children are suffering from poverty and growing up in ignorance and hardened and prepared for crime, the servants of the Most High not only fail to sound a note of warning, but, on the solemn communion days, bring out alcoholic wines to commemorate the dying love of him who hath loved us and redeemed us!

The very fluid that has robbed His churches of ministers and members by the thousand, that robs heaven and peoples hell, that fills the earth with sorrow, lamentation and woe, is put into the hands of his disciples as an emblem of life and love! They lift holy hands to heaven and pray, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done," and yet never lift a finger to break down this kingdom of rum, that while it holds sway, forever bars the kingdom of Christ from having power over the hearts and minds of men. There is no room for the spirit of Christ while the body is filled with drink; there can be no hope of the kingdoms of this world, becoming the kingdoms of God and his Christ, while the devil continues to hold men under the fearful bondage of strong drink.

These are assertions that require no argument, yet I find many of the professed followers of our blessed Lord, persisting not only in the custom of drinking poison moderately, but also putting it on the table of the Lord! to tempt some, and keep others away from the table where all have a right to receive those emblems of his broken body and shed blood, without being compelled to partake of liquid fires that remind one only of the dram shop, and are the same in essence and quality, as those that consign thousands of our fellows to untimely and dishonored graves.

Consistency indeed ! Of what use is it to pray "Lead us not into temptation," and then give into the hands of the worshippers of the one true and living God the very cup the wise man has forbidden thus "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright, for at the last, it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

Does the word of God contradict itself ? Is the cup of death and the cup of blessing the same ? will it bless one at the communion table, or in the home, and curse and blight in the tavern ? I can read neither Greek nor Hebrew but I am thankful the Lord has endowed me with a little common sense, and I believe that He who left a Heavenly throne to come down to earth, to become a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; that He who remembers our frame, and knoweth we are but dust, never did sanction the use of that which makes drunkards, for if He did there would be no consistency then in that solemn declaration "That no drunkard shall enter the Kingdom of God.

It grieves me to the quick to see members of the churches of Jesus Christ making stumbling blocks of themselves over whom poor weak human souls are stumbling and falling into that broad road that their creed and Bible tells them surely leads to hell. H. R. H.

Placerville Dec, 1st 1881.

The Maine Law. The enemies of God and man who are always trying to prove that prohibition is a failure in Maine, take good care to never mention the fact that it is only half a prohibitory law after all. Every citizen of Maine can import all the liquor he wants from France or England or Canada; having paid duty on it he can have it taken to his home in the original package and drink it; but he must not be known to give it away or sell it.

Now people who do not hate the truth must know that the former licensed grogshop and the drinking practices must have created a large crop of drunkards and criminals in Maine, many of whom an enforced sobriety has kept alive till now; many of them have been able to get drunk very often and the rest get drunk whenever they can. But every body knows however much they lie to the contrary, that there is not one twentieth of the liquor consumed in Maine that used to be: that the public drunkard factory and crime mill is no longer in existence there and that Maine and Kansas are infinitely the most prosperous States of the Union and have the best and most honest population. But to suppose the liquor which an incomplete law permits to enter, does not make the people who use it blackguards and criminals, no one pretends.

Intelligent Thanksgiving.—The Rev. Mr. McCormac, in his Thanksgiving sermon in Astoria, could find no better grounds for gratitude than the onward march of the temperance reform; and he dwelt upon it at considerable length, giving the rapid progress in many of the states, and closing with practical and forcible suggestions to the Church and people of our own "Whisky city of the Union." T. J. Alley.

BOSTON.

With many people it is the custom to taunt Boston and New England with their superior culture and morality. But they ought to give Boston full credit too, for the evil its bad people do. While the worthy people of New England are active in spreading Christianity and temperance and liberty and education all over the world, the agents of satan in Boston are sending his religion in barrels and bottles and puncheons wherever the missionary and the teacher and the Ame.ican trader goes.

A writer in the Liberator tells of two vessels arriving from Boston in October, 1880, in the village of Goree, West Africa, one with 1000 and the other with 500 barrels of New England rum to kill the poor ignorant natives.

There is in Colon (or Aspinwall) on the Isthmus an American church and mission, and some very worthy American and other foreign citizens. At every possible doggery too there are rum and other drinks for sale, but the ladies say the worst and most insidious and dangerous of all the deadfalls there was the store and office of the Boston Ice Company, which has besides its ice business large stocks of groceries and varieties and distributes free rum to its genteel callers to a late hour of the evening.

When liberal-minded, hearty, generous fellows cast blue law slurs against New England people, they should remember these little offsets, which indicate that the fault-finders have lots of kindred spirits there, towards whom they should cherish a fraternal sympathy.

PROVIDENCE R. I.

This city which was 32 years ago the residence of Dr. H. D. Cogswell now of San Francisco has accepted the offer from him of a public drinking Fountain as a feeble expression of his rememberance and good will for their friendship, confidence and patronage bestowed on him when a citizen and a dentist there 32 years ago. It of course accepts the condition of keeping it perpetually supplied with good pure drinking water and maintaining it in good repair.

Dr. Cogswell has offered to set up a magnificent fountain in Washington provided a site and water is given for the purpose and it seems that he has about ten fountains in contemplation: at this rate if he could only be spared long enough every town in the Union would have a Cogswell Fountain.

LETTER FROM REV. J. C. CULVER.

While on a visit to San Jose visited Granger Lodge that I might meet the other lodges. Granger had invited Garden city and Santa Clara Lodges to visit them in a body. The invitation was accepted, and we beheld the three lodges as one and working as one, believing that in union there is strength, and as a body they are taking active steps to the enforcement of the Sunday law. The lodges are all prosperous and doing a good work.

On Sunday afternoon I was invited to address a young people's temperance meeting held in the California Theater, subject Sunday Law. After a short program of appropriate songs and recitations I spoke to the subject for an hour and five minutes—to my astonishment—but the audience of over 600 were attentive, and as there was a large class of young men standing in the gallery quietly during the entire time, I concluded they were interested in the subject at least.

Tho it was Sunday the Pres. asked if it was true that there was not backbone enough in San Jase to see that the law was enforced. Prolonged cheers gave the answer yes! I sounded the alarm; time will give us the result of the visit. I doubt not that the victory is for those who "dare to do right."

I have accepted an invitation to speak at Santa Clara next Friday and Saturday evenings. Yours truly. F. J. Culver.

San Diego, Nov. 26, 1881.

Ed. Rescue:—We have had during the past week a series of very interesting and profitable meetings in this city under the auspices of Rev. J. W. Webb Grand Lectnrer, I, O. G. T.

Bro Webb is a very earnest eloquent and effective laborer, full of energy and grit; if we had more determined and active workers like him, we should soon own the state.

He is now at National city, and we have a good report from his work there. A number of names were given us for initiation to the lodges here, the result of Bro. Webb's efforts. I hope he will tell you of our Band of Hope. We are very proud of the young soldiers in that organization, They gave an entertainment the last night Bro, Webb lectured here in Horton Hall, every one present was delighted with the exercises, the music etc. The Union a secular paper said it was as good an entertainment as was ever given in San Diego. Miss Lizzie Pidgeon is superintendent, your humble servant, President. I told the children of Dr. McDonald's generous prizes for the best essays on intemperance and tobacco; there will be several original essays on these subjects by them in our "Band of Hope Gazette," an original paper read monthly, Miss Millie Strong, editress. We hope temperance people will wake up to the necessity of taking an active political part in the ensuing campaign. The opposition will make a fight to repeal the Sunday law. Forewarned is forearmed; let us commence the fight now. We want a temperance party. It is a living issue and a vital one. A. B. H.

"For about twenty years there has been no place in Edwards Co. in this state where intoxicating liquors could be obtained as a beverage. There is a satisfactory condition of things in that county, that is one of the best of temperance sermons. The taxes are 33 percent less than in any other Co. in Illinois. The length of the sessions of its court is from two to three days. The justices of the peace are called but little from their ordinary pursuits. From one to two persons in five or six years are imprisoned in the County jail. It has sent one man to the states prison for killing his wife, while drunk on whisky obtained in a neighboring county. Its poor expenses are $500 per year, while the county next to it, where licenses are issued, tho only half as large, annually foots poor bills of $6,000. In May, 1879, but two mortgages were on record in the county. A very large per centage of the people are religious. Such exemptions in the midst of a people weighted down with alcoholic burdens, ought to have the effect to open their eyes, and to cause the universal banishment of the bottles, and barrels and beer kegs, under which now they are struggling."

That is one more proof that the cause of nine-tenths, if not all our crime, pauperism and vice, are due to the system of the Sunday school of satan.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE,

Below is a list of a few of the most useful and excellent works with which every reformer should be supplied, and in which he should be well posted:

BACCHUS DETHRONED.— A Prize Essay; Cloth, $1; paper edition, 50c.
Completely masters the whole subject. Everybody ought to have it.

TEMPERANCE LESSON BOOK.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., M. D., LL. D., F. R. S. 220 pp. Cloth, 50c.; paper, 25c.
This is a series of short lessons on alcohol and its action on the body, accompanied with suitable questions, designed for study in public and private schools, and reading in schools and families. Send for it; read what this brightest and and best of medical scientists has discovered regarding all kinds of drinks; be sure to lend it to your family doctor.

TEN LECTURES ON ALCOHOL.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., F. R. S. Comprising the six Cantor Lectures: "Action of Alcohol on the Body and on the Mind," "Moderate Drinking," "The Medical Profession," and "The Liberty of the Abject." 338 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.
The ablest and cheapest lectures ever presented to the American public,

ON ALCOHOL.—By Dr. B. W. Richardson, F. R. S., of London. 12mo., 190 pages. Six "Cantor Lectures," showing the nature and effect of alcohol on the body and mind. Cloth, 75c.; paper, 25c.

OUR WASTED RESOURCES.—By Dr. Wm. Hargreaves. 12mo., 202 pages. The Missing Link in the Temperance Reform, giving the most valuable statistics ever published. Price in cloth, $1.50; paper edition, 50c.

This book contains ten sermons and talks by this eminent divine. They are filled with sound, convincing arguments against the lawfulness, morality and necessity of the liquor-traffic, as well as stirring appeals to all Christian men and women to take a firm, decided, out-spoken stand in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, Send for that and lend it to the ministers in your vicinity.

ALCOHOL AND THE STATE.—A discussion of the problem of law as applied to the liquor-traffic. By Robert C. Pitman, L.L.D., Associate Judge of Superior Court of Massachusetts. 12mo. 411 pages, $1 50.
It is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. It shows that the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the State; and the foe of all the objects for which the State exists; and presents such strong arguments, statistics, appeals, authorities, as will add greatly to an intelligent and wise solution of the Liquor Problem. The economy and legislative aspects of the Alcoholic discussion have never been so ably presented, and it should be in the hands of every citizen nd in every library in the land.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND ALCOHOL.—12 mo., 33 pages. By B. W. Richardson, M. D., 10c.

JULIA COLMAN'S WORKS.

SPECIMEN SETS.—Beer Tracts, Handbills, etc., 6 cents; Leaflets and Children's Tracts, 5c.; Tracts and Leaflets on Wine, 5c.; File case set of Union Leaflets, 18c.; File case set of Children's Tracts, 25c.

These file cases are of strong manila paper, nicely lettered, and they open like a port-folio, disclosing the sets; can be closed and fastened with a rubber ring; can be used for specimens for a long time, and are a great convenience in the use of tracts.

Contains full directions for the management of young and older people and children, in the study of the nature and effects of alcohol, so that they may never be tempted to learn by experience. The school is conducted on the model of the Sunday-school, both because that is a proper model and because people thus learn with so little explanation. Hundreds of these schools are being opened and are becoming very popular. The Text Books used in this Temperance School are

A work for the children. Simple, direct, concise and popular. They enjoy it much; study and learn to recite it all through—and explain it, too, provided the teacher uses also the

The object of this book is to assist the teachers in the use of the catechism on alcohol. It is arranged in short lessons, each of which is accompanied with a note giving directions for simple experiments, object lessons, blackboard exercises, followed by a little lecture on the above methods with facts and illustrations and incidents which may be used by the teacher. Every teacher and reader recognizes this Manual and Catechism to be just the thing needed: their suggestions and deductions are those of a thorough practical teacher, completely armed and equipped for that duty. No better help to temperance education has ever been produced; probably nothing that comes near it in usefulness.

These three works are especially intended for use in temperance organizations of various kinds, and there are many helps to go with them, such as the children's tracts above named, one of which is selected for each lesson. Then there are

CHROMO TEXT CARDS.—Per 100, $1. Sewall's Stomach Plates, $9. same, mounted on rollers, $12.

And many others named and priced in the Temperance School above named. For teaching Temperance in the Day School, a movement coming now into very general favor, the new book has been prepared, entitled

An elementary text book for schools. This work is approved by the most experienced and distinguished advocates of Temperance

Miss Colman is always promptly willing to answer questions, and give explanations and make selections with the most scrupulous attention for all who call for her services in the line of temperance literature, and the RESCUE particularly recommends its readers to make liberal use of her admirable publications, and to apply for them at once at her new address,

MISS JULIA COLMAN,

☞ To get all the works in the two lists above, including 1,100 beer tracts and 1,000 leaflets, will cost about $11 if the books are bound in cloth, or $8 if in paper covers. Every lodge ought to get just the entire outfit at once, well bound for the use of its members.

HELP Yourselves by making money when a golden chance is offered, thereby always keeping poverty from your door. Those who always take advantage of the good chances for making money that are offered, generally become wealthy, while those who do not improve such chances remain in poverty. We want many men, women, boys and girls to work for us right in their own localities. The business will pay more than ten times ordinary wages. We furnish an expensive outfit and all that you need, free. No one who engages fails to make money very rapidly. You can devote your whole time to the work, or only your spare moments. Full information and all that is needed sent free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Maine.

Startling Exposure of the Liquor Traffic.

A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books giving receipts for making and doctoring—advertisements of essences, facsimiles of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel and made at less than 25c. a gallon. Wine that never saw grape juice—cider that never saw apples—beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing, whisky from arsenic, millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten foot square cellar—more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France.

This book is no mere toy, but an exhaustive work—a work of years of close research and investigation, and cannot fail to prove an invaluable auxiliary to the temperance cause. It forms one volume of our "Popular Temperance Library," and we shall sell it at the following fabulous prices:—Single sample number, 10c. Five or more sent to separate addresses for 8c. each—5 or more to one address 5½c. each—25 or more to one address 5c. each. Special rates on large lots. Book nearly ready for delivery. Orders filled in turn.

We also publish 90c. to $1.50 story books in large newspaper form. One complete book, illustrated, in quantities, at 2c. each. Samples of three books already issued, for 10 cts. A whole library of choice $1.00 to $1.50 story books in book form (paper covers) especially for Sunday-schools and Bands of Hope, for only c. each (sample copy 8c.) Eighteen monthly papers at 5c. a year, (samples of each for 10c.) We take contracts to sow towns knee-deep with temperance literature for a song, and that, too, with papers in place of tracts. A full line of Band of Hope supplies so cheap that the penny collection pays for library, weekly paper, badges, pledges and all. Also a host of other temperance documents, all at revolution prices. Send for catalogue. We have the indorsement of the press, societies, and prominent workers in all parts of the country The following was recently received from Governor St John, of Kansas:

State of Kansas, Executive Department, Topeka, Oct. 22, 1881.—I heartily approve of your plan of work. Your publications will accomplish great good, and should be liberally patronized by the friends of Christian temperance everywhere. Very truly yours, JOHN P. ST. JOHN.

An Appeal. We wish to reach every temperance worker in the land, man or women, with our samples, catalogue, etc. We can do nothing if we cannot reach the people. Will not every one send us names of workers? It only costs a postal card and a few minutes' time. Please say where you saw this. Address "REVOLUTION TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING HOUSE," DAVID C. COOK, Manager, 148 Madison St., Chicago.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:
Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

Nordhoff.—Bro. Monger, W. C. T., kindly came wtih Bro. Barrows buggy, and took me from Ventura, a most delightful drive of 14 miles. The Ojai is a beautiful resort, well deserving patronage. Sister Stevens fully described it in the Rescue and many have been the enquiries that Bro. Barrows, active Good Templars and Christian people who keep the hotel, have received in consequence. Bro. Houstan, G. W. Sec., of Oregon, passed some time here for his health, advantageously. Lodge recently lost some members by removal, but all are determined to persevere. Public installation; then lecture to very attentive audience. Might have started Band of Hope if I could have stayed two nights. This is almost a temperance colony; no bar at either hotel or elsewhere in valley. If any liquor is sold, it is rarely, at the post office store; no bar.

Santa Paula. Bro Barrows again lent buggy and Bro. Monger was Jehu. Another delightful drive thru canyons to this place. Public installation and lecture. Sunday morning off eight miles to Saticoy; again with Bro. Orne and Tenny. Full meeting. Rev. S. Bristol, a fine temperance man, gave way and assisted in temperance service. Sister Leavitt Supt; and Bro. Peddy assist of B. of H that I organized a few months since, had children with badges, on first seats, and went thru a beautiful floral and choral service, sister Fanny Quesnell presiding at the organ. Visitors from Santa Paula, Ventura and other places. Bro. Bristol asked for a rousing good collection for Orphans Home and lecture fund, and $8.50 was result to which be added a second half dollar and made it $9.00

Bro. Quesnell Post Master, is an earnest Christian and had to speak out in meeting the warmest thanks for what I had accomplished in various visits. The thanks I hand over to ex. committee for sending me. Hope they will appreciate them as I did. They cheer me much. Bro. Quesnell's family were very kind to me, entertaining and taking care of me while sick with a miserable cold that cures slowly while I speak every night and almost all day at schools and to families while canvassing for Rescue and temperance literature. But I use no intoxicants or tobacco, and will soon be well. Next lodge meeting after lecture was best for a long time and several additions.

On Saturday afternoon, after Bro. Rev. T. E. Taylor, chaplain of Nordoff Lodge, who helped us there and in three services here, had preached, I organized Band of Hope. Sunday afternoon, a full house and many more additions; it will soon number 100, young and old. At night, Gospel Union Temperance meeting, Bro. Taylor, and Bro. Rev. Cook, principal of school, assisting. It is refreshing to see the saloons empty, not one doing business. Some stores and drug store only places where it is told. Baker's hotel has no bar. Obtained subscripsions for Rescue, Bro. S. T. Todd, agent.

Heard many regrets that Dr. Guiberson had left the order. As he has so wide an influence, many both in and out of the lodge, hope he may again take membership. Stores all closed on Sunday. Visited both schools; each teacher a Good Templar. It would do you good to see and hear Sister Bain's little scholars; a regular little army of temperance boys and girls and such singers!

REV. W. C. KING.

Our last was from Fresno, and shortly after posting the same we caught a passing freight, and spent the Sabbath afternoon lumbering along in a "caboose." Landing upon a broad, seemingly almost uninhabited plain, we in time found our way thru the darkness to the little school-house known as Tipton, which was packed with as an attractive, intelligent people as 'tis often our privilege to address. On Monday evening we organized them into a lodge, and late reports show progress. Bro. F. H. Wales, D. C. T., was present, and rendered material assistance. He also came on Tuesday and carried us to Woodville, where we met a large number of the citizens, but failed to induce them to re-organize the lodge. At the close, self-sacrificing brother Ballard, of Pride of Tulare, consented to take us a long ride to Tulare City, from which place we went by early train and stage to Grangeville. The kindness of the friends there was most marked, and we went on to Lemoore on Friday grateful and happy. This lodge is sleeping sweetly while ruin and destruction run rampant.

At Lone Oak we found confusion as to nature of the meeting, yet addressed a fair meeting, and early Sabbath morning hastened in to Hanford—and what shall we say of Hanford?—nothing at present. On Monday, day and night, we traveled toward and to Bakersfield to comply with special request from head-quarters, influenced by a letter from there. We returned Wednesday night, bitterly regretting that people do not more carefully weigh the import of their words. After an all night's journey, we reached Hanford in time for Dist. Lodge, Thursday A. M., and found a fine delegation of earnest workers present.

Very radical resolutions on enforcement of Sunday and Liquor Laws were adopted, and we hope the brethren will be as good as their word. Altho the lodge at Hanford is reduced in numbers, they still have a noble, valiant band, and their entertainment of the large delegation was most royal. This lodge needs and deserves the hearty sympathy of every Good Templar in the state; and we sincerely hope they may emerge from their peculiar embarrassments, and soon see brighter days. This is written from Visalia, from which place we go to the "foot-hills" to try and organize a lodge.

WM. CROWHURST.

Spring Valley, Dec. 3, 1881.

Mokelumne Hill, made good use of our time at that place. An adjourned meeting of subordinate lodge on Saturday night after lecture for special instruction in lodge work and a degree meeting on Sunday afternoon for instruction, and two rousing public meetings, large and enthusiastic, followed by the addition of many names to the lodge—A regular boom.

At Campo Seco rain indicated failure; but two lectures, public installation, degree meeting, subordinate lodge meeting, the reception of a number of names and the initiation of four candidates by dispensation immediately after the second lecture, contradicted the seeming indication, and left the lodge encouraged and ready to "fight the good fight."

Evergreen, four miles from Camanche had a good meeting on the first evening, and we were depending on the best work for the second evening, but the rain cut us off, and as we had only lodge members; a subordinate lodge meeting and explanatory work.

At the request of Mr. Geo. H. Lillie we spent Friday night off the regularly mapped route, had a good meeting at only three days notice and organized Mountain Gate Lodge with 22 charter members Geo. H Lillie, L, D., J Gillam, W. C. T., Miss Nellie Richardson, W. V. T.

H. R. HUGHES.

At Grizzly Flat found cold weather and plenty snow, but there are also warm hearts and true Templars working hard to keep the banner waving. At the close of the public meeting I installed their officers.

At Pleasant Valley no posters had been received; so I deferred meeting until Sunday, and pushed on to arrange for a lecture Friday at El Dorado.

Spent Thursday in Placerville arranging for meetings thru the county, and posting for lecture on Wednesday here.

Had a fair audience at El Dorado. It is a small but faithful lodge, gaining slowly but building on a firm foundation. Saturday evening at Diamond; audience small, a few desire a lodge; will return Thursday to try and organize.

The 27th returned to Mt. Aukum, lectured and installed officers of new lodge, a large delegation present from Oleta Lodge and Like Oak well represented.

Then drove to Pleasant Valley; got twelve names for a lodge. Monday rain prevented people coming out, but got 17 names and organized Pleasant Valley Lodge, Miss Jessie Clapp, Lodge Deputy; night of meeting Saturday.

Tuesday met with the brethren here in open lodge, a fine meeting. Committee on Sunday law also met to arrange for concerted action.

We have now six lodges in the county, and El Dorado bids fair to be populous, with active zealous Templars working in unison with the grand army of 18,000 temperance warriors, who will never cease their onward march until our golden state is wrested from the demon's grasp and proudly stands redeemed.

BOGUS FINANCE.

NATIONAL BRIGANDAGE.

Ex-Secretary John Sherman boasts of the successful issue of Republican party financiering. "The tax on alcoholic drinks pays the interest on the National debt." But he omits to say that to pay that tax costs the people every year, at the lowest calculation,

700,000,000 dollars in cash.
1,000,000,000 dollars in damages.
100,000 American citizens destroyed and killed.
100,000 American citizens led into vice and crime.

And the first and most privileged civilization of the world converted by the foreign grogshops into the chosen field of the most cruel and bloody crime, and the worst system of criminal violence, debauchery and lawless ruffianism that the world has ever produced.

Consistent Temperance Papers.—The Rescue under its present manager, has never made one adverse or unkindly allusion to any other temperance journal or temperance agency in the world, nor felt any inclination to do so. And so far as known, that has been a characteristic of this paper for ten years past. But the temptation is strong to depart from its beaten route, and may grow stronger if one continues to find in a temperance journal, such a wretched article as the following. "We believe that if every one would use Hop Bitters freely, there would be much less sickness and misery in the world; and people are fast finding this out, whole families keeping well at a trifling cost by its use. We advise all to try it."

That might have been ignorantly done once, but everybody now knows Hop Bitters is a nasty infernal disguise of whisky, and its 17 per cent of alcohol is its only attractive or desirable quality. To insert such articles for pay or otherwise, is on a par with the Boston Congregationalist advocating the scriptural sanctity and deification of wine.

Sheridan, Dec. 2, 1881.

Ed. Rescue:—Since the decision of the Supreme Court on the Sunday Law, the business men and saloon men of Sheridan, have voluntarily closed their places of business and strictly observe the law by keeping the Sabbath day. Our lodge is increasing in number and influence. We had on Thanksgiving day in the evening, an open lodge meeting. The place of meeting was full to the utmost, and all were well pleased with our entertainment; and gave us $13,75 for national literature fund. Our Band of Hope is prospering and meets every Sunday after Sunday School. Yours in F. H. and C,

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

Trustees of Orphans' Home.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searls, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Robert Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

Lady Managers of Orphans' Home, —President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson. No. 1531; Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th St., San Francisco, Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stephens, San Francisco, G. W. V. IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.—At Stockton, Cal, Oct. 18, 1881. Thomas Mills, a worthy and highly-respected member of Soulbyville Lodge, No. 340, Tuolumne Co. The Lodge adopted resolutions of respect to the memory of the deceased, and of condolence with the two little orphans, thus early deprived of a kind father's love and care.

H. H. PECKINPAH.

Enterprise Lodge No. 356 of Guerneville, passing resolutions in relation to the death of our lamented brother, alludes very feelingly to the "loss sustained by the family, the friends, the lodge, the community, the order and the cause of temperance, in the death of that honored citizen, and faithful, true and upright brother." The kindest sympathy is also expressed for the bereaved wife and family.

Those who remember, and now and then refer to our reunions at the Redwood campmeetings and at Sonoma District Lodge, will often continue to see Bro. Peckinpah in their memory picture, as one of the prominent figures there, and one of the most interested and kindly remembered of the many kind friends and warm hearts, whose genuine devotion to the right and the truth, and whose pleasant intercourse and companionship made those gatherings occasions to be tenderly remembered. Those who gather there again, will be painfully reminded of his absence; but the merciful hand of time will temper the pungency of sorrow, dry up the bitter welling tears and strew the tomb of our brother with smiling flowers, suggestive of the happy associations which encircle his memory in our hearts, and uttering serenely joyous promises of a happier reunion in the far, far beyond.

SUNDAY LAW LEAFLET. 922 packages of these have been sent out by the G. W. C. T. to Ministeres and Lodges of late, besides large numbers sent to other parties.

BRO. Leland has been resting at home for some time back, and regrets that he has not been able to go out and push the Rescue since the price has been reduced.

IN addition to the lecture work of November elsewhere reported, Bro. King secured 92 subscribers for the RESCUE and Bro. Webb 30, besides numerous orders for David C. Cook's supplies.

BROTHER GOULD writes: "The churches in Los Angeles are holding union Sunday-closing meetings, and are inviting all religious, moral, temperance and law-abiding citizens to co-operate in enforcing the law.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE, Sunday law and the general interest of good order and sobriety are now the subject of much discussion and consideration in Stockton. Mrs. Stevens most ably and gracefully assisted by Mrs. M. E. Richardson, is having revival times there and their labors are very successful.

SEE notice of meeting for distribution of School prizes Dec 16th. Program will be very interesting, It was to come off last week, but will not be postponed this time.

GRANGER LODGE, San Jose, initiated 8, and proposed 10 more on the evening of the 3d. Next Sunday, all the ministers are going to preach temperance sermons, so says Bro. W. H. Gilmore, L. D.

BROTHER J. H. Gilmore, of Diamond Springs, reports a good time with Placerville open lodge. Visitors handsomely entertained and proceedings spirited. Six Lodges now in that county.

PALE INK—Reports and communications are sometimes sent to the RESCUE written indistinctly with wretched old pale ink that has been watered 12 times a year since 1849. No one in this office can afford to spend two hours microscoping out a page of such manuscript.

E. W. TURNER of Madera writes that his lodge sent for 200 copies of No. 15 of the Liberator, to give one to every voter; and he has secured subscribers for 60 of D. C, Cook's five cent papers. The lodge intends its existence to be of some avail to the cause of temperance.

THE SALOONS in Yolo county are practically closed In the small towns they have been closed a month, Woodland has been running till last Sunday, when they were all closed but one; he was arrested and fined $25. One by one we are driving the nails in the coffin of the rum traffic. Yours fraternally,

M. C. W.

GUITEAU after all he has done is shocked at the waste of money by the government in bringing witnesses all the way from Chicago and Boston to testify against him. Just like the rumsellers; they rob the poor of a thousand millions a year, and damage the country another thousand million and then they howl bitterly at a county being put to $26.40 legal expenses to make them take their hands off the poor man's throat on Sunday.

ED. RESCUE:—The District Lodge of Colusa Co. met at College City on the 2nd and 3rd of this month; held open session on Friday evening; members of Independent lodge and the D. D., Liening, presented to a very large audience, a good program of speeches, songs, essays, etc., on temperance; every one well pleased with the whole. Five lodges represented; some distant lodges did not send delegates. The order is steadily increasing in the county; all are determined to enforce the Sunday Law and the cause of temperance, in spite of all opposition, the League of Freedom included. All had a good time and went home determined to be present at next session in Maxwell, first Friday in March. It is hoped that we can have a Grand Lecturer up here before that time. There were over fifty in attendance. All had something to say for Good of Order.

J. B. HEWITT
District Secretary.

Eight children were taken from their mothers in New York, on Monday, Aug. 22d, by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children. In each case the cause was that the mother was a habitual drunkard. One of the mothers was in the habit of sleeping in the open street with her baby in her arms; another was found actually offering her little daughter, two years old, for sale on Centre St.; and another had by her insatiable love of rum caused the ruin of her husband, the break-up of her home and the serious disease of her four girls aged from one to eleven. One of the children, an infant at the breast, had been dropped by her mother in the street. It was taken to a hospital, where the doctors said the baby was suffering from alcoholic poison imbibed through its mother's milk. If the Christians who oppose prohibition would take the trouble to think over these and numberless similar cases, they would probably see reasons for reconsidering if not changing their attitude on this question.—Christian Herald.

BOGUS FINANCE.

NATIONAL BRIGANDAGE.

Ex-Secretary John Sherman boasts of the successful issue of Republican party financiering. "The tax on alcoholic drinks pays the interest on the National debt." But he omits to say that to pay that tax costs the people every year, at the lowest calculation,

700,000,000 dollars in cash.
1,000,000,000 dollars in damages.
100,000 American citizens destroyed and killed.
100,000 American citizens led into vice and crime.

And the first and most privileged civilization of the world converted by the foreign grogshops into the chosen field of the most cruel and bloody crime, and the worst system of criminal violence, debauchery and lawless ruffianism that the world has ever produced.

AN APPEAL.

BY REV. DWIGHT WILLIAMS.

I grieve, my land to see thy shame;
I blush to know thy cruel blame;
And with my countrymen would plead
To rise indignant, as they read
The signs of our tyrannic curse,
With ill designs and waxing worse;
The traffic stands defiant,
And ye my countrymen, so meek and pliant.

What fear have we? No foreign foe
By sea or land, is near, we know;
And yet this broad, triumphant land
Is mocked with scorn: an iron hand
Bears rule, and few that dare protest:
The oligarch with high behest
Holds in his hand the hiding
Of power, the sovereign people all cowriding.

Are we a people mean and base.
The sons of an inglorious race?
And shall we sit like serfs demure,
And scorn and outrage still endure,
Because the oligarch in gold
Has bought the right and we are sold
To dangers and disorders
From city full to far-off mountain borders!

My countrymen, the name ye bear
Is far too proud for you too wear
The yoke of such an outlaw—crowned
By hands which he him-self hath bound,
Have ye not broken other chains?
Break his! and wash away the stains
That shame our country's banners,
And from the disenthralled hear glad hosannas.

The licensed lord, with cruel grip,
Holds keys of power; with curling lip
He taunts the innocent and poor;
And guarded sits in his own door,
By that auspicious flag, whose stars
Unwilling shine on bolts and bars,
By him above created,
In lands of beauty sadly desolated.

Americans? Once more return
To your great loyalty, and spurn
The rising tyranny of drink—
Nor let the nation's honor sink:
Your prayers and franchise both unite,
Retrieve our land from coming blight,
Arise, with plans concerted!
Make war, until the curse shall be subverted!

DR. JAMES EDMUNDS' TESTIMONY.

Some years ago, a number of publicans, feeling annoyed at the ban which was placed upon them by the various life-assurance offices, proposed to establish an association among themselves, by which they thot to show that the prejudice against them in this respect was unfounded. The society was established and called the Monarch Life Assurance Association. Now, what was the fact? The society was only in existence five or six years, and then it became insolvent. Other societies, which imposed an extra rate of payment upon drunkards, and gave exceptional advantages to abstainers, showed large profits, and were in a most flourishing condition. From the official blue-books from the year 1851 to 1860 inclusive, it would be found that if they took carpenters, brick-layers and ordinary mechanics and laboring men; 17 out of every 2,000 died during the year; and if they took publicans, the deaths bers were 40 in every 1,000 per year. Ex.

A RELIGIOUS newspaper of this city, which often goes out of its way to oppose both methods and men in the temperance reform, delivers its latest sneer against "cheap john" temperance societies, and evidently thinks that the great church for which it lives, moves and has its being, is "singing very small" when it proposes to become a great Christian temperance society. A sort of "cheap john" pride often keeps some people from identifying themselves with "the weak things of this world." It is so much easier to be an "illuminated marble citadel, white and beautiful and strong," as the editor of the Interior says the Presbyterian church has ever been, than it is to be a life boat out among the surges. It is so much more graceful and dignified to be a church spire, pointing alway and accurately heavenward, than a city missionary down among the slums, rescuing the perishing. Go to! It does not take such a deal of faith to see how in God's providence the weak things of the world are set to confound the things (such things) that are mighty. If, as the Interior says, these "white citadels" stand up to dispel the darkness of intemperance and every other form of immorality, why in the name of all that is pressing, dont they dispel?—Signal.

It demands the exercise of a great deal of patience to endure the jibes and thrusts which the devil keeps hurling at the temperance reform, in his department of several influential newspapers which profess a Christian character. If the prince of darkness did hot seek and use a vantage ground in such directions as that, he would be a general of very limited resources, and an insignificant foe to cope with. To have three or four leading denominational papers hostile to temperance, and their knives in its vitals while pretending friendship, is the strongest weapon which satan could wield to-day, against the advancement and success of Christianity.

RAILROADS.

Poor's Manual gives some interesting R. R. statistics. The mileage at the close of 1880, in this country was 93 671, a gain of 8.2 per cent, for the year; the gross earnings were $618,401,931 net earnings $255,193,426, each showing an increase of 16 per cent over the previous year. The dividends amounted to $77-115.411, a gain of 25 per cent compared with 1879—while the increased cost shows a gain of 5.4 per cent over the year 1879. The growth of our railroad system during the past ten years has been very rapid. In 1870 there were 52,914 miles of railroad, and in 1880 there were 93,671. The gross earnings in 1870 were $9.30 per capita, in 1880, $12.27 per capita showing that while the population has increased 23 per cent in ten years the gross earnings on railroads have increased in the same time 74 per cent. The freight charges on railroads have been reduced in that time from an average on the great leading lines of 1, 682 cents a ton per mile, showihg that in the ten years the earnings have increased 74 per cent on a decreased freight charge of 83 per cent.

HERALDINGS.

Whisky yielded $67,153,974 last year, revenue to the government.

Yes, and it also yielded 600,000 drunkards; an army of paupers, criminals and outcasts. 100,000 graves in our cemeteries, with a proportionate number of orphans. Yes, it was a big yield. The question is, how long will our government allow this annual harvest to go on.

Tobacco yielded to the government last year, $42-854,991. Just how much evil it yielded is not figured up in the returns,

SMOKING IN THE PRESENCE OF WOMEN.

The following sensible extract is from Harpers's Magazine:

The woman who does not require of is man the form of respect, invites him to discard the substance, and there is one violation of the form which is recent and gross, and might well be cited as an illustration of the decay of manners. It is the practice of smoking in the society of ladies in public and private places, when driving, walking, sailing or sitting. There are proud chevaliers who would be honestly amazed if they were told they did not behave like gentlemen, who, sitting with a lady on a hotel piazza, or strolling in a public park, take out a cigar, light it and puff as tranquilly as if they were alone in their rooms. Or a young man comes along upon the deck of a steamer and blows clouds of tobacco smoke into their faces, without even remarking that tobacco is disagreeable to some people. A man who unconcernedly sings false, betrays that he has no ear for music; and a man who smokes in this way, shows that he is no gentleman."

STRANGE. .

That men will not go against that which destroys them.

That the only enemy men will love is rum.

That this great and mighty nation should spend $47,636,495 for the support of the gospel, and $700,-000,000 for liquor.

That taking a man into a saloon to "treat" him is not called ill-treating him.

That those who are the most crooked in their ways are generally the most stringent in their circumstances.

That this nation in looking into its prisons, almshouses, penitentiaries, asylums and reformatories, does not stand up and strike a mighty blow at the rum traffic.

ONE WEEK ago an advertisement of the article to be mentioned here would have been refused a place in the RESCUE at any price, because of an utter lack of confidence in the honesty of the great mass of such ads, and because it seems out of place in a family paper to be always shoving quack remedies into the family's face, and trying to cram them with lies. For the latter reasons an advertisement of it would be still declined. But last week a sudden attack of rumatism made the writer quite lame, and caused much suffering day and night. "Try Jacob's oil," said some one; "it cured my mother." Bah, nonesense, quackery. But, getting worse under other remedies, another said, "Try Jacob's oil, it cured me," etc. Well, it was tried; the suffering joints were given one application. In an hour after, the pains ceased, and a good night's rest ensued. Another application in the morning, and by 3 P. M. of that day, all vestiges of the lameness and soreness had disappeared. The cure was complete for this time sure. This notice has not been asked nor paid for, but it is given for the benefit of any one who suffers from that very unwelcome intruder—rumatism. This don't mean that this remedy will cure corns, baldness, heart disease, late hours, smoking, bashfulness, phylloxera, codling moth, infidelity, wooden legs, insanity, false teeth, egotism and dyspepsia, as Lydia Pinkham's picture claims to; but it did cure one case of rumatism with wondrous promptitude, which had reduced the weight of the patient 8 pounds in one week.

PACIFIC RAILROADS.—According to Secretary Kirkwood's report the gross and net earnings of the Pacific roads for the year ending June 30th 1881, are as follows:

Union Pacific—gross earnings $22,765,752; operating expenses, $11,290,842: Total number of miles operated, 1,819.

Central Pacific—Gross earnings; $22,893,344; operating expenses and rentals, $13,502,504, net earnings, $9,390,840; average number of miles operated, 2,614.

Northern Pacific—Gross earnings, $2,931,802; operating expenses, $1,946,157; net earnings, $985,645; number of miles operated, 754.

The last annual report of the operations of the Texas Pacific road has not heen received at the department. Secretary Kirkwood reports, however, that the work upon the road is being pushed rapidly forward, and anticipated that the line will be completed and trains running to El Paso on the first day of January next.

The Secretary suggests that the Thurman act of May 7, 1878 should be so amended as to embrace the subsidized portion of the Kansas division of the Union Pacific railway.—Chronicle.

Of course, owning a railroad is very hard work, but it would be a very pleasant occupation to own a pretty good share in a shoe factory or a farm or a flour mill, or a newspaper whose gross receipts are 22 million dollars a year, and half of that net profit.

MR. T. H. LAINE, of Santa Clara, is the legal advocate of the drunkard makers before the Supreme Court, in an endeavor to get the righteous and honest decision of Judge Morrison upon the Sunday law reversed, and that day prostituted to be a red letter day of vice and debauchery and crime. It is stated that Mr. Laine preaches and conducts religious services on the Sabbath. His hearers must feel complimented on the fact that their spiritual pastor is the voluntary tool of the devil to do his very dirtiest criminal work—for pay. Defending Guiteau and making the law harmless to clearly convicted murderers, for pay, is virtuous conduct as compared with the infamy of taking a bribe to destroy the Sabbath in this state and nation. Men who know no Sabbath and believe in no God or Sabbath or laws of morality, are not chargeable with any dishonor or dishonesty in undertaking such a case, but a minister, preacher or professor of the christian religion who does so, puts himself outside the pale of any charitable consideration. Judas Iscariot has been long held up as a disreputable character, but he was a tame affair compared with the modern menagerie of his type of animal.

If we should carry with us a little vessel of burning asafœtida, red pepper, caoutchouc or brimstone as we journey by rail or boat, in city or out of town, aud hold it so that the incense of the burning drugs would be wafted into the noses and eyes of our fellow-passengers, we would be voted both ungentlemanly and unchristian. If we were to carry a jug of some unclean liqnid, half as filthy as tobacco spittle, and from its spout pour the contents, here a little and there a good deal, after the manner in which the slaves of the weed eject from their mouths puddlefuls of the unsightly expectoration, we would be denounced as unclean. In either case, we would be asked to leave any public conveyance which we might thus defile.—Ex.

WENDELL PHILLIPS is a clear and strong thinker. He uses the English language with great power. He forsees the greatest danger to the Republic from the "curse of intemperance," and his vision is clear.—Ex.

MISS F. E. WILLARD.

The Daily Post of Nov. 30, contained a portrait of Miss Willard, and the following incidents of her life and work:

The temperance movement in America, with many variations of expression and methods of working, is eminently carried on by women.

This movement, especially that branch of it known as the Women's Temperance Movement, is developing an unexpected ability in American Women for organization and administration.

Much of intelligent action by women workers in the temperance cause, has been originated and guided by the lady whose portrait heads this colum. She is described as having no equal among the members of the Woman's Temperance Christian Union as an organizer. She plans work, and is the life and inspiration of the workers. She has the perception and ready tact and strength to utilize ability of any degree, and knows where to place every one who is willing to assist the movement with which her name is closely identified.

Miss Willard is now in the prime of her activity, not far from fifty years of age, but looking younger. She was born in the East. When she was about three years old, her parents removed West, first settling in Oberlin, Ohio, where impressions of a salutary character were doubtless made on a young mind quick to perceive and sensitive to feel the excellence of well directed knowledge. When she was eight years of age, her parents settled in Janesville, Wisconsin.

Her education was superintended by her mother, who had an excellent governess as her assistant. Its method was highly practical. To know, was made the incentive to do. Hence the home journal, the debating circle, and so forth. Then what advantages for the physical nature in the generous expanse and wholesome air of the prairie!

So grew Frances in body and mind and heart until eighteen. Then she went to Milwaukee, where one term was spent in the college founded by Catherine Beecher. Evanston, Illinois, was her next place of abode, the home selected by her parents as the best for their family, because containing the advantage of the healthiest domestic life with facilities for self-improvement. At Evanston her father died, in 1867. After graduating, Frances taught in Evanston, Pittsburg, Pennyslvania and Lima, New York state. From 1868 to 1870, she made a trip to Europe and the East, giving one year of the time to study in the French capital.

Upon her return a wider field of activity awaited her. Her ability to speak in public had been discovered, and invitations from the Northwest poured in upon her. A year later her admiring townspeople elected her President of the Women's College, at Evanston, which position she resigned in 1874, when the college became incorporated with the University.

She now accepted an invitation to devote her energies to the cause of Women's Temperance Union. Her work was varied in 1876-7 by assistance rendered to Messrs. Moody and Sankey in their meetings at Boston. In 1878 she took charge of the Chicago Post, in the place of her brother, just deceased. This proved a failure, and her appointment as President of the Illinois State Woman's Christian Temperance Union succeeded as a grateful change from the editorial supervision of a non-paying journal. There is nothing surprising in the statement that Miss Willard is a woman's suffragist. A woman who can plan work as she can, associated with thousands of others of similar capacity, as a matter of course, understands their influence, and the step to claim the right of its positive direction in politics is quite a natural one. We shall see what we shall see. The country is young yet.

Everybody knows what influence Miss Willard possessed at the Executive Mansion during the Hayes administration. Why President Grant escaped her solicitations against the use of intoxicants in the White House, we don't know. Perhaps her plans of action had not been sufficiently matured at the time. Mr. and Mrs. Hayes treated her with marked consideration, and the teetotal example of the White House was, between 1877 and 1881, universally quoted from either the standpoint of jest or of admiration. When General Garfield assumed office, he was solicited to continue the abstinence policy of domestic management begun by his predecessor, and President Arthur has in his turn received the same request from the same lips, those of the cultured, capable, earnest woman who is the subject of this sketch.

As Presideet of the late annual convention at Washington, D. C., of the Woman's National Christian Temperance Union, Miss Willard showed ability perhaps more conspicuous than previously. The convention began on the twenty-sixth October last. It was held in the Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church, which it will be remembered is the edifice in which Mr. and Mrs. Hayes worshipped. In her opening address Miss Willard announced the organization of several new departments of work by the Union, notably that of hygiene, with a woman physician as superintendent to be duplicated in each state, and also in each local union. The most significant point of the address was its allusion to the third or "Home Protection party, which came into organized existence at Lake Bluff, Illinois, several months ago, and to which have already subscribed the State Unions of Illinois, Maine, N. H. and Del. Miss Willard contended that the moral issues on which the old parties had arisen ceased to exist, the parties had no more call to be, that divided against themselves, they cannot much longer stand; and that a union of both parties is rapidly being cemented on the basis of total prohibition, one of whose planks is the full ballot and complete enfranchisement of woman. Among the considerations brot to bear on the subject were these; the men who will naturally unite in this party will also strongly support Civil Service Reform, anti-monopoly and anti-Mormon legislation and commit the organization heartily to the cause of national and compulsory education. The best elements of the disintegrating parties of the past will gravitate toward this.

We have no space to give the proceedings of the convention in detail. They were full of vim. On the last day of the convention the whole body went by invitation to call upon President Arthur. It is recorded that the speech addressed to him by Miss Willard brot tears into his eyes.

Enough has been said to show that the Womans Christian Temperance Union under President Willard is doing a work whose developments promise to be large beyond present conception.

SAVE THE YOUNG.

BY REV. CHAS. GARRETT.

Let us remember that the destruction is not finished, that the scene is not like a battle-field, where the aching heart is relieved by the knowledge that the conflict is ended; no, new, while I am speaking, strong drink is rioting and destroying in our very midst, chasing our sons to ruin and our daughters to shame. Drunkenness, like fire, will quickly burn itself out if not supplied with fresh fuel. This we all know; and yet. though myriads have perished, we see the fire is nearly as vast aud terrible as ever. Hence there must be daily supplies provided, and those supplies are England's sons and danghters. Aye! yonder; around the mouth of hell, I see a terrible sight; there are clustering myriads of immortal souls whom drink is hurrying to eternal woe. Yes, there they are, men and women, harlots and burglars, and brutal; blaspheming God and cursing their own souls. They crowd each other down, sinking with a hell within to a darker hell beyond; and yet, though they perish at the rate of at least 50,000 in a year, the supplies are continued; and I see coming from our English homes those who shall fill their places, and follow in their steps. Still the prison is crowded, the mad-house tenanted, and the rope of the gallows swings. On every breeze I hear the hoarse voice of the destroyer crying in his demoniac thirst for souls, "Wanted; wanted; wanted." Fathers, and mothers, teachers, pastors, listen to that cry, Wanted! Wanted what? our gold and silver, our wealth and power? No; these he rejects with scorn, for the riches of the world and the glory of them are his! But wanted our sons and daughters to fill the place of the 50,000 drunkards who are rushing this year over the dark precipice of ruin. Wanted, ten thousand fair girls to fill the place of those now dying in misery and shame. Wanted! twice ten thousand of bright-eyed boys to supply the mad-house and the gaol. Wanted! aye, and mind you, unless we at once arise and stand between them and ruin, they will be had! Listen, fathers, mothers, friends, to that dread cry; a cry ten thousands times more doleful than the olden cry—"Bring out your dead." This is not a demand for the dead, but for the living! Look at the little band that clings around you. See how they shrink from the scene of terror, and cry to you, oh! mother, father, teacher, friend. "We are ignorant, we are weak. Lead us not into temptation." And will you? Teachers, I appeal to you, because you have proved your love to the little ones by making many sacrifices already. Parents, I appeal to you, because your hearts are bound up with these children's welfare. Christians, I appeal to you, because like your great Master you love little children. Do not listen to the attempt of the great destroyer to lull you into indifference. There is danger of your children becoming the victims; they may escape, but they may not; and the brighter the child the greater the danger. Look into the bright and loving eyes, and tell me which of them can you spare? Think of the terrible meaning of the word "drunkard," a word so dark that poverty, sickness, insanity is bright beside it. And when you have looked at it till you have arrived at a dim outline of its dread meaning, ask, "Is any sacrifice too great for me to make to preserve my child from this?"—The Temperance Standard.

WOMEN SUFFRAGE IN WYOMING TERRITORY.

The following letter from Governor Hoyt, has been sent to the Tap Root for publication:

TER. OF WYOMING, EXECUTIVE DEP'T
CHEYENNE, May 21st, 1881.

"ELI T. MARSH, ESQ., FRANKFORT, N. Y.—Dear Sir: To your esteemed favor of recent date, concerning woman's suffrage, I respond with pleasure, observing the order of your inquiries.

"1st. Women are in full citizenship in Wyoming, enjoying every political right and privilege accorded to men.

"2nd. The women of Wyoming do generally vote at our elections, whether municipal, county or territorial.

"3rd. There is so much of satisfation among our people with the present order of things, that, during my three years residence and careful observation, I have never once heard the question of its permanency raised by man or woman.

"4th. The principle works well. I have noted many excellent results, and not one that can be called evil. No citizen of this Territory will deny that we have better laws, better officers and a better condition of society, on account of womans suffrage. Its influence upon men is excellent, and I have yet to discover the slightest particular where it is prejudicial in its influence upon the women themselves. Its adoption thruout our country, and in all lands blessed with governments looking towards freedom, can only be a question of time.

Very respectfully,
"JOHN W. HOYT."

Read the above, and then doubt, if you can, that it is woman's mission to have and enjoy the full franchise of a citizen of a free republic, as well as to raise the men of the future. ELI T. MARSH.
Frankfort, N. Y., June 6th, 1881.

APPRECIATED.—The Wine Dealers Gazette says Dr. Scott of St. John's church, whom it styles the Nestor of Presbyterianism in this city, made Thanksgiving day the occasion of a pulpit condemnation of the Sunday law. He dont want to see drunkenness and blasphemy and wife beating and murder restricted on the Sabbath, and is afraid the churches and the Christian cause will be injured if the churches join in the movement. The Gazette voices the opinion of the drunkard makers in "congratulating St. John's Church on having a learned and venerable pastor," who is perfectly of their way of thinking. The report is probably incorrect; for the words attributed to the gentleman are as near as possible those the devil would have used, had he taken a S. F. pulpit on that day.

What an absurdity it is to continue the barbarism of teaching the children the falsehood that holesale and retale must be spelled wholesale and retail, and that sail and sale spel the same word; that nice spels nise, sacrifice spels sacrifize and pies spels pize and wise spels wize and lose spels luze and loose, luse. This horrible mutilation of the best language of the world, the injustice of wasting a large portion of the valuable school years of all the children; the folly of making ours a sealed up language to the foreigner, will never at all cease till more people and papers and writers DO something towards spelling conscienciously.

RETURNS RECEIVED.—During the past week the following Lodges have filed Grand Lodge returns with the G. W. S. and their receipt is acknowledged: Nos. 17, 32, 56, 157, 174, 204, 242, 256, 375, 413, 445 and 465.

CORRECTION.—The Home for Orphans receipts as published last week, M Guisa should have been credited with $5. The omission of the figure $5, made an apparent discrepancy of that amount in the total footing, which this explanation will rectify.

WORK OF THE LECTURERS.—From the November reports of the Grand Lecturers the following items of general interest are gleaned:

JAMES W. WEBB delivered 30 public lectures and 33 addresses to Schools, Bands of Hope and lodges. He addressed 2506 adults and 1060 children. Total, 3566 persons. He traveled 505 miles, received $119.40 in collections and expended $59.02 in traveling expenses.

C. N GOULDING delivered 22 public lectures, addressing 2815 adults and 242 children. Total, 3057. He organized one new lodge and traveled 757 miles. His collections amounted to $88.60 and Charter fee $15. Total, $103.60. His traveling expenses amounted to $129.10.

WILL C. KING delivered 25 public lectures, addressing 2445 adults and 180 children. Total 2625. He organized two new lodges and traveled 727 miles His collections amounted to $53.45 and charter fees $30, total $83,45. His traveling expenses amounted to $61.05.

HUGH R. HUGHES delivered 25 public lectures, addressing 1291 adults and 362 children. Total 1,653 persons. He organized six new lodges and traveled 360 miles. His collections amounted to $51.30 and charter fees $90. Total $141.10. His traveling expenses amounted to $75.12.

WILLIAM CROWHURST delivered 15 public lectures addressing 930 adults and 210 children. Total 1,140. He organized two new lodges and traveled 553 miles. His collections amounted to $34.85 and charter fees $30 more. Total $64.85. His traveling expenses amounted to $64 50.

Mrs. Emily P. Stevens was confined to her home in San Francisco during the greater portion of the month by illness and rendered some local service which is not reported in detail.

The five lecturers who were actively employed as is shown above, traveled an aggregate of 2902 miles, delivered 118 public lectures, to audiences comprising 12,041 persons of whom 9987 were adults and 2054 children. Their collections and charter fees aggregated 512,40. Their expenses $388.79 They also added eleven new Lodges to the list. Not a bad showing for dull November."

New Lodges.—During the month of October 4 new Lodges were instituted, in November 15 and so far in December 3. So that twenty-two new Lodges have beon organized during the first ten weeks of the new fiscal year.

Look At It:—Have you examined the Lodge Directory to see if the name, number and night of meeting as also the name and Post office address of the Lodge Deputy of your Lodge are properly recorded ?

Delinquents.—Quite a numder of Lodges have failed or their Deputies have so far neglected to file the result of the vote of the Lodge, upon the question of the change in regalia. Printed blanks were furnished each Lodge Deputy, upon which to report the result of said vote. There are over one hundred Lodges yet to report, and it is urged that these reports be properly forwarded, as the result must soon be certified up and it is desirable that the vote be as full and as nearly complete as possible .....There are some seventy odd Lodges whose Quarterly Returns have not yet been received at the G. W. S. office. Deputies who have neglected to forward the Quarterly Returns of their Lodge are requested to forward them immediately, if they desire to avoid being published in the delinquent list.

An Explanation.—In the list of warrants paid during the last fiscal year, as shown in the Journal of the proceedings of the Grand Lodge, No. 81. page 38, appears as having been paid to Albert D, Wood for addressing wrappers, etc." Capt. Wood objects to the "etc." as being insufficient; whereas it was all that could be added within the space of the rules. In justice to Bro. Wood, it may be stated that the entire amount (save two dollars which was paid to a clerk for the service of addressiug the wrappers), was paid to the post office for franked envelopes and wrappers which were used in the distribution of printed matter in behalf of the Grand Lodge, to Lodge Deputies and ministers of the gospel.

Economy is Wealth(?).—So remarked the Sacramento postmaster the other day, when he received advices to pay ten cents per postal order to a citizen when it cost the sender a fee of just ten cents to secure the order. Likewise, when a letter is registered at an expense of ten cents additional, to convey three green postage stamps, estimated at a value of nine cents, to buy a ten cent book, and the sender forgets to pay the ten cent fee, which is paid by the receiver. So, too, with the party who sends a registered letter with a punctured dime in it. As was remarked, "but its an expensive way to get off a bad dime, to pay a good one in postage on it." If postal clerks were permitted to do so, they could doubtless relate many shrewd devices by sharp men. But it is always best to be safe.

The Youth's Temperance Banner Weekly.—Commencing January 1st next, the National Temperance Society and Publishing House will issue the Youth's Temperance Banner, which has heretofore been a monthly publication, weekly, in answer to the repeated requests of many temperance people and organizations. The Grand Lodge of California has several times memorialized the R. W. G. L. to provide a weekly juvenile temperance paper, and in answer to this memorial the R. W. G. L. at its last session appointed a committee to arrange for such a publication. As a result of the labors of this committee, the N. T. S. and P. H. has decided to undertake the publication of the Youth's Temperance Banner in weekly form. The assurance is given that the same high standard of excellence which has heretofore characterized the paper will be maintained. It will contain "Blackboard Illustrations on Temperance," under the supervision of Mrs. W. F. Crafts; a department of "Temperance Schools and Scientific Instruction," conducted by Miss Julia Colman; original articles by some of the ablest writers, musical selections, selections for reading, declamation and recitation, and in every way the paper will be made acceptable to the juvenile workers, and especially adapted for use and distribution in Bands of Hope, Juvenile Temples and Sunday-schools generally. The subscription price will be 75 cents per year for single copies. But where five or more copies are ordered at one time, 50 cents will pay for a year's subscription, making the price less than a cent per copy. Sample copies can be had upon application to J. N. Stearns, No. 58 Reade street New York city. It is to be hoped that a generous subscription list will be made up and forwarded from this state, and Bands of Hope, Juvenile Temples and Sunday-schools everywhere are urged to send for sample copies and subscription lists, and make every exertion to sustain the Youth's Temperance Banner.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS.

Pursuant to adjourment the Board met at the Home, Tuesday Dec 6th, Called to order in usual form by the President, Mrs. Thompson.

Roll call, Mrs. Rix, and Mrs. Stevens G. W. V. T. noted absent. Minutes of last meeting approved. Officers report accepted. Financial Secretary, reports the amount for warrants drawn since Nov 1st, $2,441.89. Matron reports number of children in the Home Oct 31st 115. Admitted during the month of November thirteen, discharged two, leaving the number 126, at close of the month. All well, except a few cases of—whooping cough. Reports from standing Committee accepted. Several applications for the admission of children to the Home were received, and favorably considered. Applications for the adoption of children, were also received, and referred to the Secretary.

Under new business the Secretary was instructed to send a circular to the Lodges asking for a contribution of one dollar from each Lodge, toward a Christmas fnnd enabling the ladies to provide a Christmas dinner for the children at the Home and buy them some Christmas presents—after the conclusion of the business, Sister Mayhew, called the attention of the Board to the following donations from Red Bluff:

From Red Bluff Rand of Hope, $1.20 toward the Christmas fund. From Ida and Louise Kersey, pictures, books, flatiron and a large doll. From Allie Mayhew, one and a half dozen picture cards. From Red Bluff Lodge 192, a large box of clothing, numbering seventy garments, of every kind. Twenty-six pairs of stockings, two dozen pocket handkerchiefs, and sundry articles too numerous to mention. From Mrs Pierce of Red Bluff, (not a member of the order), a handsome quilt. The secretary reported the receipt of $5 from Valley Lodge No. 293, for the Orphan Home Christmas Fund.

The following donations received at the Home, since the last meeting as reported by the matron: From Mr. Mc Crea of Vallejo. two boxes of apples for thanksgiving. From Mrs Adams of Vallejo, a suit of clothes, overcoat, hat and nine shirts.

A vote of thanks was tendered the above donors, and the secretary instructed to report these donations in tne weekly Rescue; also solicit Christmas donations for the Home thru the same source. Any reader of the Rescue, inclined to contribute anything for the Good Templars' orphans' Festival, can address Mrs. E B Thompson, President of the Board of Lady Managers, 1531 Golden Gate Avenue, or the secretary, 150 Ninth St., San Francisco. All donations for this purpose, will be gratefully received by the board.

Fraternally submitted in F. H. and C.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

District Lodge of Los Angeles county will meet at Los Angeles, Dec. 31, at 10 A. M.

District Lodge of Yolo County will convene at Blacks Station January 6th and 7th. Friday evening the 6th a public entertainment, and on the 7th at 9.30, A. M. the District Lodge will commence its second session of the eighth year. Faithful Lodge No. 431 will do the honors of the occasion. All Good Templars are invited to meet with us and share our hospitality. M. C. Winchester, D. S.

Ed. Rescue:—The next sessien of Amador Co. D. Lodge will be held at Oleta, Friday, Feb. 3d, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Jno. W. Perry,
Dist. Deputy.

El Dorado County.—The District Deputy for El Dorado county, Bro. J. H. Gilmore, is proving himself an earnest Good Templar, as also an efficient officer. Under a recent date he writes: "I wish to give you a little news from old El Dorado county. Last Friday night. Dec. 3d, at El Dorado Lodge, No. 462 the W. C. T, was absent; I filled the chair and initiated 4 of the 6 who sent in their names when Bro. Hughes lectured. I also organized a Band of Hope during recess, consisting of 12 mem bers including myself. We will get several more when we get the new pledge. I was elected Supt of the Band. Name of Band, El Dorado; time of meeting set for Sunday at 10 A. M.

Saturday Dec. 3d I walked to Pleasant Valley about ten miles distant to visit Pleasant Valley Lodge, I. O. G. T., by request of Bro Hughes I initiated 10 new members. I did not expect more than 2 or 3, so I was quite surprised * * *
At El Eorado Sunday two of the dram shops were doing business, apparently thru their back doors. I think they will probably be prosecuted. We have all the stores to agree to close. Eldorado D. D. would appreciate your presence Dec. 21 at Placerville if you could make it convenient to be present with us. We anticipate a pleasant and profitable time."

YUBA AND SUTTER D. L.

The Sutter Co. Farmer has an interesting report of last session of this spirited district lodge, Dec. 7th, from which the following is extracted: 12 lodges and four Bands of Hope were represented by 84 Good Templars present at roll call. Five lodges and two bands were unrepresented.

After the usual proceedings, reports etc., officers for ensuing year were elected and installed. H. S. Graves D. D., Ada C. Plumb D. V. T., C. J. Covillaud and Chas. S. Brooks D. S. and D. A. S.

The following resolutions were adopted:

1. That we as a district lodge are reassured in our work by the events of the past quarter, and that we call upon the fraternity in particular and all lovers of humanity in general to rally around our standard and to aid us in our determined warfare against the one evil of modern civilization that totally overshadows every other curse.

3d That in our opinion the greatest amount of good is done by our regular lecturers and organizers , and that it would be expedient to increase the district and Grand Lodge taxes so as to sustain an increased force of such laborers in the field, also that we elect District lecturers for this district, and also that we recommend to the Grand Lodge to fix the salary of our General Superintendent of Juvenile Work at such a figure as will secure the whole time of that officer to the organization of such work thruout the state.

3rd. That this District Lodge recommend to all subordinate lodges in this jurisdiction to hold open meetings as often as practicable, at least once every quarter.

5th. That we heartily sympathize with Marysville, Wheatland and Meridian Lodges in their endeavors to enforce our temperance laws, and that we recommend to all subordinate lodges in this district to contribute more substancial aid, as it may be required by these lodges in this work,

6th. That we tender a vote of thanks to the Marysville Appeal and the Sutter County Farmer for the interest they have taken in our meetings as shown by the gratuitous notices given us, and also Yuba City Lodge No. 440 for its kind reception, and to Alpine lodge No. 226 for its generous donatiou of money.

But No. 4 was lost which read as follows:

4th. That hereafter, we vote as we pray, for none but consistent temperance men to make and administer our laws.

Lodge proceeded to choose two District Lecturers. Rev. C. A. Bateman and Rev. L. R. Featherstone were nominated and unanimously elected. They both made stirring speeches, which were loudly applauded.

Next session is to be held in Wheatland two days: second day limited to discussion of temperance measures and resolutions.

Committee on temperance literature and laws continued. Session was harmonious, entertainment in the evening in M. E. South Church; good program and distribution of temperance tracts.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

A SURPRISED CHINAMAN.

About twenty-five years ago, during a pretty long wait in Hong Kong, an attempt was made to get at some inkling of Chinese literature. The ship's comprador could read and write English a little. The comprador is the market man who makes all purchases on shore and supplies the ship with all daily needs etc. In a memorandum book the words ship, captain, sailor, shore, potatoes, chickens and every article of fruit and vegetable in common use and quite a vocabulary of ordinary words were written —and under these the comprador made the Chinese group of crosses and wiggles that spelled that word in his language. These with a little practice could be easily copied by watching the original closely. The pupil got along very nicely, but without the faintest idea of the sounds expressed; the figures from one up were added, and dollars and cents, and last an order on the comprador for blank dollars and cents was copied and mastered, that is, by closely watching the copy mark for mark.

About this time an old Chinaman who had, been engaged shoeing a number of the crew came for his pay. The boys owed him altogether $9.75. Not having the change convenient, the idea occurred to try on the new accomplishment of writing an order in Chinese: the book was spread out, in the privacy of the captain's room, and the order drawn, "Fat Jack, Sunwa, please pay the bearer nine dollars and 75 cents—on account of Ship———captain's name ——" That was the way it read. Fat Jack was the comprador's English name and Sunwa was the name of his house, each house being named there. Coming on deck again, and handing the order, quite as a matter of course to the old man, he looked startled; pointing solemnly to the writing, he said "you makee that? you? you? you? He repeated the question with added emphasis several times. Yes, of course, not good? what is the matter with it? Oh, yes, good, welly good, and then he read it and I was surprised at the classical beauty and accuracy of what I had written, but could not pronounce a word of. Ah, said the Chinaman, plenty time you come China, no can cheatee you.

There were groups of Chinese on board, carpenters fitting up berths, tinners fixing cooking apparatus, stevedores receiving cargo and visitors looking at the chances for a passage.

The man with the order was so delighted with the idea of a foreigner being such a Chinese scholar, that he had to go and explain the incident to every group, and each group looked aft at the writer and laughed. And the last we saw of the old man, he was standing up in the boat going ashore, showing the writing to the boatmen, and they were all looking at that learned writer and laughing. It was the first time they had met a foreigner who was such an accomplished Chinese scholar.

MANNERS.

The juniors of the Band of Hope, in addition to all the other good things they acquire in their meetings and teachings, might as well as not get a few useful hints as to politeness and deportment. Those words dont mean the manner of sweeping into a ball-room like a duck alighting in a pond, or the practice of any French theatrical antics whatever.

But there are some of the common decencies of life, that are most monstrously and habitually violated by many grown people in California, against which it is our bounden duty to warn the children. First and foremost among the men of brutal manners, are the tobacco users; not the rowdy, and hoodlum and tramp at all, but men, who, many of them, are excellent people in every other respect, and deem themselves pretty fair specimens of gentlemen.

For instance, half an hour ago, one who had to enquire for a registered letter at the post office, found the clerks engaged with several others waiting; one of the latter, who had to go thru a long job of registering a package, kept a filthy, abominable cigar of the most odious flavor in steady blast; sending a puff or two of tobacco nastiness and onions combined, in upon the clerks inside, who did not seem to mind it at all, then puffing a blast at the parties waiting at the window on his right and on his left in turn.

From, there business called to the money order department to collect some payments. Generally you find two or three parties ahead of you there, and have to await your turn. As frequently happens, on this occasion a human pork occupied more than the usual time with enquiries etc.; the moment he saw there was a chance to annoy respectable people, two ladies among the rest, he took a foul half smoked cigar from his pocket, lit it, and began and continued to fill that little place with an infamously poisoned air tnat we all had to breathe or fight.

Now perhaps that man did not know any better than a pig does; perhaps it did not occur to him that he was acting brutally. He may have been in all other respects a decent man. But what he did was very close akin to spitting in the faces of those ladies and decent male citizens that were there. One who is by instinct and training a gentleman, would as much recoil from doing one of these acts as the other, altho the world would say there is a difference in their vileness.

Against smoking into people's faces and spitting on their clothes and enacting the tobacco nuisance, we will not have to train the boys of the Band of Hope; but those in charge of the bands should cherish an ambition that the boy and girl who are raised under their frequent instruction shall be distinguishable as they grow up by their civil, polite and genteel deportment. Lessons received there will never be forgotten; and probably no lessons will be remembered in after life with more gratitude than those which have helped to make them respected and beloved of their neighbors.

THE TWINS.

One great benefit occurring from the offer of prizes for the best essays on Tobacco and Intemperance is the thorough manner in which the subjects have been studied scientifically, morally and socially: and the cons registered not only on the minds but the hearts of the students who have so perseveringly investigated the annals.

It is a great impetus to reform, as to every earthly success to be backed by money; and let us hope as the Twins are in such able hands as the prosecuting, not lawyer but doctor, that some philanthropist will attack the other odd children of the numerous family of Evil—namely, immorality, gambling, intemperance in any of the passions that make men or women brutal or wicked.

In the recent remarkable agitation upon Tobacco, one could but remark the unenviable light in which Sir Walter Raleigh figures on the page of history; and compare the opposite record Dr. McDonald is registering. This is a case where an M. D. is trying to kill instead of cure.

If every non-smoker would refuse to employ any one using tobacco, he might greatly aid in stopping the indulgence. It would then take the form of a business transaction. It ought to take a legal form. If a man commit murder he is arrested and placed where he can do no more bodily harm; but if men persist in slowly torturing their friends by the use of tobacco, or compelling their wives and children to take each day a portion of the poison, that does not always kill but sometimes paralyzes; sometimes taking one form of lingering disease, at other times various forms of suffering: there is no law to reach them, or protect their victims.

If the full death record of all the murders and suicides from the use of tobacco were placed before those who smoke, would it not astonish them into reform? BETH.

POINTING A GUN.

There can be no necessity or utility in pointing unloaded guns or pistols at any one in sport. It is putting some one's life in imminent danger. Because people do this, some poor innocent is being ever now and then, killed or maimed for life. There is perhaps not so much danger in pointing guns that are known to be loaded, for then one is careful to avoid firing them.

In the year 1854, a gentleman circumnavigated this globe with the writer, who, in his youth, made himself and his family a life sorrow, by an act which tho it seemed innocent, was actually criminal. He was a native of England, and on one occasion, before he had ever left his native village, he was out in the fields shooting birds; just before reaching his home he fired off the gun, stood it in the hall and went to dinner. There were two or three girls of the neighbors dining or lunching with them on that occasion, and after their meal, they and his sisters went to romping with the young man. In their rollicksome play, they chased him down stairs into the hall, where he picked up the gun he had fired a half hour previously and pointed it at his sister on the stairs; "there," said he, "if you come a step further, I'll shoot you;" and as they came laughing down the stairs, he pulled the trigger and a charge of shot went into the body of his sister whom he tenderly loved; and when he died at over 60 years of age, she was an aged, helpless, penniless cripple, having been so thru life, and supported by the author of her misery.

While the family were at table, a servant had seen a hawk around the premises, had loaded the gun, but failing to get a shot at the bird, had left it loaded where he found it. And there may be a similar result with any one who is ever guilty of a similar folly. It has always from boyhood up been a solemn law with me, never, under any circumstances, to point a gun, pistol, or the empty barrel of one, at any person, no matter if I had just looked thru it and been ever so sure of its harmlessness. In that way, after a very large practice with firearms from almost childhood, no accident has ever happened with them, nor an approach to any.

NEW BOY CANNERY.

MY DEAR JUVENILE BRETHREN:—You remember I wrote you last spring about the salmon fisheries of Astoria—the many miles of nets drawn across the river, and the numerous boats and fishermen, and the great canneries.

Now those canneries are still; many of the fishermen are gone; the nets and boats are housed, and the poor salmon are enjoying a respite from the terrible havoc they suffered during the summer.

The laws of Oregon protect them during the fall and winter. The law protects them on Sundays during the spring and summer also, and then they could "run" and play and enjoy themselves in safety, for the people observed the law, and saw that unprincipled men did not violate it.

But now, while the salmon are having a long rest from the perils of the nets, the people are making miles of new nets, building hundreds of new boats, and six new canneries—five for salmon and one for boys. This latter is a very large one, and they say was much needed, as the many enterprising men engaged in the boy fisheries are catching more than could be canned in the old one. Those engaged in the boy fisheries are uninterrupted by the laws, and the good, accommodating people pay for their new cannery and all the expenses of running it, and leave the enterprising men in the business nothing to do but to extend their almost impassible system of nets, and as the boys are caught, convey them from the nets to the cannery. (They call it "jail," probably, to distinguish it from the salmon canneries.) It is said that the salmon are not protected by law because of any kindly feelings the people have for them, but because there is money in them.

It is regarded as quite "fanatical" and "foolhardy" to advocate even a day's protection for boys. There seems to be no money in them, except to the bar-fishermen and boy-cannerymen, and hence the parents say to them, "Go ahead, spread your nets, rake them in, can them up, and tax the city for all your expenses, and the gross proceeds shall be yours."

Boys, is there really no money in us? and are we therefore unworthy the protection that a salmon is afforded? Well, then, let's shy around the vile nets, (playing them a sturgeon trick once in a while) and console ourselves with the remembrance that we'll have a vote by and by, and then we'll show them where the money is. Mind you, "there's a good time coming," and our glorious juvenile enterprise is just the means, and the only means, to hasten that "good time."

Yours fraternally, T. J. ALLEY.

SAN DIEGO BAND OF HOPE.

This Band deserves more than a passing notice, Bro. Hotchkiss, the very efficient president had arranged for me to address it the first night after I arrived. It numbers about 100, meets in the beautiful Odd Fellows Hall, the lodge, I. O. G. T. paying the rent. A committee of the band had been appointed to prepare a program of exercises and did their work well, leading in my last meeting at Hortons Hall right royally. The band has lately sent $5 to D. C. Cook, 148 Madison St. Chicago for papers books, etc. The interest and attention is very good. I write this partly to rehearse two incidents that Bro. Hotchkiss told the Band; they are good for others to hear.

When the R. R. company sent the first locomotive to this city they searched for a good sober man as engineer, and selected a Good Templar in the East and sent him out to California as a man they could trust. When it was all ready to be run on the track a large number of people went out with wine to drink and to make speeches, and the papers reported that "all drank except the engineer, a Good Templar. As my little boy and I happened to be on the wharf when it arrived, we had the honor of pulling on the rope that hauled it ashore, and so I have just written him that a Good Templar is the engineer, and that will please him, for he is a Band of Hope boy. I also noticed and called his attention to it at the time, that among all the hundreds of railroad men and with all the hurry and excitement we never heard one oath. This railroad company does not allow swearing or profanity. They strongly favor temperance. The other incident was this:

Not 1,000 miles from here, a young man of good temperance parents was appointed clerk in a large railroad office. Forgetting his training he became somewhat dissipated, and lost his situation and salary. Afterwards he quit drinking and became a Good Templar. The lodge welcomed him heartily. But had he been a Good Templar at the start, he would not have lost his good place. So Band of Hope boys if true to their pledge have a better chance than boys who drink. J. W. Webb.

THAT TRIAL.

Let no one suppose that only the assassin of our late President is tried for murder now in Washington. It is the whole system, spirit and policy of professional office seekers and politicians which is sifted like wheat, and has the normal issues of its drift paraded before the public.

To the victor belongs the spoil. The end justifies the means.

Wonder if lunacy a la convenience would pardon its brother, if by the grace of God (or some other means) it should succeed in realization of its loftiest aspiration (i. e. to become President of the U. S.) and just at the moment of complete victory be shot down like a dog by its brother in faith and policy?

It really seems as tho that judicial acumen in Washington lacks the snap to meet the most brazen sophistry and impudence as it deserves. Never before in the history of man has scoundrelism made so bold a front and met with more sympathy from sentimental piety, and forebearance from a law loving public. Of course, to subjugate Divine will to human aspirations, is a trick as old as the hills. But why not measure every such case by the simple rule called the "Golden," which if properly applied will unmask the devil in every possible guise.

About the middle of November a circular was sent from this office to all Band ot Hope Superintendents, asking full returns from their Bands. An article was also published in the Rescue, requesting prompt replies. Up to date only twenty-eight Superintendents have reported, and it becomes necessary to mention the subject again. All Superintendents who have not answered will confer a favor by attending to this matter without delay. The list, as now published in the Rescue, is very imperfect, and must be revised; a new Record of Bands is being prepared, and it is desired that both may be completed as soon as possible. Therefore, prompt replies will be a personal favor to the Gen'l Sup't, as well as for the benefit of the whole Juvenile Department.

From reports already in hand, it is learned that some Bands have adopted a regalia—a red scarf—and have the custom of marching round the hall while singing. This must be a pleasant change, and, no doubt, beneficial.

Another Superintendent writes of mottoes, for decorating the walls, made by taking a square of red muslin (known as Turky-red), fringing it all round, and gumming upon it letters cut from white or gilt paper. All these little things are helps, and if they have assisted in sustaining interest in one Band, are at least worthy of trial in others.

Public meetings are found to be of great value in more ways than one. The Modesto Band of Hope gave an entertainment Thanksgiving evening, which brought $75 into the treasury, besides other good results. It is recommended that these meetings be always opened with the Ritual form: this gives people a chance to see what we are teaching the children, and can have only a good influence. It is also suggested that the program be largely temperance. People who attend a Band of Hope meeting expect to hear temperance songs and recitations, and ought not to be disappointed. A young man said to me to-day that he was never, in all his life, so impressed as by hearing a large Band of Hope sing, "Dare to do Right;" and let me say right here, that he now "dares to do right"! and who can tell how much he is indebted to those children for his present position?

David C. Cook is publishing temperance concert exercises at a trifling cost, which must be a great assistance in this line. If the interest is low in your Band of Hope, try a public meeting, even if it does take some sacrifice of ease, on part of adult members, and unless your experience differs from that of others, you will find a full attendance and renewed zeal as the reward of your labors. PURE WATER FOREVER!

Our motto's pure,
Our cause is sure,
For God is just—
In Him we trust.
He'll be a friend
In time of need,
And help us in
Each noble deed.
The murmuring stream that glides along
Is ever singing this sweet song:
I'm pure, I'm cold, I'm clear, I'm free;
Then come and pledge yourself to me.

Water is clear;
We need not fear
The death that lurks
In treacherous Beer.
No poison drear
Is hidden there
To cause us pain
Or dark despair.
The murmuring stream, etc.

Forever in
The crystal stream
The diamond beads
Of beauty gleam;
The snowy foam,
So bright and clear,
Is better far
Than Wine or Beer.
The murmuring stream, etc.

A TEETOTALER.

Many years ago, Colonel Lemanowsky, who had been twenty-three years in the army of Napoleon Bonaparte, arose in a temperance meeting, tall, vigorous, and with the glow of health on his face, and made the following remarkable speech: "You see before you a man seventy years old. I have fought two hundred battles; have fourteen wounds on my body; have lived thirty days on horse-flesh, with the bark of trees for my bread, snow and ice for my drink, the canopy of heaven for my covering, and only a few rags for clothing. In the desert of Egypt I have marched for days with the burning sun upon my head; feet blistered with the scorching sand, and with eyes, nostrils and mouth filled with dust, and with a thirst so tormenting that I have opened the veins of my arms and sucked my own blood. Do you ask me how I survived all these horrors? I answer that, under the providence of God, I owe my preservation, my health and vigor, to the fact that I never drank a drop of spirituous liquor in my life, and," continued he, "Baron Larry, chief surgeon of the French army, has stated as a fact that the 6,000 survivors who safely returned from Egypt were all those who abstained from ardent drinks."—Selected.

USE OF TOBACCO A FILTHY HABIT.

An eminent author says: "Of all habits to which men are addicted, none so conduces to slovenliness and to disregard of the comforts of others as the use of tobacco. No individual has a right to make himself a nuisance." The smoke-scented clothes of an inveterate smoker, the disagreeable breath, the unclean lips and mouth of the chewer, are enough to make all lovers of cleanliness disgusted with the cause of it all. Nothing sooner causes a lack of self-respect than untidiness, and when a man gets so that he does not care what becomes of him he has started on the road ot intemperance to ruin.

A well-known temperance advocate writes: "I have known members of the church to break the pledge, but it has nearly always been the case that such have been smokers, and have blamed the pipe for it. So far as I have observed, more members of our temperance societies fall from being caught in this snare than in any other."

In a report of the British Anti-Tobacco Society we find the following: "It is a fact that in most cases of breach of the Good Templar obligation the man has been a smoker. In one district it was proved by investigation that the smoking teetotalers were a little more than seven times as liable to break their obligation as the non smoker."

"It is a fact," says Dr. Trask "that tobacco and rum, like gamblers, play into each others hands in ruining their victims. The language of the toper is significant; "I love to smoke because it makes me love to drink, and I love to drink because it makes me love to smoke.'" Again he says: "It is a fact that drunkards generally use tobacco; the exceptions I have found to be rare—perhaps one to a thousand"—D. C. Cooks Quarterly.

TEN REASONS AGAINST INTOXICATING DRINKS.

2d. They hinder the digestive organs in the proper performance of their functions. They overtask the "absorbents" so that the gastric juice is delayed in its important and indispensable work.

3d. They are costly luxuries, and do not return an equivalent of enjoyment to those who indulge an appetite for their use.

4th. They cause an artificial thirst which "grows on that which feeds it"—a thirst which water can not quench.

5th. They operate upon those who use them as whips and spurs do upon donkeys—excite their force temporarily without imparting strength.

6th. They exhaust the energy and life of man, and offer nothing in their place that is worthy of acceptance.

7th. They brutalize the body, demonize the mind, and corrupt the heart.

8th. As the companions of Ulysses were transformed into swine, these drinks transform men into beasts.

9th. They shorten human life, and make that short life wretched beyond comparison or description.

And they are all poison alike.

Bro. Webb writes; "People often say that children will not realize and remember their Band of Hope pledges, when they get older. Last Sunday night I addressed the Presbyterian Sunday school at San Diego. The Supt. followed with remarks in which he said he was glad I gave tobacco a good blast, for as he did not use it, he enjoyed that part of my speech the more. He then said he so well remembered being elected Secretary of the Band of Hope when ten years of age; could not have felt the honor more had he been Secretary of State. He took some three hours to write out his first minutes, determined to have them right.

Alcohol is no more a provision of nature than Colgate's soap or Dr. Price's baking powder is. It is a product of art as much as gunpowder is. And the difference between the wines and beers of American markets and other alcoholic drinks is hardly worth contending over. Of one thing I feel sure, that God never meant alcohol to be a "provision of nature" for food any more than he intended belladona or strychnine for that purpose. They are useful, doubtless, as medicines, but who would insist upon benzine as a beverage because it will take grease spots out of his clothes.—Rev. F. M. Ellis.

Whisky has caused more pain and more anguish in the world than war, pestilence and famine combined. Death superintends every distillery, opens the spigot of every rum cask, and breathes deadly poison into every glass of whisky that is drank. There are more desolate homes, more broken hearts, more pauper's graves, more weak and scrofulitic children in the world from the use of strong drink than from any other cause whatever.—Missouri Temperance Advocate.

Temperance sermons are preached daily. One does not need to go to New York to find the text, yet the recent suicide there of a trusted man, who went to the Bellevue Hospital gate and shot himself, with this note in his pocket, "Bury me in the Potter's Field; cause, alcohol; cause, nobody's business!" is a sad commentary on the use of intoxication.—The Morning and Day of Reform.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

FINANCE.

It may be seriously questioned whether it is best for the nation to have its financial affairs managed and adjusted so as to secure the applause of the capitalists of the National banks and the millionaire operators of Wall street. It is evident that the best management of the national financiering machinery is that which holds out inducements, incentives and advantages to the masses and the workers and the poor and the young, to economise and provide themselves early with a home and a competence.

If some sufficient inducement could be offered to all the youth, the boys and young men of this state, to save and accumulate their quarters, dimes and cents; not with a view of simply hoarding and counting them and becoming misers, but with the wholesome intent of providing for their own and their family's comfort, being able to purchase objects of use and taste, and above all things looking to the purchase and ownership of a home and garden or field or farm—not a policeman or criminal court or prison or poorhouse would probably be ever needed for a million of them.

The savings banks, tho thieves have made them sometimes instruments of wholesale robbery of the poor, have exerted a most beneficent influence upon thousands of poor people—upon all in fact who could be induced to make use of them, for even those who were robbed, had learned wholesome lessons of thrift and economy.

A country which boasts with justice of its free institutions, its magnificent system of free education, its thousands of Christian and benevolent societies and enterprises, of its statesmen, its preachers, its writers and authors, its financiers and men of business energy and enterprise, and which has a domain destined to be the home of countless millions and the future paradise of this earth, should begin soon to cultivate and educate the moral instincts of its people and of its children. A substantial and reliable guarantee of the national or general financial prosperity of a country, is only to be sought and found in a perennial harvest of good citizenship and good morals. The poverty, squalor, misery, starvation, discontent and turbulence that prevail in any nation, state, city or community, is the exact guage of the vices and crimes of the nation, state or community, as truly and unfailingly as the thermometer and barometer indicate the temperature and pressure of the air we breathe.

A poison-tainted moral atmosphere is as destructive and fatal to the financial welfare of a people as a plague-laden physical atmosphere is to their physical health. There is no denying this; some one may say, "look at our rich men that have gained their millions in the midst of dishonest and pestilential surroundings: what have we to say to that? Simly this, that the millions they have sequestered from the pocket books of their countrymen are, almost every dollar of them, the measure of a vacuum of poverty and misery which some one's vices or crimes or follies have made for him.

Hoarded, ill-gotten wealth is generally a double curse; it curses the possessor with avarice and gluttony and pride &c., and it curses the poor, from whom it has been wrung, with keener poverty. But a comfortable competence was what God intended every man to enjoy in thankfulness and happiness. He has been no less kind to man than to the beasts and birds and fishes, which have no need to hoard or economise, for they are so bounteously supplied with all they need.

Now it does seem strange that in this day of light and knowledge, our government and statesmen, financiers and political reformers have totally ignored and neglected all effort of any and every kind to promote any legislative or public policy that might in the least encourage economy, thrift, sobriety or morality among the people, or in the least degree to aid them or invite them to any improvement in their moral or financial condition. But on the contrary, if the chief end of our national and local governments had been to demoralize, debauch, degrade, pauperise, destroy and sweep from the earth the citizens of this country, old and young, male and female, it will be found that about every possible provision to that end has been made. The most cunning of all satan's counsellors could never suggest another so comprehensive and hellish a machinery, for spreading vice, crime, disease, pauperism, in every community—for sending the people to hell here and hereafter—as the loathsome leprosy that is represented in the brewery, distillery, grogshop, winevat and winery, fostered and protected and chartered by the government, which make a burning, actual hell, a present, awful reality, wherever they exist. It were a pious prayer for the world to unite in, that the lightnings of God's wrath should sweep every one of them away to-night; but if it were answered, many of us who profess innocence, would discover that a good deal of the blood stained stock is held in our name in the record books of heaven.

A postal savings bank system, established all over the country, to give the boys a motive to avoid the cigaret and beer shops, and allowing small deposits 4 or 5 per cent interest, would be a better financial operation by the government, which would yield to the country and people a lasting and solid advantage ten thousand times greater than all the vaunted funding operations of the past 16 years, which have merely tended to make the rich richer, and the poor poorer; while eminently salutary for the millionaire, they have given no impetus to trade and no benefit to the toiling masses who should be the creators of the national wealth.

REDUCING THE WHISKY TAX.

As might be expected, the N. Y. Herald advocates the reduction of the tax on whisky and uses the miserable argument, if such a wretched subterfuge can be called an argument, that the high duty tempts the whisky thieves to defraud the government, and if it were reduced from 90 to 50 cents there would be a larger revenue derived from it. It says that when the duty was $2 a gallon there was the least revenue collected; but there was no necessity for such a result whatever. The duty can be generally collected on whisky as well as upon anything else; the only drawback being that the men who make whisky, will not as a general thing, hesitate to commit such lesser crimes as perjury, bribery and robbing the government.

The chief Internal Revenue officer published, at the time the duty on whisky was $2, an elaborate explanation of the reason why only a fraction of the duty was collected: he said that in every case where a prosecution was instituted against a whisky fraud, Andrew Johnson the President immediately pardoned the malefactor, and rendered it impossible to collect any thing more than the rum-thugs chose to bestow upon the Government.

Mr. Johnson liked whisky too well to see its sacred character tampered with: but Gen. Grant and Gen. Hayes, (the latter probably under the lash of his party) pardoned out nearly 4000 each of these ruffians, who had they defrauded the revenue of one tenth or a fiftieth of the amount, in smuggling prayer books or bibles or window glass or any reputable merchandize, would have paid heavy fines and served out long terms of imprisonment.

It is claimed that the high duty on opium tempts the importer to steal and lie; but no one ever suggested lowering the duty as a judicious remedy. It would be as easy to bribe the revenue officers to pass steel rails, silk, tea, lace, tin, iron, copper, etc., without duty as it is to smuggle whisky; but these articles tho the duty is considered oppressive, are generally handled by respectable men, and if it was credibly reported that any one of these interests was swindling the government, would any one propose lowering the duty? not at all. If no other means proved available, a suitable force of the U. S. army would be detailed to enforce the collection of the revenue and obedience to the law.

There will be an immense flocking of the vulture brood to the present congress. The first gorge of carrion is expected to be afforded to the gang of murderers who are poisoning the nations blood and life and manhood and turning this country rapidly into a scene of murder and vice; a land of penitentiaries, poorhouses and brothels. It is expected that about 35 millions a year shall be diverted from the payment of the national debt and stuffed into the capacious vaults of the whisky distillers to reward them for destroying the food of the people and pauperizing the nation.

When the whisky thieves have been provided for, percentage of the millions awarded to them will be devoted to the bribing of votes to help other vultures to carry their schemes of robbery. Bright hopes are doubtless awakened among the professional bandits who plundered the nation under the regime of Gen. Grant, and who will be in force and high feather, at least until President Arthur puts his foot on them, if he will do that.

The proposition to reduce the whisky tax and to stop paying the national debt are parts of an infamous thieving plot to be sprung on the present congress and those who advocate either, are, if not extraordinarily weak in intellect, hired by coin to sell out the people.

UNFERMENTED WINE.

It is admitted that a few individuals have very positively asserted their opinion, that there was only one kind of wine used in ancient times and known to the Bible and to modern wine producing countries. These few obscurities might have been entitled to some respect, but for the contrary fact that for every one of them who has attempted to substantiate his arguments, there have been a score of well known eminent Christian scholars, gentlemen and philanthropists who have thoroly investigated the same facts and grounds and evidences and authorities, and have believed, asserted, and to the most complete satisfaction of all but a very small fraction of the whole host of abstainers—proved the contrary.

We can all admit, upon the barest hearsay, however, Mr. Simmon's quotation, that

"A Dr. C. V. A. Van Dyke, who has been over 25 years in Syria, said to Dr. Lawrie there is not now, nor as far as I can find out, never was in Syria anything like unfermented wine. The thing is unknown to the East. Syrup is made from the juice of the grape and molasses, as you know; but nothing that is called wine. At the passover only fermented wine is used and there is no other, and they have no idea of any other. From this you can infer my judgment as to the proper wine for the sacrament, the same as our Savior used, so fermented, as to produce intoxication if taken in sufficient quantity."

Now it is questioned if any one ever knew a minister or a doctor with that peculiar name who did not love his wine and beer, and plenty of it. And if he did, his evidence and judgment upon any such question as wine is utterly worthless. And if it were not, it is the exact reverse of what is told us by many well known Christian men who have lived in Syria. Technically his assertions as to the name are true—they dont call now in Syria their unfermented grape juice "wine." they call it dibbs or something like that, but that dont prove anything. We dont believe the book of Mormon, but it would surely inspire us with contempt, for one to make enquiry among the Digger indians here, and declare the whole Mormon story false, simply because the Digger language has not the word Mormon, nor the Indians any ancient Mormon records.

All the proof attempted by this great, frequently quoted champion of the doctrine of partnership between Christianity and drunkenness is that the fruit of the vine in its natural state is not called now in the present Syrian language, by the same name as the poison artificially extracted from only the fermented sugar of the perverted, rotted, polluted and criminally prostituted grape. We could have proved the same thing up in Napa county; there are a hundred people there who would affirm today that the unfermented wine made by Samuel Winter in Yountville, is not wine at all, but they would not like to say it is not the fruit of the vine.

Now it seems as if upon the miserably rotten peg of this unknown man's testimony, a great many people have hung up their opinions on a matter in which the integrity of the whole Christian system is on trial. It has been clamorously asserted on his and similar random, unsupported and irrelevant assertions that there never was but one kind of wine alluded to in the Scriptures, old or new, and only one known to the ancients.

Now there has been more than one scholarly infidel, who went to Palestine and asserted that there never was any such person as Jesus Christ; but altho they were better scholars than Mr. C. V. A. Van Dyck their word is not taken as superior to that of all other travelers and scholars. Renan is a much better and more capable scholar than Mr. Van D and he has a ten fold opportunity to know; he dont believe that Christ rose again from the dead. Better authority than Mr. Van D. but Mr. Simmons dont believe him a particle.

But when we admit the altogether immaterial fact that the Syrians and French and Australians and every body you please, dont to-day call grape juice, or grapes or vines or vineyards or dried fruit by the ancient Greek name of wine, we are wholly justified in denouncing the few men of scholarship who have made due research and study, if any such there have been, who make the declaration that there was no ancient unfermented wine, in common use among the people, at the passover, and alluded to in the Bible—as guilty of the most absolute and palpable deception and falsehood. They have just as much reason to declare with one Richard Carlyle who professed to expose masonry, that there never existed such a people or nation as the Jews are described. As well declare there never was a Roman Empire. It is no more a matter of argument than the existence of Rome or Athens and deserves no notice.

Then we are told, "for nearly 2000 years the Church in all its branches has used fermented wine until now." The church that has done this for so many years, debarred the people and does still from one half the Sacrament, and gives them no cup at all. If the former argument has force, we should use only bread at the communion and the priests only use the fruit of the vine. The same church sells indulgences and absolution and receives money for prayers to release departed souls from purgatory. Why depart from these customs of a church which is so good authority on the quality of communion wine? As we have turkey dinner a speciality on Thanksgiving day, the same church used to celebrate their all saints day and regale their congregation with the spectacle of a roast Jew or heretic, the former always preferred. Why is not this dear old practice to be honored to-day ?

It is easy to suppose or assert that the church always used fermented wine, but there is no proof of its having done so in its early days: no proof whatever. There is much better authority for believing that some churches have never yet used fermented wine at all.

There are some people who love to believe that the Bible and the Christian system are in conformity and consistency with common sense, and very much so. To suppose, in the face of the most frequent and positive prohibitions of the use of any thing fermented in food and drink during the passover week, and in all religious services and sacrifices, that the Jews made a beastly drunken frolic of their most solemn religious festival, and that the Savior of the world countenanced and followed such a positive disobedience to God's command, is at utter variance with a common sense view of the matter. For if the Jews used to drink at one sitting four cups of fermented wine, both the passover and the communion, if it followed the same example, must have been mere bacchanalian debauches, like other heathen orgies:

Mr. Simmons seems to think 12 millon cups of unfermented wine in one evening of the passover in Judea was impossible: whereas there would have been an enormous difficulty in providing that quantity of a fermented kind, difficult to make and very difficult to preserve, and which was only made and used for the purpose of drunken debauchery—while the natural pure fruit of the vine which, with bread, was the daily food of the people, most easily made and preserved—was used by the million cups every day of the year in Palestine.

Bro. Simmons does not want any thing else substituted for the "fruit of the vine," which was used in the first communion. In that he is exactly in accord with the whole body of those who use the real "fruit of the vine." And knowing that the term wine has never been used in the history of the communion, he ought to be satisfied that it is not right to substitute for that fruit of the vine, a pollutted emblem of vice, which is in no possible sense the fruit of the vine: not a whit more so, than the other deadly poison, carbonic acid gas, which is created with it from the dissolved elements of one of the constituents of the dead and rotten grape.

PERMANENT WORK.

Bro. Webb will certainly not be forgotten for 12 months at least, in any community he visits during this year, if he continues as he has done so far. He makes a contract before he leaves a place, that the RESCUE shall come once a week and deliver fifty-two lectures to as many families as he can induce to receive it. Then he goes for the various schools, Bands of Hope, &c., introduces David C. Cook's marvelously cheap books and papers, and provides that lots of people shall be every week reminded of Bro. Webb's work, the cause in which he is engaged, and the lessons he has repeated and reinforced.

It would surely not be rash to suggest that the lecturer who secures for his hearers a weekly shower of useful temperance literature for twelve months to come, and implants in a community a taste for wholesome, serviceable reading, has many times multiplied the value of the service he could render by merely giving a lecture or a course of lectures, and taking no security that the interest aroused will not die out in a week or two.

Thirty years ago, the temperance lecture system was the most useful agency then on earth; with its many faults and failings, and the imperfections of its agents admitted, it aroused our country and our people to begin to save themselves from impending universal perdition. The whole system has been improved and improving ever since; but there may be as long a pull yet in the direction of improvement, as there seemed occasion for at any former stage of the reform.

The steamboat 30 years ago, was a simple affair compared with that of to-day; the engine made the wheels revolve, and the boat was then supposed to be perfected; but they soon harnessed the pumps on to the engine; next they set it to whistling and groaning; then some fellow thot of making the engine discharge cargo; then they made it take in cargo; next thing the engine was condemned to pull up the anchors from the bottom and take them up on the rail and lift them off again; then it was forced into hoisting up the topsail yards and doing various jobs about decks; the last labor added to it, was to make it steer the ship, which it now does without the least extra cost.

Just so the temperance lecturer of 30 or 40 years ago, was a very plainly modeled engine. All he had to do was to make a talk, run down the drunks and coax people to sign a pledge; now he has half a dozen trains a day at his bidding, and there is no reason why he should not be improved on and built up with watertight compartments and all the best new patents; be an engine for every department of the order and cause, from that of disseminating temperance literature and insuring in the mutual aid, up to marrying a couple in open lodge meeting when required.

Bro. W. C. King is also leaving permanent work behind him. The lodges he visits or organizes are left with a years reading on the subject of temperance provided for. Those that set out at first with a years subscription and an order for ten or twenty copies of a temperance journal, make one of the best promises to insure progress and permanence, and best of all, a wholesome and improving influence upon their neighbors and communities. Such lodges are properly founded and have come to stay. They wont need a doctor to pry them up and stand them up on end every six months; and we may get along at last with the customary list of defunct lodges reduced to 1 or 2 per cent in place of about 50 per cent of the number of new ones gained.

LEAGUE OF FREE CRIME.

PLATFORM.

WHEREAS, Both God and the Bible and all human history, combine in declaring that there always were, always must be, and always shall be two utterly distinct classes of men, viz: the rich and poor, aristocrat and mudsill, master and servant, owner and slave. And

WHEREAS, The working-man, the mechanic, the tailor, the painter, the shoemaker, the baker, the plasterer, the carpenter, the printer, the hod-carrier, the laborer—and especially the Irishman—have always and in all countries been the poor and the slave, and

WHEREAS, The said classes—especially the Irish—are eminently fitted by Providence to fill the menial stations, and altogether unfitted to fill the higher ones, and

WHEREAS,—We, the makers and sellers of beer and whisky and gin, and keepers of pauper mills, crime dens and thief schools, bartenders and bunko sharps, are by Providence eminently fitted to run this country, make its laws and own and use the workingmem, especially the Irish and take their wages and,

WHEREAS,—It is now more than ever important that we should have a very large class of more than usually degraded men, to support us by consuming the surplus agricultural products of this state, reduced to portable dimensions, in place of sending wheat to Europe, and

WHEREAS,—The laboring classes, especially the Irish, are admirably fitted by nature and Providence to contain and consume enormous quantities of rat-poison whisky and snake-paralyzer lager, and,

WHEREAS,—Their fondness for snake bite makes them good for nothing else, and prevents them, especially the Irish, from ever rising in the social scale, to compete with their betters and

WHEREAS, —The Sunday is the best day of the week to catch the workingmen idle, especially the Irish, and to get them drunk, and clean out their pockets peaceably, therefore,

Resolved. That we denounce all Good Templars and gospel grinders and American gabbling women and psalm howling church goers and judges who favor the Sunday law as our natural enemies,

Resolved:—That we dont believe in any Sunday, any Bible, any God but Beer and the money it sells for.

Resolved: That the class which owns and votes and wets down the workingmen and the Irish, and uses their money has a right to do everything and anything we have a mind to do in this country.

Resolved; That the American people are a nation that we can bribe and govern and whip with the beer vote, and we dont care a clipped continental for any law they choose to make.

Resolved; That this league of free men invite all liberal, broad, independent drinking men, gamblers, blacklegs, barbary coast rangers, etc. to rally to their standard of freedom. Prison graduates welcome.

N. B. No Irish need apply.

NEW TEMPERANCE TALES.

ONLY TEN CENTS EACH.

"FIFE AND DRUM" SERIES.

The National Temperance Society has commenced the publication of a series of cheap and thrilling Temperance Tales, from the pens of some of the best writers on temperance in the world, giving a greater amount of valuable and interesting matter than ever before, for the small sum of ten cents. The object is to supply a great amount of matter calculated to aid the advancement of the cause of temperance, for a very small sum of money. These stories will be adapted to home and fireside reading, the railroad train, and for the young in every class of the community. Four of these are now ready, and others will soon be added to the list. The following have already been published:

"Fife and Drum," by Mary Dwinell Chellis. (12mo., 79 pages) This is a new and thrilling story, with an excellent spirit and moral instruction, from the pen of this well-known and brilliant writer.

"The Quaker's Rule," by Earnest Gilmore. (12mo., 72 pages) This new work is fully equal to the other writings of this talented author, and is worthy of a place in every family.

"Drinking Jack," and other stories, by Mary Dwinell Chellis. (12mo., 78 pages) This popular author has few equals, and these stories are among her best. We cordially commend them to all friends of temperance, and the right training of children. Let the friends of temperance everywhere unite and send for a number of copies of these interesting stories, and circulate them in every community.

The friends of temperance who desire to see the reform progress, and to have a literature accessible to all classes of the community, have now an opportunity to carry out their wishes. We ask all the friends of the cause to aid us in the circulation of this class of literature. Send along the dimes. Address,

THE CLEAN NEWSPAPER.

There is a growing feeling in every healthy community against the journals which make it their special object to minister to perverted taste by seeking out, and serving in a seductive form disgusting scandals and licentious revelations. There is good reason to believe that the clean newspaper is more highly prized today than it was four or five years ago. It is also safe to predict that as people in all ranks of life who wish to protect their own at least from contamination, become more conscious of the pernicious influence of a certain class of journals called "enterprising," because they are ambitious to serve up dirty scandals, they will be careful to see that the journals they permit to be read in the family circle are of the class that never forget the proprieties of life. Already men and women of refinement and healthy morals have had their attention called to the pernicious influence of bad literature, and have made commendable efforts to counteract the same by causing sound literature to be published and sold at popular prices. These efforts are working a silent but sure revolution. The best authors are more generally read to-day than at any previous time. The sickly sentimental story paper, and wild ranger and pirate story book are slowly yielding the field to worthier claimants. To the praise of the decent newspapers it may be said that where it has a place in the family, and has been read for years by young and old it has developed such a healthy tone and such a discriminating taste that the literature of the slums has no admirers. Fortunately, the number of such families is increasing in the land, and as they increase, the journal that devotes itself to sickening revelations of immorality will be compelled to find its supporters solely among those classes that practice vice or crime, or are ambitious to learn and follow such ways. —Boston Herald.

Brother W. J. Jessup, of New York, who used to contribute a valuable packet of "Chips and Shavings" to the Gem, has transferred his valuable services to the Canada Casket, and makes that always welcome paper a little more welcome still. In the last number he gives a synopsis of our Grand Lodge proceedings, and one of the "chips" calling attention to it, remarks: "There is no Cheap John element in the California Grand Lodge." That is so; we used to have an incipient occasional Cheap John, but he always took the bashful seat, and when he caut first sight of the Home for Orphans in frame and the roof on, he packed his carpet-sack, and took a long, last flight. Of that one thing our California Good Templar asks leave to boast a little. If we have anything to look upon with satisfaction here, it is due in the first place and principally to our constant exclusion and ignoring of that most ubiquitous and important Good Templar, the 3 cent Johnny. May his shadow ever grow thinner.

A lively debate took place at the Mission-street M. E. church study, on Saturday evening, the 26th. Subject: "The Sunday Law; Should it be Enforced?" Neither place nor people were the fittest to furnish a very hearty support or argument in favor of the negative. Rev. Mr. Dille opened on the affirmative, and the views expressed on that side seemed to meet with entire approbation; the main argument being the necessity which physical science and revelation unite in declaring exists for a rest for man, animal and all created things. The vote was unanimous at the close. The Saturday evening meetings of the young folks there are very pleasantly made up of musical, literary and soundly educational exercises; they present a model which might be copied with great advantage in many or all of our villages where there is a church and a Saturday evening.

A Mr. E. M. Northum in Arkansas has made the inspiring discovery that the Bible nowhere authorizes the existence of a Methodist church. Consequence; the Methodists will have to dissolve right away of course. They ought to have known that all along. Another serious omission was made in compiling that book. The only authorization of Mr. Northum found there is in the instance recorded of one of his tribe unexpectedly addressing Balaam on one occasion, but that has never authorized any of them to speak since, so far as known.

The Reciprocity Treaty with Hawaii does not seem exactly right to outsiders; but when one gets his whack of the four or five or ten millions a year which the treaty pumps out of the people's pockets and runs into the coffers of the Claus Spreckels ring–ah, then one can take an impartial survey of the premises and come o an unprejudiced judgment of the whole affair. How can a newspaper man arrive at an intelligent conclusion on such a matter till he has personally experienced a few thousand dollars worth of the benefits and blessings conferred by the treaty. A few sacks of silver judiciously put, have many a time in one short night totally capsized the creeds. opinions and prejudices that fifty summers of patient education had rooted ever so firmly.

WANTED.

FOR THE YEAR 1882.

An assortment of 2,820 Coffins, mostly of cheap quality, to store away the worn-out and used-up customers and patrons of the wholesale and retail whisky, wine and beer dealers of this state.

The Coffins will be called for as required. Also,

WANTED.

2820 YOUNG FOLKS

Of both sexes, recruits to take their first steps and lessons in drinking, gambling, smoking and other bar-room accomplishments, to fill up the vacancies made by the 2,820 funerals above provided for.

The Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the State of West Virginia, Dr. T. H. Buck, the gifted author of "John Rodman's Pledge," and other popular writings, has just completed a new temperance and Good Templar story. Its publication will begin in the West Virginia Good Templar—official organ for the state—at an early day, and every Good Templar in the country should read it. The paper containing the story and much other valuable matter will be sent on trial three months for 20 cents, or six copies for $1. Send for it. Address,

J. B. Morgan, Publisher,
Gerardstown, W. Va.

The Battle.—Let the battle against alcohol go on all over the nation. Let Christian and patriots everywhere stand against this legalized enemy of all good, and see that it shall be legal no longer. The victory will not be an easy one; but it will be glorious when achieved. Yes, it can be done. If we will not do it, the survivors of our destruction will. The protean ox has been goring long enough. He has slain by thousands, and is slaying still. Let him be butchered for the good of mankind and the honor of God. And let all the people say: Amen.—N. O. Advocate.

Answer to P. J.: No; Mrs. Lydia F. Pinkham is not dead. The picture in Sunday week's Chronicle looked that way, to be sure; but that happened thru the stereotype cut of the picture having been carelessly left on a hot stove in the furnace-room till most of the features had thawed off, and a very corpse-like appearance in that paper was the result. Yes, she is a widow, of course; that is evident from her sending out her photo as an ad., which, were she married, there would be no occasion for.

Tulare Co. has another lodge at Townsend, making 15 now. The youngest organized on the 5th by Bro. King, starts out with 25 members; the lodge takes four copies of the Rescue and the members begin with six more. That is just the way Guerneville and some of our most able and useful lodges began. The progress of those that set out in this manner will be noted with interest; if such a movement is unhealthy for a lodge it ought to be stopped. We shall see.

FIRST-CLASS AGENTS WANTED.

The great reputation of JOHN B. GOUGH, the magnificent make-up of "Sunlight and Shadow," and the universal demand for it among all classes, makes this the best opportunity ever offered to energetic agents to make money. We want first-class agents in every township, to whom liberal terms will be given. Address, for territory and terms, J. Dewing & Co., 420 Bush St., San Francisco.

The Temperance Revolution is about to issue a book, to be sold at their popular price, and which will reveal the general lawlessness of the liquor traffic. The book will cover these general topics among others: The Ostracising and Abuse of Temperance Workers; Personal Abuse and Injury; Intimidation by Threats of Lawless Proceedings; Actual Destruction of Property, etc.; Bribery in Elections and Legislatures. Those possessing definite information upon any of these points which will be of value in a book of this character, are invited to communicate with The Temperance Revolution, David C. Cook, Manager, Chicago, Ill.

"I know of no book better adapted to aid us in caring for 'the living temple'—this human body of ours—than Dr. J. H. Kellogg's on Domestic Hygiene, etc. It is so exhaustive as to cover every need. By its valuable teachings it will prevent disease and save for the home the money worse than squandered on alcohol, tobacco and drugs.

To instruct and train the masses in obedience to those laws which render life sweet, pure and wholesome, is a noble work, and herein Dr. Hellegg is a pioneer; he opens a path strewn with golden treasures from his storehouse of knowledge and experience—a path plain and practical—the royal road of health!

That every household may own and appreciate his 'Hand-Book' is my sincere wish. Mrs. Emily Pitts Stevens."

The Temperance Almanac is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages: list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1.00 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St. New York.

David C. Cook has recently opened, at 148 Madison St. Chicago, a Revolution Temperance House, and we are amazed at the amount he offers for a little money. He furnishes excellent and unique material for educating the children. It is a grand work. We advise all to send for samples and buy what they can afford. A little money expended in this way will hardly be missed, and will do you and others much good.—Prohibitionist, Lewiston, Me.

ENORMOUS SAVING TO SCHOOLS.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1.00, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36, besides 133 Library books, 5 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty-six million copies. There is not one of our publications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing, etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1½c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2c. a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with little lesson pictures; also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c. per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words), also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty-three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45.

Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in a neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. Far better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection; books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5½ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5½ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

A book that cannot fail to arouse the American people to the gigantic swindle now being perpetrated. The writer offered $10,000 by a leading brewer to keep still. Liquor not only doctored but made entirely from drugs. Extracts from a whole library of secret books giving receipts for making and doctoring—advertisements of essences, facsimiles of labels, engravings, etc. etc. Claret, port, sherry, champagne, whisky, brandy, gin, rum, etc., all out of one barrel and made at less than 25c. a gallon. Wine that never saw grape juice—cider that never saw apples—beer factories in place of breweries, fine cream ale without barley or brewing, whisky from arsenic, millions of gallons of liquor that pays no revenue tax. The farmer's corn and barley "all in your eye." A wholesale liquor store in a ten foot square cellar—more French wine sold in New York City than is produced in the whole of France.

This book is no mere toy, but an exhaustive work—a work of years of close research and investigation, and cannot fail to prove an invaluable auxiliary to the temperance cause. It forms one volume of our "Popular Temperance Library," and we shall sell it at the following fabulous prices:—Single sample number, 10c. Five or more sent to separate addresses for 8c. each—5 or more to one address 5½c. each—25 or more to one address 5c. each. Special rates on large lots. Book nearly ready for delivery. Orders filled in turn.

We also publish 90c. to $1.50 story books in large newspaper form. One complete book, illustrated, in quantities, at 2c. each. Samples of three books already issued, for 10 cts. A whole library of choice $1.00 to $1.50 story books in book form (paper covers) especially for Sunday-schools and Bands of Hope, for only 8c. each (sample copy 8c.) Eighteen monthly papers at 5c. a year, samples of each for 10c.) We take contracts to sow towns knee-deep with temperance literature for a song, and that, too, with papers in place of tracts. A full line of Band of Hope supplies so cheap that the penny collection pays for library, weekly paper, badges, pledges and all. Also a host of other temperance documents, all at revolution prices. Send for catalogue. We have the indorsement of the press, societies, and prominent workers in all parts of the country. The following was recently received from Governor St. John, of Kansas:

State of Kansas, Executive Department, Topeka, Oct. 22, 1881.—I heartily approve of your plan of work. Your publications will accomplish great good, and should be liberally patronized by the friends of Christian temperance everywhere. Very truly yours, JOHN P. ST. JOHN.

An Appeal. We wish to reach every temperance worker in the land, man or women, with our samples, catalogue, etc. We can do nothing if we cannot reach the people. Will not every one send us names of workers? It only costs a postal card and a few minutes' time. Please say where you saw this. Address "REVOLUTION TEMPERANCE PUBLISHING HOUSE," DAVID C. COOK, Manager, 148 Madison St., Chicago.

Lecturers' Reports.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

Scenega.—Had twice passed thru this place and never dreamed it was Scenega, where we had a lodge; looks from stage road as tho nobody lived here. Advertise a temperance lecture tho, and see how the neat schoolhouse with its patent seats will fill up with intelligent people and good listeners. A choir that would be creditable to any town and readings by sisters Kitty Conaway and Anna Jepson that any one might be proud of; helped my meetings greatly. The second night a fine supper was handed round to all; and this very sociable community was doubly sociable. Bro. Conaway, county assessor and W. C. T., presided. I talked up Band of Hope all the time, visited Mr. Drake's school, spoke to the scholars and took a vote in favor of it. As Mr. D. neither drinks nor uses tobacco, I had an able ally. He has Dr. Cook's temperance songs—only five cents each, if 25 are taken postage paid! and they sang me some stirring songs. On account of the More murder that occurred in the upper end of the valley some years ago, the settlement may have received a hard name from those who have never been here; but I hardly ever saw a more hearty, quiet and intelligent country community. Before leaving, organized Band of Hope of 30 members, Bro Decker and others quitting use of tobacco to join. Bro. J. Moffatt will be a great help. They will meet on Sundays after Sunday school. Bro. Guiberson, tho young, makes a first rate L. D. Any one passing this way and looking for a home should call at some of the brothers named or S. A. Guiberson. Originally governmeht land, there may be chances to buy at reasonable prices, All titles are now quieted. There are about 75 families (and on an average about six dogs, more or less, to the family) Obtained 9 subscribers for the Rescue and left Bro Decker as agent.

Newhall A small railroad town named after the great S. F. auctioneer who owns a large ranch, Hotel etc. My friends Mr. D. W. Fields and family had very kindly interested themselves in advertising and preparing for the lecture in the handsome two story schoolhouse. Mr. Field keeps a first class hotel, well built and furnished and an excellent table. There is no bar, and so no jostling against drunken men, no rough conduct or language, and ladies and gentlemen who arrive on the stage stay all night in comfort, ready for the Los Angeles train next morning,

Owing to a train accident many could not come to the meeting, but the few present voluuteered $2.50 towards Orphans Home and lecture fund. Mr. Fred Fields and others hope for a lodge here in the not distant future. Some Scenega members would come ten or fifteen miles to help it, but the time is hardly ripe yet. Mr. Fields would not take a cent for the excellent entertainment of my daughter and self, bccause I was in a good cause.

Bro. Wilson, the careful and gentlemanly driver of the stage was present at our meeting and Miss McLean the teacher, had been practising songs from the leaflets I forwarded, with her scholars, and so we had good singing.

Los Angeles. Met Bro. and sister Gould, the latter Dist. Deputy. Bros. Yarnell and Mathes, from whom I learned that the lodge numbers 263. They mean to keep the Banner regalia. Met Bro. Dr. McCurdy who was moved from Cambria here. He is temperance thru and thru. Never prescribes alcohol; made the effects of alcohol on the human system the theme of his graduating essay some years ago. He and wife will be valuable aids to Merril Lodge. Left my daughter Lizzie who learned to print while I owned the Lompoc Record to pursue her profession in the temperance paper of Bro Yarnell, Castyle and Mathes, the Mirror; and then I took steamer for San Diego.

H. R. HUGHES.

December 30th, at Placerville, lectured in the M. E. church, to a fair and attentive audience. Considerable more interest is manifested than I found last summer; and it is high time, for their twenty-two bars—most of whom are determined to keep open on Sunday in spite of all Supreme Court Decisions are doing their usual villainous work on the young of this beautiful mountain town.

Twenty-two bars! trampling upon the laws of God and man, and sowing seeds of moral and physical disease broadcast in this lovely place. While the church spires point heavenward the saloon is more powerful to lure young men and lead them on in the broad way that leads direct to the drunkard's hell! Where is the watchman that cries aloud and spares not?

December 1st, the storm prevented my meeting at Diamond Springs; returned on the 7th, had a good house; Eldorado Lodge up in a body, all hands canvassed for names but could not get enough to organize. The wine interest holds the people and they are not free. But it was a good meeting, and I look for telling results in the near future. I am under obligations to Mr. Chas. Bryant and sister for active help.

The 2nd, at Shingle Springs, had a fair gathering, and ten names; was to have returned on the 6th, but the storm prevented a meeting.

The 3rd, at Latrobe, small meeting on account of rain; 5th and 6th, no meetings;—rain, rain, rain. Cold water is good for the country, but too much of it is not helpful for a temperance lecture.

Visited Placerville Lodge the 6th. Not many out on account of weather, but had a pleasant meeting. It is well conducted, and they are building up a good Lodge.

The 9th, lectured in Upper Town to a small audience. They need work here, so many young people, and no temperance organization; also, addressed the public school. The 10th, at Pilot Hill; a small audience. A dance the night before demoralized the young folks. Got to Greenwood in time to get housed, when the "Beautiful Rain" again began to fall.

W. CROWHURST.

Mokelumne Hill.—The temperance lectures given in the Congregational church by Professor William Crowhurst, last Saturday and Sunday evenings, were largely attended, particularly on Sunday evening, when the church was filled to its full capacity. Mr. Crowhurst is a good speaker and is very successful in holding the attention of his hearers, now and then shaking them up with some bit of humor, and thus maintaining good feeling in his audience during his lectures. A number of signatures were obtained for admission into the Good Templars' Lodge in this place.—Calaveras Chronicle.

San Andreas.—Professor Wm. Crowhurst, Grand Lecturer for the I. O. G. T. in California, delivered two interesting lectures on temperance in Hawes' Hall. On account of the condition of the weather the attendance was very small. Prof. Crowhurst is a good speaker, and is s poken of in very complimen tary terms wherever he has lectured, and we are sorry that there was not a larger number in attendance.—Calaveras Weekly Citizen.

Disgraceful.—While Mr. Crowhurst was delivering his lecture on "Temperance" at Hawes' Hall the conduct of some of the young boys was simply disgraceful, to say the least. Not being satisfied with creating a disturbance before the door and windows, they pelted the building with stones and acted in a manner reflecting severely upon parents and guardians. We hope that these young disturbers of the peace have been fitly reprimanded, and that they will profit by timely counsel.—Calaveras Prospect.

Rain, swollen rivers and other unexpected causes prevented meetings in Jenny Lind and Milton. At the latter place Bro. O. Wolcott worked hard for an audience, and was rewarded with four men and three boys. "We didn't orate."

Copperopolis, Dec. 10.

MRS. STEVENS.

The meetings in Stockton were opened Thursday eve, and the interest has steadily increased. Sat. evening tho the rain was pouring, the Congl church was more than half filled. This Sunday evening we had a glorious meeting. There was an audience of over 450 people; Judge Thompson delivered a stirring address, logical and full of thot. The large audience listened with breathless attention. Mrs. Stevens followed with a touching plea for the Orphans Home to which was a liberal response; a collection of $46. 36 was put in the hat, afterward raised to $61.00. One person contributed an old copper cent which was sold several times for the benefit of the home. The last purchaser paid $7.50 and now offers it for $10. You may hear from it again.

So far we have 39 subscribers for the Rescue and a larger number of names for the lodge, probably 50; have also taken the names of those who will support the Sunday law. There must be over 200. We had singing which was well received by the people. New temperance music from J. B. Hill. There is a strong conviction among those interested in the temperance work that the tide is turning in Stockton, and good results must follow. We propose to continue the meetings during the coming week. On Thursday evening we go to Lathrop. Still there's more to follow. M. E. R.

C. N. GOULDING.

My last letter was from Henleyville on the 25th of last month where I lectured to a large. audience The Champions of Honor have a strong lodge numbering over fifty members and have obtained full control or nearly so; still our members hold on, determiued to fight it out and retain their charter. My appointment at Willow Creek was cancelled for the best of all reasons, no audience. I commenced a four days meeting in Yreka on Sunday evening 27, had some doubt as to the result, but was favored with large audiences. There are peculiar events surrounding and controling Yreka that render it difficult to obtain an audience, especially on Temperance; and my success in that line was regarded as wonderful. Here (Yreka) the Sons have a very strong division; they are obtaining recruits in large numbers at each meeting. I shall return to Yreka before leaving the county, and trust that I may organize a lodge there, altho it will be difficult to do so.

On the 2d, I went 18 miles to Mt. Shasta (a funeral preventing the lecture on the 1st); had an audience of 150; public installation of the officers of the lodge at the close of the meeting. Some good, I trust, was accomplished. Saturday, 3d, rode 40 miles to reach this place, Fort Jones, and have delivered four lectures here, 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th, the largest church (M. E) being crowded each evening. Obtained 36 names for a lodge. Shall return here from Oro Fino and Crystal Creek; and complete organization on Saturday evening the 10th. Am in Etna on the 11th, 12th and 13th, and hope to establish a lodge there before leaving. Am doing all that can be done with the peculiar surroundings "Champions" and "Sons" on each side; shall devote my attention to Siskiyou county for a week or two longer.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

Trustees of Orphans' Home.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Searls, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Robert Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

Lady Managers of Orphans' Home, —President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson. No. 1531; Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th St., San Francisco, Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stephens, San Francisco, G. W. V. A large number of temperance immigrants are flocking to Kansas to find a land free from the curse of licensed liquor-selling.

THE Prohibitionist says: "One of the best missions to engage in nowadays is a temperance mission to the children right at home, to teach them lessons of temperance." But how few people care what becomes of American children.

A PUBLISHED paragraph states that the German government, having prohibited the use of tobacco by boys under sixteen years of age, is considering the practicability of still more stringent laws, including the prohibition of beer in the army.

There is no use playing moral suasion tunes to the liquor traffic. Uncompromising war against it is the only way to overthrow the curse. Unconditional surrender is what we require and will have, and nothing else.

ONE of New York's most famous physicians, Dr. Willard Parker, makes the astounding statement that one-third of the deaths in Yew York city are the result directly or indirectly, of the use of alcohol, and that in the last thirty-eight years 190,000 have died of its use in that city.

"LIFE CRYSTALS," No. 1, Vol. 1, published in Oakland by Mrs Carrie F. Young, is a bright and useful health journal, full of good advice to old and young on various subjects relating to health and happiness. People that are for the present well, dont like to pay $1 a year for a health journal; it's money thrown away; it is ever so much better, happier and cheaper to go it alone and pay a $50 doctor's bill every now and then.

"FIFE AND DRUM SERIES."—Five volumes of this interesting series of temperance tales are now out; only ten cents each; very nicely got up, and by most talented authors. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St., New York.

"THE OCCIDENT," published at the University at Berkeley is a new and smart little paper, well and neatly got up: it will be found interesting to those who like to hear how the cause of education speeds on in Berkeley, $1.50 a year weekly.

Subscribers this week, Amador City 1; Pilot Rock, Oregon 1; San Francisco 1; W. C. King 13 in Porterville, Tipton and Herricks Cross; Healdsburg, Columbia, Pasadena, Valley Ford and San Lorenzo 1 each; Los Angeles 2; (Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Richardson) Stockton 65; all told 88.

EUREKA, Humboldt county.—Bro. W. T. Bonstell publishes a handsome little quarterly advertising paper. He is a Good Templar, and runs a bookstore in Eureka. All the reading space of his paper is devoted to temperance news, temperance maxims and arguments, and it is a little useful messenger of peace and good will and good influences in every home that it enters: may its shadow always widen.

What the alcohol said to itself; "I am the enemy that men put in their mouths to steal away their brains, that's true enough; but I'm ashamed to say how many times I've had to go away without having found anything to steal.—Louisville Courier Journal.

ANAHEIM.—A petition signed by numerous citizens was received asking that the board take steps to prevent performances on Sunday within the town limits. The Board instructed the Marshall not to allow Sunday preformances hereafter.—Gazette.

Glad to hear good accounts from Anaheim.

WANTED.—All the boys in the world who expect to live at least forty years, to enter the apprentice shop of old Father Time, and make men, real, genuine men of themselves. When they go into actual service in eternity, they will receive ample wages. —The Red White and Blue.

SEVEN of the cities of England who had teetotal mayors, have reelected them, and eight others have replaced theirs with other temperance men. It is to be hoped that soon drinking mayors and other public officers will only be considered fit candidates for election in Russia and Burmah.

THE Illinois brewers have contributed a fund of $5,000 to be used in disseminating "information tending to popularize lager beer as a harmless beverage." Now let temperance men raise a like sum to be used in "disseminating information tending to popularize cold water as a harmless beverage." What do you say?

WE once saw a young man bravely turning up the glass. He was a fine-hearted, glorious fellow; he was, as he said, "sowing his wild oats." We afterward saw a constable hauling a miserable drunkard from the gutter to the jail. It occurred to us that the oats were being dragged in. A glorious crop. The bar-room and gutter are exhaustless in their fertility.—Scott Act Herald.

THE FRESHEST thing in advertising is by a Glasgow furniture man. "Count Kaskowski, the Polish patriot, called to see our extensive stock one day last week. While being shown around he halted in front of a $2 oak book case and a chiffonier at $75; and bursting into tears he exclaimed, "Now I see why you have no Nihilists, no revolutionists in this happy country; it is because G—— & Co. furnish homes so beautifully, etc. Here his emotion overcame him, but after resting a few minutes on one of our $15.75 sofas, he was able to return to his hotel in a cab." It is distressing to have it break off so abruptly, and leave us in uncertainty as to how Count Kraklouseky passed the night, and what remedies were used to bring him round; how many quarts of hot gin it took to revive him.

A CLERGYMAN of this city (Detroit) has announced that he will give a little time at each evening service to the answering of such questions as members of his congregation may ask. We want to ask that gentleman the following question: "What is the most potent agency which the devil is using to empty out the churches and Sunday-schoclf of the present day?"—Lever.

RINCON, ought to be called the "banner lodge" of the state. I go down on Saturday to visit the lodge, and to initiate three men; all of them prominent men, and the last of the Americans left outside of the Order, in that section of the county—in other words, the Rincon Lodge has "corralled" the last man! I only wish I could note the same kind of progress of the cause thruout the state. I am fraternally yours, in F. H. and C.,

San Bernardino Co. H. C. BROOKE, D. D.

DAVID C. COOK'S Band of Hope Library can be ordered in any quantity, from single copies upward It will be remembered that is a weekly series of books at 5 cts. each or $2.50 a year, and all are such as have been and are now published elsewhere at 75 cents to $1.50 each. Every family should send for this, and have good reading for the young folks, and keep them from reading the prevalent trash.

SEBASTOPOL, Sonoma Co. Cal.

ED RESCUE:— You may expect subscribers for your paper soon from this place. Our lodge is distributing considerable temperance literature gratuitously, but none of the RESCUE; and this is one of our mistakes that we mean to rectify at the earliest convenience. Our lodge is holding its own, but is not progressing as we would like for it to. The loss of H. H. Peckinpah is a serious one to this county.

EDWARD S. HICKS.

BLISS' BLUNDER.—We have insisted from the first that the medical profession of America was on trial in the treatment of the case of the late President. This has been strenously denied by others. Events have justified the correctness of the Blade's position. We take no pleasure in this, for we feel as keenly as any physician can, the humiliation to the entire profession which must follow the development of the autopsy. It is rather painful to anticipate how claims as to the advanced condition of the medical science in America will be met in the future by European scientists with shrugs of their wise shoulders.—Toledo Blade.

Statistics of suicides in France show for the last thirty years the extraordinary increase of 78 per year. From 1851 to 1855 the annual average was 3,639, or one suicide for 9,833 inhabitants, while in the latest returns the annual number is 6,496, or one suicide for 5,161 population.—Chronicle.

Perfectly natural and reasonable; suicide, murder and insanity will all increase in France and in California exactly in the proportion that the use of wine and beer and brandy increases.

THE Anvil reports the death of Rev. Chas. W. Denison, a faithful, fearless, gifted advocate of temperance at the age of 70 years. He has been a zealous reformer and philanthropist. Was also a prominent Mason, Son of Temperance, and a Baptist minister. He died Nov. 14 in Washington. Another noble temperamce man too, has fallen at the ripe age of 78; Henry D. Cushing, of Boston, an active benefactor and reformer. One of the incidents of his life, related by Rev. A. A. Miner, was his refusal to close a bargain for the delivery of a large bill of lumber, (the price of which had been agreed upon), on learning that it was to build a hotel in which a bar was to be kept.

FIRST PURE, THEN PEACEABLE.

Let every selfish lip be dumb
And hushed the breath of sighing,
Before the bliss of peace must come
The pain of purifying.
God give us grace,
Each in his place,
To wait, to labor and endure,
And murmuring not,
Whate'er our lot,
To bear the ills we cannot cure.

'Tis not heroic in the fight
Which loyal hearts are waging,
When dangers rise, to turn in flight
And leave the battle raging,
There's no surcease
Or hope of peace,
While yet a foeman stands before us,
And should we cower,
The devil's power
Will gather strength and soon sweep o'er us.

Then falter not, nor hesitate,
While human hearts are bleeding.
To compromise or palliate
Is treacheaous proceeding.
And he is base
Who would embrace
The hope of peace procured by treason.
A peace so bought
Will come to nought
And linger but a little season.

"Stand like an anvil," firm and strong,
While heavy blows are falling,
Resisting every human wrong
Our brother's soul enthralling;
And his defeat
Must be complete
Who blocks the way to man's salvation
To yield one jot
Avails us not:
A spark will lead to conflagration.

Await God's time for full success,
And he will bring it surely,
Our work and patience he will bless,
And we may wait securely.
Walk not by sight,
But trust the right.
On God's sure promises relying;
Before the bliss
Of real peace
Must come the pain of purifying.

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES AND PURPOSES.

Believing that the time has arrived for united action on the part of the several independent and progressive organizations of the country, we earnestly urge all advocates of the abolition of the liquor traffic, and of the enfranchisement of women, to concentrate in determined effort to carry into effect the following Declaration of principles and purposes:

1. Governments are instituted for the protection of the governed, and it is the imperative duty of all governments to protect every citizen in the full, free and uninterrupted enjoyment of all the rights with which God has endowed him.

2. The government whose administration does not secure this equal protection to all its citizens, neglects an imperative duty, and fails to fulfil the end of its creation.

3. The liquor traffic is a gigantic monopoly, as well as a gigantic crime. It robs large classes of citizens of their dearest and most sacred rights, lessens the personal security of all classes, interferes with their personal liberty and their pursuit of happiness, deprives untold numbers of families of the comforts and necessaries of life and compels them to drag out a miserable existence in destitution, dishonor and woe, causes pauperism, insanity, strife, riot, bloodshed and death; wastes resources, destroys capital, robs labor of its just reward, impedes civilization nd threatens to overthrow our free institutions.

4. The withholding of the elective franchise on account of sex, in direct violation of the fundamental principles of our government, is disastrous to moral, social, educational, industrial, civil and political interests; therefore, we demand the ballot for woman, as an inherent right, and as a potent weapon for securing prohibition.

5. We arraign the administration of the government of this country, state and national, for their flagrant violations of the purposes for which governments were ordained: (1) In neglecting to protect, by law, life and property against the liquor-traffic crime. (2.) By conspiring with the liquor traffic crime against the citizen, to deprive him of the rights given him by his Creator. (3) By making statute leagues with the liquor traffic, the basis of which, on the part of the government, is revenue; on the part of the traffickers, money making and immunity in crime.

6. That relief from this condition of things can come only through a change of the politics that rule; for these politics do not afford protection to life and property, but do grant immunity to crime.

7. That the greatest obstacle to the suppression of the liquor traffic crime, is the political friendships existing between ruling politics and such crime.

8. We shall affirm from time to time, our convictions, utter our protests, and formulate our purposes on all questions, local, state and national, which demand the consideration of intelligent voters, and citizens of a free government ever holding that a vote cast for principle is never lost.

9. That the prohibition of the importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks can be accomplished only by an independent political party.

10. That it is the bounden duty of every Prohibitionist to give full support to the National Prohibition party, which has been in existence 12 years, and has, on three successive occasions, given voice to the main statements expressed in this Declaration of Principles and Purposes,

BREAD vs. WHISKY.

In the city of Denver, during the year 1880, the total income from the sale of boots and shoes, clothing, coal, and the products of the bakeries amounted to $1,875,000.

The income from the sale of liquors amounted to $2,000,000, or $125,000 more than was expended for the above necessaries of life.

Two millions of dollars invested by the citizens of Denver in an enterprise which has produced at least 75 per cent of all her crimes, caused a majority of her failures in business, destroyed hundreds of homes, and has not benefited a single individual except the liquor dealer.

The income from the sale of meats, game, live-stock, hay, carpets, crockery, glassware, books and stationery amounted to $2,075,000. To this add the above $1,875,000, and you have a total of $3,950,000 expended for the necessaries of life.

The sales of tobacco and cigars amounted to $2,225,000. Liquors, $2,000.000. Total, $4,225,000. Necessaries. $3,950,000. Balance in favor of tobacco and whisky, $275,000.

Is not this a good showing for the cause of total abstinence—$2,275,000 more spent for liquors, tobacco and cigars than for the common necessaries of life. —Denver Great West.

A Good County Superintendent of Schools.—At San Diego, while visiting the Public Schools, I met General Eaton, Commissioner of Education at Washington, and Mr. Hitchcock, Co. Supt. The latter invited me to visit all the schools and give temperance addresses, and informed me that he was seeking to introduce such works as "Ten Nights in a Barroom," and "Richardson's Lessons," into every school in the county. He is an educated Christian gentleman, and I suggest that our executive mail him Richardson's and Miss Coleman's books as samples to show to teachers. D. C. Cook will send samples of his books. I enquired of General Eaton how far the Eastern Boards of Education have introduced temperance text-books, and he replied that a great exertion was being made in that direction, with some success. Argued with him the wisdom and necessity of the true nature and effects of alcohol being taught in our public schools, which he admitted, and Supt. Hitchcock coincided. Afterwards called on the superintendent at his office, and obtained a copy of his last address to County Institute, from which I clip the following, and commend it to serious consideration:

"The genuine teacher, especially in our country districts, seems to me nothing less than a missionary of moral and intellectual life.

"Sad it is that in this stern matter-of-fact world of ours, money must needs be the almost universal incentive to action; make it the sole motive in education and our school system will prove a failure. The true teacher is, above all, actuated by a loving sympathy, a tireless interest, that can only be satisfied in the full intellectual development of his pupils. Not that the teacher should be poorly paid for his hours of labor. But how one's heart thrills as he studies the biographies of those who stand forth in history the great educators of the world. Yes, pedagogy is a noble, a most exalted profession, and well may we be congratulated if found worthy therein.

"What do the people expect and have a right to demand of us? You answer, that the pupils of our public schools be there trained and prepared to successfully contend in the battle of life. That they are equipped morally and mentally (in both head and heart), for the fierce struggle for existence. Is this being accomplished? First, in reference to character, morals, manners?

"The most important section of the School Law, to my mind, is No. 1702, defining the duty of teachers to impress upon the minds of the pupils the principles of morality, truth, justice and patriotism; to teach them to avoid idleness, profanity, falsehood, etc. Truly it is a reproach that so little attention is given this matter. The young heart is easily impressed and the vices discouraged. There is no use to deny it; a spirit of honor can be inculated in any ordinary school that will condemn the bully, the insubordinate and the liar. Have you yet accomplished this? If not, your greatest work is still undone. If you say you cannot do it, then do you thereby confess a lack of that coercive and magnetic power that every real teacher should possess. You have mistaken your profession. Do you know the characters of your pupils, their habits and associates? If not, you are remiss. German law, looking only to the physical protection of the Fatherland, prohibits the use of tobacco by the youth of the country. Why should not advice and instruction upon all such matters be given by you? To this end, a little book named Zoological Temperance Convention will prove of advantage. Have your trustees purchase 'Richardson's Temperance Lesson Book,' which has been adopted in the Boston Public Schools, and make use of it for your ten minute talks with your school."

ANCESTRY.

When Ben Franklin, a grimy young printer, was carrying his forms through the street one day, he met a young fellow of his own age, the son of an aristocratic family, who was so poor as to want a meal.

Franklin offered to find work for him in a neighboring shop, but received a haughty rebuff:

"The G——'s are not fallen so low as to become mechanics!"

When Franklin was Minister to France, this man died a pauper in the Philadelphia almshouse.

Family pride of another kind was shown by a sturdy farmer in Congress, who, when an attempt was made to buy his vote on a certain question, replied:

"Sir, every one of my kin in the old graveyard at home would rise if I should touch that money! I would not dare to do it."

"Nasty."—In the United Presbyterian of July 7th, we find in the editorial notes the following strange piece of history:

"What is distinctively known as the woman's movement makes but little headway. People have learned to know that it is in essence a contradiction to certain principles that are biblical and essential to the welfare of society, and they have, therefore, stood apart from it. As a movement it has proved a failure."—Signal.

And it is cheering to know that the tin-kettle bigots and leatherheads who prostitute the editorial chair of a professedly religious journal to express such sentiments as that, are only voicing their own wishes; gnashing their teeth viciously but harmlessly against the progress of truth and light, believing that they can kill the truth by telling a lie.

"SAVE THE BOY."

Words and music by Rev. L. F. Cole. Price, 35 cents. A pawerful and wonderfully effective temperance battle song. Mr. A. Paxon, Agent of Citizen's League, Chicago, says: "I know of nothing that has aided so much the work of saving the youth, as this song. Send for it It will help the cause."

"STOP DRINKING TO-NIGHT, or, THE SISTER'S APPEAL."

Song or Duet, with chorus, by S. M. Stillman. A touching and effective ballad. The beautiful and pathetic words are set to a graceful and appropriate melody. Price, 35 cts.

"THE PIONEER PREACHER."

Song and Chorus. Words by Rev. L. F. Cole. Music by T. Martin Towne. Designed to comemmorate the services of those faithful spiritual guardians who have "fought well the good fight of life," and, after years of trial, have "come near at last to a sweet, peaceful rest in the grave." Full of melody and sentiment that will touch the heart of all. Price, 35 cents.

CHAUTAUQUA ITEMS.

I have received some questions in regard to the Chautauqua course, questions of general interest, and as the editor of the RESCUE has kindly offered his columns and influence, I will answer by a public letter. First about the workings of the circle, anyone who wishes may become a member by the payment of 50 cts. per year and that entitles the members to examination questions, suggestions and certain indefinable advantages in the way of esprit de corps, and intellectual stimulus. The course is not designed for great scholars or particularly literary people, though they can be a great help, but it is devised for busy men and women who have no leisure; but if members will manage to secure the average forty minutes per day promised, the reading of the required books need not take that time, but the course opens up vistas in every direction, the literary taste is stimulated and members find pleasure and profit in spending time in further reading. It puts people in the line of profitable reading, and one can hardly spend four years as a member without acquiring knowledge in many directions, acquiring habits of attention and intellectual industry, and above all a love of good books. We are all ignoramuses but we Chautauquans, confess our ignorance and have joined hands to wade out of the depths, into shallower water and we cordially welcome all who have like aspirations.

I know many busy people of limited advantages, who have done excellent work the past year; who voluntarily shortened the vacation to commence the second year and who have felt lifted out of hard places by this stimulus and friendly association. Any one can command the time by reading less of the daily papers. The Chautauqua society has its centre East and has thousands of members. Our coast, however, has its subordinate organization and yearly meeting, because of our distance and isolation. Yearly there is a two weeks session at Monterey, a summer school to which all are welcomed, and members can camp there very inexpensively, and enjoy two weeks of profitable social intercourse. Now about the circles. The usual way of organization is this: about October the scattered Chautauquans begin to stretch out their feelers toward each other; they arrange to meet to-gether at stated times, and each circle chooses a leader who assigns the lesson and work to the members, to one an essay, to another a reading, to another to look up some subject &c. These are called local circles; besides these, if a place is large, there is a circle comprising the local subdivisions. This general meeting is similar to the others, but comprises no class work, and often it is addressed by persons not members of the society.

There is no end to the variety and profit attainable in these exercises. The size of the circles varies greatly; we know a promising circle consisting of one woman. She worked greatly in knowledge and enthusiasm during the past year, altho she could not attend the yearly meeting and on her ranch caught not a glimpse of a co-worker; half a dozen is a good number. All ages are eligible, bright eyes and spectacles; golden locks and gray locks mutual ly help each other and it is just the thing for isolated districts to draw out the latent talent everywhere and help the young. Elderly people can afford to sacrifice an occasional evening to create a profitable atmosphere for their children, and young people are especially welcome.

Next the money question. Society dues 50 cents; the Chautauquan, $1.50. The Chautauquan is published sea side form monthly and contains much of the work; it is an excellent paper containing besides valuable lectures and questions on each lesson. Several of the books cost 10 cts. and I think that besides these mentioned, $3 will cover expenses. I think $6 may cover all, and this can be much reduced by sharing—four could easily use the same books if just and thoughtful. Persons can join any time. As regards the question about books mentioned in the June Union, I can give no answer, as I have not seen the list. Though I am not the Secretary, and am usurping her work, I gladly give what information I can, and hope that many will embark in what I think will prove a pleasant voyage. By the way, each circle, or individual, rather, needs access to dictionary and encyclopedia. For papers and general direction, address the Secretary, Miss M. E. B. Norton, San Jose, Cal.

SARAH M. SEVERANCE.

A WORD TO THE MOTHERS.

We do not suppose there are many mothers who would give a child poison or deliberately allow it to be bitten by a snake, and yet where is the poison or snake whose effect can so utterly kill both body and soul as can that of the alcohol they are allowed to form a taste for, in the wine and cider put in puddings and preserves? Have a care how you foster a taste whose gratification brings nothing but misery and disgrace. How many mothers will reply in anger to such well-meant warnings as this, "My son will never fall so low. It is only the miserably weak who take more than is good for them, and drunkards are disgracefully low." Yes, yes, that is all true; but do you know that much poison can and will weaken the strongest, and none are so high that they may not fall? How many splendid geniuses have fallen thru strong drink only God can tell, but they are not a few, and how often we hear the story of an habitual drunkard which runs like this: He was the pride of his parents, and the future promised great things, but he was not strong; he had acquired a taste for the evil stuff, and we see the once proud, dashing boy reeling along the streets, or clinging to a lamp post for support. That he is your boy is no excuse for helping him to form an appetite, which even tho it does not cause his downfall, will be his bane thru life. Instead of placing difficulties in his path, help to make his way smooth, and send him forth to the battle of life with a clear head and a pure heart.—The Red, White and Blue.

OWNS STOCK.

"Can any one explain why some ministers and some religious papers are so anxious to give the saloon keepers aid and comfort by insisting that Christ made intoxicating liquor at the wedding at Cana? The German infidel, Strauss, favored the theory that the Savior made and drank intoxicating wine, and then turned around and made it the basis of an impeachment of his morality! The conclusion is more logical than the premises. No! we may rely upon it that it was no part of Christ's mission upon earth to manufacture a beverage by which drunkards could be made, a few religious newspapers to the contrary, notwithstanding."—Signal.

When Jay Gould, or the heads of a great railroad company, want a paper or an interest to support and advocate their sordid or wicked designs, they buy up a majority of the stock and secure the vote and advocacy. There is a president of a very large and influential business concern, who has a better head for scheming than any of our railroad magnates, and he is intensely interested in having men believe that the drunkenness which masters and corrupts and beats back Christianity everywhere, is a part of that religion, and was countenanced and perpetuated and incorporated by the founder of the system in it. He knows how to buy up a majority of the stock of a religious newspaper, and has been a liberal investor in that line.

ALCOHOL AT COMMUNION.

A friend whose talk and conversation I had the privilege of enjoying for a number of years—a pious faithful laborer in the cause of Christ, a truthful man, and who is now I believe, amongst the blood-washed throng above—told me this. In the church he was connected with in England there was a young man brought in amongst them—a brand plucked out of the fire—who gave every evidence of being savingly converted, and great promise if spared of rendering good service in the church. The brethren seeing this, some of the more wealthy assisted him while at college. He was licensed as a preacher, and became a most acceptable one. But his former habits of intemperance had sown the seeds of disease which at last brot on rapid consumption. He felt his end fast approaching and to his wife he expressed a strong desire to once more commemorate the dying love of his dear Lord. She communicated this to the elders of the church. Two of them came, bringing with them bread and a small bottle of wine—the good old port wine, but the poison was in it. There was a very solemn and a very happy meeting, for they believed, their pastor was very soon to be transplanted from the table below to the table above.

After partaking, the two brethren left, bidding him farewell. His wife accompanied them down stairs and to attend some household duties. But the small drop the dying man partook of in his weak condition, acted upon his system with a marvelous power. It was like throwing the spark into the tinder box. The terrible thirst for the stimulant was kindled afresh with all its wonted power; but alas! poor man, in his weak emaciated condition he had not the power to control it.

He sprang from his bed, seized the bottle of wine, drank it, which for the moment imparted a false strength. He got himself partly dressed, and unknown to his wife went out to a public house close by, got more liquor, and there within an hour, was into the eternal world. Oh. what a pity! say you. Yes, I would say a thousand pities—and a great pity so many of our friends cling to this old custom so tenaciously which is fraught with so much danger; seeing we have a substitute—the fruit of the vine unfermented? And no other could I for a moment believe would the Savior put into the hands of his disciples. But for this fatal mistake on the part of his friends, this man would have gone down to his grave honored and lovingly remembered, whereas his sad end cast a gloom over his congregation, and left his poor bereaved widow refusing to be comforted.—Bailie Pinkerton in Social Reformer.

WHICH SHALL CONQUER.

The great question of the present day with us is whether the liquor trade is to conquer this nation or be conquered by it. That trade is thoroly organized, has unbounded capital at command, and has its agents swarming everywhere. Its profits, like those of slave trade and slavery, are so great it will never lack apologists and defendersin the press, in our Legislatures and among our executive officers, as well as among the people. It will only go out like the evil spirits of old, upon compulsion; and even then it will try to rend and convulse society. Were all good men opposed to it, it could be easily overcome, but there is a class entitled to that name, who defend and patronise the liquor traffic in some of its phases, tho condemning it in those forms which do not interfere with its own indulgences, and the better the men of this class in other respects the more power they have as supporters of the liquor traffic. This is a struggle for life or death in which there is no nutral ground; every man or woman must either be for or against the great enemy of all righteousness—the traffic in intoxicating drinks.—N. Y. Witness.

OF WHAT USE?

The Signal says:

"Two things grieve us. The International Sunday School Lesson Committee have taken away our thirteenth Sunday, and 'we know not where they have laid it.' The Evangelical Alliance have carefully eliminated temperance from the category of our petitions during the week of prayer. In the program just issued, we look in vain for 'our day.'"

Of what earthly use to this country is an International S. S. Lesson Conmittee, or an Evangelical Alliance that hate temperance and are allies of the greatest foe that ever combated Christianity or cursed mankind. When such bodies reject what is today the most important part of Christianity and morality—when they declare the Sabbath school children shall be the open prey of the grogshop and the altar of the beer god shall not be assailed in the national prayer, it is fair to assume that the devil has bot up a majority of the stock in both those institutions, and the sooner American Christianity cuts loose from two such false lights and whited sepulchers full of dead men's bones, the better. We have enough of that kind of devil worship without importing it, and we have eminent Christians here, who can fill all our needs, and who will leave out Satan's interist altogether from their programs.

The fact that there are thousands of once Sabbath school pupils now in our penitentiaries because of these false teachers, justifies the foregoing remarks.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

VALLEY FORD.—Valley Ford Lodge No. 156, is again heard from, and as usual has been engaged in good work. Under date of the 15th inst., Sister C. E. Fowler, P. G. W. V. T., writes: "We sent you by Wells, Fargo & Co., seventy-five dollars in aid of our Home for Orphans' Fund, to redeem the pledge made by Bro. Harrington at Grand Lodge, as delegate from Valley Ford Lodge No. 156, the same being the proceeds of a concert given on the 8th. Our lodge is moving quietly and steadily onward; we are holding the fort, and training the youth to carry on the work of saving the state when we are gone. We wish to add our very best wishes for the noble institution which is caring for the homeless little ones, and doing such a good work by its noble example."

"PEN PORTRAITS."—The National Temperance Society, No. 58 Reade Street New York City, has just published a new and valuable work with the foregoing title. It is a 12 mo. of 276 pages, written by the brilliant and well known writer Geo. W. Bungay Esq. The book contains thirty two wood engravings and interesting sketches of some fifty leading workers, both living and dead, who have taken an active part in the temperance reform. It is an interesting volume and none will read it without being interested and profited. The price is $1,50 cloth.

"RIPPLES OF SONG."—A new copy of this popular childrens temperance song book has been received by the G. W. S. Ninety songs and hymns set to appropriate music, together with responive readings etc. for Band of Hope. Good music is essential to the proper management of a juvenile organization; 15 cts. per single copy or $1.60 per dozen, this being publishers prices. Money must accompany orders.

PARKER'S HISTORY OF THE I. O. G. T.—An advance copy of the history of the Independent Order of Good Templars, by Rev. T. F. Parker, is at hand and proves to be a valuable work. It comprises a book of 311 pages, including 15 cuts of prominent past and present workers in the order, with those who served in the capacity of R. W. G. Templar, and an accompaning personal sketch of each.

It seems to have been the aim of the author to give brief tho intelligent recapitulation of the proceedings of each session of the R. W. G. L., presening the historical facts and figures in so pleasing a manner, that none can take up the book to read, without becoming interested and entertained in its perusal. It answers the questions so frequently asked, as the status of the order at various periods and each year. All who love the order and are any way interested in its progress, should be in possession of it. It is neatly bound in cloth at $1.25 per copy, and in half morocco at $1.75. A cut of the Good Templars Home for Orphans of California, appears as a frontispiece to the book.

CONSTITUTIONS BOUND IN CLOTH.—The G. W. S. is having a number of copies of the revised constitutions, etc., bound in cloth, stamped sides, which will be furnished to persons desiring a copy, with name stamped on the cover in gilt for fifty cents. Orders accompanied with the amount should be forwarded to the G. W. S.

GLEANINGS.—Madison Lodge, No. 463 of Yolo Co. was organized Aug. 14th last with 14 charter members, and has grown to a membership of 47 with several propositions to be acted upon. All take an active interest in the work, and everything progresses satisfactorily; is what the W. S. Bro. G. S. Conner writes of his lodge.....Dr. C. S. Haswell, P. G. W. C. T. writes: I have now filled the chair as W. C. T. of Lodi Lodge. No. 189 during five evenings, and have had initiations at each meeting. The meetings are well attended and the best of decorum prevails..... Santa Clara Lodge, No. 399 according to its L. D., Bro. Elmer E Carey is prospering. It has rented I. O. O. F. hall, one of the finest and will meet hereafter on Monday evenings. .....Two Rock Lodge, No. 378 of Sonoma county subscribes and pays for a seat in the new schoolroom at the Home for Orphans. The representatives to the recent Grand Lodge session were so impressed with what they saw in the home and school, that this additional sum was voted, altho their funds were reduced to $10 after redeeming their pledge of $25 to the home and the remaining $2.50 was voted for temperance literature; so writes Bro. M. L. Freeman the L. D.

MODESTO.

Ed. Rescue:—Modesto rejoices in the enforcement of the Sunday law by the righteous verdict of a jury, none of whom can be charged with a bias against the accused, not one being a Good Templar, a church member, or even a total abstainer. The movement which has resulted in this most signal triumph of justice originated with a few noble women, who two weeks ago began to lay plans for closing all places of business kept open in violation of the Sunday law, which has so long remained on our statute book unenforced. It was apparent that a general indifference prevailed among our citizens relative to their efforts in that direction, notwithstanding the fact that all other houses, legally prohibited from transacting business on Sunday had already closed and only the saloons remained open. This being the case, the ladies themselves made complaint against Ducker and Casebolt. The subject was however taken under consideration by Morning Star Lodge and a pledge taken by the male members present to assume the responsibility of making complaint. In conjunction with other prominent citizens, they at once did so, relieving the ladies of the burden. Three complaints were accordingly prepared, one being signed by four and the others by ten citizens.

The parties against whom the first complaint was made, were cited to appear before Justice M. Burney, on Tuesday the 12th inst. The entire day was occupied in empaneling a jury, a venire of fifty men having been exhausted in the process. The case was opened on the morning of the 13th, by Prosecuting Attorney Miner, aided by Messrs W. E. Turner and J. C. Simmons, of the Modesto bar; Messrs R. H. Ward, of Merced, and C. C. Wright and Colwell of Modesto, appeared for the defense.

By request of their counsel, the accused were granted separate trials, and the case of Ducker was accordingly first called. The testimony was clear and conclusive, occupying but a brief period of time. Mr. Simmons opened the argument for the prosecution in a short, but able speech, summing up the evidence. He was followed by Mr. Ward, who made a rambling sophistical argument which occupied the greater part of the evening session and an hour of the next morning's.

Mr. Turner followed with the ablest plea ever offered before a court of justice in this county carrying conviction to every mind and sweeping away all the sophistries of the defense.

The jury were charged by the court, retired, and were absent only ten minutes; returning a verdict of "guilty. The defense were so sure of a decision in their favor, that a band of music had been brot from Turlock at a cost of $65 to conduct Mr. Ward to the train, on his departure for home, and to celebrate the triumph of King Alcohol, with the inspiring air, "See! the conquering hero comes." That has not been heard from; as yet.

To- day, all the saloon proprietors against whom complaints have been made, for a hearing next Monhave appeared before Justice Burney pleading guilty, and paying their fines, including Ducker himself, who not only paid the full penalty of $50, for his first violation of the law, but pleaded guilty on a second complaint, and paid the fine imposed upon him, leaving his partner to do the same on the first complaint. To-morrow will be a day of rest and of exemption from scenes of revelry and debauchery in our town.

The citizens of Modesto congratulate themselves on the complete triumph of law, at the hands of a jury selected from the class of moderate drinkers and on the basis of exact justice. Other communities may now take courage and press the question upon public attention in the interest of righteousness and peace for our commonwealth.

The meeting of our new Distriet Lodge at Modesto, on the 10th inst, closing with an enthusiastic public meeting in the evening and followed by a still more effective meeting at the M, E. Church on Sunday evening, aided to prepare the way for our triumph. On the former occasion Rev. W. S. Urmy made a stirring speech. He also presided at the meeting on Sunday evening, when addresses were made by Judge G. W. Schell, W. T. Turner Esq, and the writer.

Resolutions expressive of thanks for services rendered in the cause of justice by Messrs. Turner and Simmons, were last evening approved by Morning Star Lodge, engrossed copies of which were ordered to be presented to them. A valuable testimonial is also contemplated by the ladies who inaugurated the movement which has resulted in such a glorious triumph. M. D. Gage.

LODGE INSTRUCTION.

Ed Rescue—Is it not time that an officer was provided for and regularly installed in our Order, to perform the important duties indicated by the above title ?

I think our system of juvenile work has clearly established the fact wherever that work has been instituted and persevered in. I believe that those who have devoted an appropriate amount of time and thot to the juvenile work will agree with me that the average B of H boy or girl of 12 to 15 will, on being promoted (?) to the lodge room be surprised at the comparative ignorance there upon the fundamental principles of the reform; while on the other hand, the average lodge member will shrink in silence before the superior intelligence of the newmade member. Why such disparity in favor of the younger ? Why are our B of H boys and girls more intelligent upon the subject of the temperance reform than our lodge members ?. The answer is at once easy and clear. Because in the B of H exercises a small part of the time is devoted to actual teaching and learning, against the chilling excuses and declensions of the lodge "good of the Order," where pastime and entertainment is too often the chief consideration.

Now, it does not require a very far-seeing eye to anticipate the objection that a real lesson in "Good of the Order" would be irksome and unsuccessful; and in case the lodge should put in the position of Instructor some dry, prosy member, such as would be a successful burlesque upon an "old folks' concert," such disaster might follow; but almost every lodge has material from which a more or less efficient instructor could be chosen; and the short time given to the lesson would not only prove of invaluable benefit by the imparting of a store of solid useful information so necessary to the successful prosecution of the work, but would mercifully relieve a division of the lodge time, that might be often more appropriately designated as "the horrors of the order." There are various plans upon which such exercises might be conducted with both pleasant entertainment and solid usefulness, one of which I will give: Let the Instructor read one of the lessons from Richardson's Temperance Text Book, and after a few brief remarks upon essential points, give the subject to the lodge for discussion in very brief speeches, inquiries, illustrations, and suggestions. Such an exercise, using twenty minutes each evening, (or at least on such evenings as find the lodge painfully, "unprepared" with other matter,) would soon furnish our members with a store of irresistible truths by which to cope with our enemies instead of being put to silence by their sophistries and lies. It is not necessary, of course, that the ritual provide for such exercises, and any lodge that feels a desire for something certain and good for the "good of the order" may try the plan at once.

We are working hopefully for constitutional amendment. Even in Astoria the petition is being largely signed, and the circulation of the petition is a capital means for agitating the subject. Now if we can play the alliance game, and every temperance voter pledge him before the conventions of the parties, to vote for none but temperance men, we'll get the square vote upon the question beyond doubt; otherwise it is uncertain, for the bung-hole parties dont care much for petitions; its votes they are all looking after. T. J. Alley.

LEAGUE OF FREEDOM OUTRAGE.

Rio Vista, Dec. 18, '81.

Ed. Rescue.—The irrepressible conflict between light and darkness, right and wrong, temperance and intemperance, is going on bravely in this town. About the middle of November, all the business men of the town were notified to close up on the Sabbath day. And in obedience to that request, all the legitimate places of business were closed. But the proprietors of one of the breathing holes of hell, trampled the fourth commandment under foot and defied the laws of the land. Monday morning a complaint was entered against him, and he was arrested. The trial was set for Thursday, but before the appointed hour he paid his fine. Last Sabbath afternoon, one of our most respectable citizens, a Good Templar from principle—and by the way a terror to those who are dealing death and damnation to their fellow men, was going down the street, and when opposite the Exchange saloon, he saw the dealer in death froth, dragging, abusing and cursing in the most horrible manner, one of his customers, kicking him out into the street.

As soon as he saw Bro. Sorenson, he cried out in the most fiendish manner, "What are you doing here? Go away you———" and without the least provocation he came and struck him in the face, knocked him down, and then jumped upon him. This is one of the most cowardly and fiendish attacks we ever heard of. Mr. Sorenson is one of the most innocent and good-natured men in the town. Also he is well advanced in years, and is crippled; yet this infernal bully fell upon him like a panther on his prey. Such men should be banished from all decent communities. It is high time that our citizens should arise in their might, and put a stop to this hellish traffic. Let this scoundrel be branded with the mark of Cain upon his guilty brow, Let decent people avoid him more carefully than a leper,

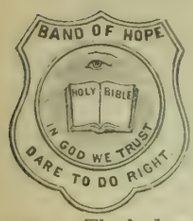
Ed. Rescue.—I see by your paper that Dr. R. H. McDonald has contributed $1,000 to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of California. What a noble soul that Dr. McDonald is. Contemplate for one moment what the condition of society would be to-day, as compared with what it is, if all men of wealth were controlled by the same motives of charity and good deeds that control the life of Dr. McDonald. Nor is he a novice in good works. Never shall I forget an incident that occurred in Sacramento City in 1851. A poor, miserable imbecile had committed a nameless crime—a crime that the statutes had never contemplated. A great concourse of people, agitated by passion and a desire for revenge, had the miserable culprit on Front street and were about to perpetrate another nameless crime by inflicting a cruel punishment. It was a terrible moment. The better class of spectators were shocked; but who dare defend that unfortunate being in the presence of that desperate and unreasoning mob? It seemed as if none there were to advise a modified punishment. Just then a man was seen rushing thru the crowd, and in a moment a tall form was standing upon the head of a barrel. He had spoken but a few words ere his influence over the people was manifest. He appealed to their humanity, and begged that reason and pity might supplant passion and anger. His eloquence upon that people was like oil upon the tempestuous waves of ocean. The mildest punishment proposed was a hundred stripes upon the bare back. For this he pleaded and then called for a vote of the numerous concourse of people on the three modes of punishment proposed by a division in three separate bodies. He carried the day; the culprit was whipped, and fair California was saved from an everlasting stain. That man was R. H. McDonald, M. D. W. W. Carpenter.

The Temperance Almanac is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages: list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1.00 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St. New York.



David C. Cook has recently opened, at 148 Madison St. Chicago, a Revolution Temperance House, and we are amazed at the amount he offers for a little money. He furnishes excellent and unique material for educating the children. It is a grand work. We advise all to send for samples and buy what they can afford. A little money expended in this way will hardly be missed, and will do you and others much good.—Prohibitionist, Lewiston, Me.

A few copies of the Proceedings of the recent National Temperance Convention at Saratoga, for sale at this office, 25 cents each; sent free by mail. Every Good Templar ought to have one.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

WHO TO BELIEVE.

Young people often hear the truths we tell them disputed. It is often said by a certain class of people that what we assert about wine and beer and such things is not true. It is therefore difficult, sometimes, for young folks to feel certain what to believe; and no one has a right to demand that any one shall believe any thing, merely because some one thinks so, or without giving good reasons for the belief.

One of the first things we read of in the Bible is an account of an evil spirit telling our mother Eve that it was not true that death would follow sin. The same spirit of evil has been declaring that lie, strait along ever since till to-day, and men and women and children have been sinning and suffering and dying every day since.

In ancient times God called up men every now and then to reprove mankind of sin; not of ten thousand little sins, but of some great monstrous prevalent sin, that had a thousand other sins branching out from it and clustering about it. These men were called prophets, in ancient times; they warned the people that if they did not repent and abandon these sins—idolatry, injustice, drunkenness, or other prominent vices of their time—punishment would surely follow. But there were lots of people who looked on and laughed the prophets to scorn, and said, what the old serpent said, "Nay, ye shall not die."

The people who said that right along, were first, the saloon keeper, then the druggist and the lawyer, and the jailor and the policeman, and the sheriff and the justice of the peace—who all made a living of some kind out of the people's sins. Not every lawyer and druggist, and sheriff, etc.; some of these loved the truth all the time, as they do to-day. But lots of them did so, and merchants and mechanics, and farmers and teachers, and even professors of religion, joined in the cry, and afterwards saw themselves and their own sons entrapped in the snares they had declared harmless.

For fifty years past, God has commanded thousands of men and women to declare the truth against all kinds of drunkard's drink, and to say, "in the day thou drinkest thereof, thou shalt die," and it is true, for altho one drink may not kill, drink kills about ten people every hour, in this our own Christian country of good schools and good homes, praying mothers and loving sisters, a land flowing with abundance of everything that is needed to make us all perfectly happy; where there is not a single cause of poverty, or sorrow, or pain, or suffering, or misery, except the accursed beer and wine, and whisky, which keep men and women and children in such misery that they are hanging, and shooting, and stabbing, and drowning themselves and each other by many hundreds, even in this beautiful state, every year.

We say, Dont drink, "lest ye die," as God said to the priests—lest ye die. But some one says, No danger.

Whom will you believe? The temperance people have nothing to gain except your happiness, if you take their advice. It is not at all likely that they will lie to you, having no motive whatever to do so. Not so the man who sells poison. Every Sabbath school boy and other boy who becomes a drunkard and tramp and gambler, will spend a good deal of money to buy liquor, and keep the beer man without work, and he and the poor fools he has already caught in the trap, will tell you there is no danger. But you have probably all seen a man drunk, and you know what made him drunk; and a man drunk is one of the most awfully lamentable sights you can ever meet with. To have once seen a man drunk, is lesson enough for a lifetime.

NATIONALITY.

The Icelanders in the traditions of their discovery of America about 900 years ago relate the following incident: A boat party was sent from the ship to examine the coast northward, and did so for several days without finding or seeing any inhabitants or habitations. But one early morning when they awoke there was a canoe near them on the shore turned upside down, and six men were asleep underneath it. "We succeeded in killing three," said the narrator, "but the other three escaped."

Just think of it; in those days the first impulse when men met with men of a different race was to kill, just as boys now-a-days of a mean and cruel and cowardly disposition pick up a stone and try to kill the beautiful birds that God made and God loves; that he made beautiful so that we would love them too, and protect and be kind to them every way. And up to 200 years ago Algerine pirates carried away many hundreds of those Icelanders and lots of other people whom they called christians, and sold them as slaves. It is but a few years since men and women were sold as slaves because they had African blood in their veins and that was not more than a hundred thousand miles from the United States.

Now there is, right here in California, a little of that old spirit left, which induced the Icelanders to kill the Indians, and the pirates to kidnap the Icelanders, and ignorant men to kill and persecute each other. That is, predjudice of race and country and of creed; and ignorance is always at the root of it. Some people speak contemptuously of Germans, of Jews, of Dutch and Irish, etc.; and some of these hate Americans and each other, and are vastly more liberal with their hatred than they are with any other property they possess. And all such hates and prejudices are belittling; it is comforting to know that to-day they are strongest and most general among savages and blindly ignorant peoples.

A drunken German or Dutchman, or one of them who pursues a criminal business, or leads a criminal life and goes to the bad, is just like the drunken or criminal English, Irish or American; under the same circumstances they act just the same; commit the same crimes, are tried in the same court, sent to the same prison, and die the same miserable deaths. Drink reduces all kinds of men down to the same level and makes them equal.

On the other hand, a polished gentleman, or a sincere genuine Christian, will say and do the same words and acts, under similar circumstances, be he European or American, Irish or German. Obedience to the command to love God in sincerity, and to love thy neighbor as thyself, raises all men up to the same level of excellence, and makes them brethren and children indeed of the same great Father. The same virtues adorn and the same vices disfigure all classes equally who practice them.

No one is in the least entitled to credit, or deserves any discredit on account of the locality of his birth any more than he is on account of his stature. To make flings at our well behaved neighbors on that account, indicates ignorance if not a malevolent disposition as well.

THAT SIGN BOARD.

Boys, it's a little funny how the rummies make mistakes and tell the truth (sometimes) about their nefarious traffic. My dear Juvenile brethren and sisters all remember the poem that sister Hattie Folks used to recite when she was about the size of a half grown china doll, (and lots prettier), beginning, "I'll paint you a sign, rumseller." I have so often thot of that beautiful recitation, and the sweet lips that rendered every syllable so clear and impressive; but of late it has been brot and held very forcibly to my mind. And now the time is scarce; I must divide it with all my people, for otherwise I could not enjoy it so well. You see, night before last we had an entertainment, and it was my pleasure to lift little sister Edie Conn upon the W. T.'s desk to recite the same proposal to paint the rumseller a sign.

Sister Edie is only five, but recites many pieces with entrancing sweetness and power, and all day yesterday that sign with its vivid colors seemed indelibly painted on our minds, and it was not difficult to fancy the "true sign board" above the entrance to every den along our streets.

Now, last night, as Bro. McCormac and I sat in Independence Hall, waiting for the beginning of a lecture (not temperance) we were almost bewildered at sight of another sign board. This was not painted with the pigment of truth that flowed from the lips of dear Hattie and Edie. It was the advertisement of a brewery, and was placed conspicuously above the stage. And how do you think it was held up there? Well, really it was probably nailed there; but a painting represented it as being securely held by the Diety that presides over all the rum interests. His great claws held firmly upon the sign, while his unearthly fiendship grinned triumphantly from behind it.

Now say, is Hattie's and Edie's a better and truer signboard than that? The old dragon of the regions below is represented as upholding and advertising his most successful means for the misery and destruction of the people; and grinning the greatest delight as the throng of poor miserable fools bow at his shrine,

To sensible people it looks strange that the old serpent would suffer his servants to so expose their master's tricks. But we must remember that his snares are not set for sensible people, and fools that never stop to look or think are easily caut. He holds up all his signs and when we cannot see his great paws upon them, and his glaring eyes and horid teeth grinning from behind them, still we know he is there; for without his constant superintendence the business could not run an hour. Now, whenever we see "beer 5 cents" painted upon his windows, let us with intelligent imagination paint the great claws and glaring eyes looking for fools, and truly a better and truer sign board you never have seen before. T. J. Alley.

YOUNG CRIMINALS.

Two young fellows who wrecked a train in Iowa, killing the engineer have been caught and confess. They are Joseph Philips aged 20 years, and George Veldenburg, aged sixteen. The former was a native of the West; the latter was brought with several other boys about four years ago, from an orphan home in New York, and was adopted by a farmer named Shields living in Iowa. They admit that they had been reading the lives of the James boys and other similar literature, and had been plotting mischief for several months. Their plan was to rob a train and then go to New York where they expected to be able to fit themselves with an armor of steel shirts and return to the West and go into business as highway men. Both express no regret at their fatal work, but are proud of it. They are in jail in Vinton, Iowa, where they will be tried. Dime novels, the illustrated police papers and the sensational boys and girls weeklies lead many weak minded young people astray.

There seems little or no excuse now for parents or guardians failing to supply young people with good stories and papers since D. C, Cook is publishing such excellent dollar and dollar and a half books for five and even two cents each, and monthly papers suitable for all classes at a nickel a year. His address is 148 Madison street Chicago. Then that deserving institution the W. T. Pub House, New York, is issuing standard temperance stories by the best writers at 10 cents apiece. These ought to be so patronized by temperance, moral and christian people as to largely run out the sensational dime novels so full of blood and murder,

And last but not least; the Rescue can be taken by almost every family in the land, paying a weekly visit laden with facts, figures, arguments, anecdotes, descriptions and useful information for the young and only $1.25 for 52 numbers by mail! Reader, see if your neighbors know about this.

TRUE HEROISM.

We wage war against drink; and we appeal to moderate drinkers to help us. We want you. We plead with you. We do not come to abuse you, to tell you you are worse than the drunkard, and all that sort of thing. We do not come to take away your gratification. But we come to ask you to give it up. We make no demand upon you, except in the name of our common humanity, and in the name of Jesus, who loves humanity.

But some persons find fault with us, and tell us we are unjust in trying to deprive moderate drinkers of that which is a lawful gratification.

A lady friend of mine, who never gives wine—I may as well mention that she was the wife of a gentleman who was Governor of Massachusetts four years in succession—was in the habit of holding receptions. She has entertained some of your nobility. She entertained Gen. Grant two days, and she did not give him any liquor—not a drop, for she gives it to none—not a drop of anything that will intoxicate. Well, at a very nice dinner party, at which were some literary gentlemen, one LL. D. said to her, "Mrs. So-and-so, I think you do me, and such as I am, an injustice." "How so?" "Well, you know, I drink a glass of wine at my dinner. I am accustomed to it. I dont think it ever hurt me. It does me good. I am fond of it. You say to me when I come to your house, 'Now, doctor, I shall give you no wine, because some one else makes a bad use of it: I shall give you none, because here is a person who, if he drinks it, hurts himself.' You take from me an innocent gratification, at the least, and that which I am used to, and that which I miss if I do not get, because somebody makes a fool of himself; and because somebody cant drink without being injured, you say I shall have none. Now, is that fair? By and by you will take away from us all our little luxuries, and we shall have nothing: and there is no knowing where these encroachments will end. Now, I like after my dinner, a little bit of cheese: I think it promotes digestion. 'Now,' you say; 'doctor, here is a man who can not eat cheese with impunity. I shall give you no cheese—I will not give a particle of cheese to my guests, because some people eat cheese to their detriment.' Is that fair? "

I ask you, Is that a fair way of putting it? Did you ever hear of a man standing up at the gallows about to be hung, and say to those who came to witness his execution, "Take warning by me, and never eat cheese?" Did you ever hear of a man murdering his wife, and giving as an excuse that he had beer eating cheese? Did you ever hear a row in the street, with ribs broken and blood shed, and find the newspapers next morning stating that it was because these men had been eating cheese? Did you ever hear a mother mourn over the dead body of her child, crying, "Would I had died for thee, O, my son! I had no hope in his death! he died from eating cheese"? All I have to say is just this—Prove to me that the use of cheese produces the same results as does the use of drink; and, by the grace of God, I will fight the cheese with all my heart. I consider it the hight of stupidity and nonsense to bring such an argument as that against us while we are advocating the disuse of intoxicating liquor as a beverage. We do not seek to take it away from you; we want you to be made so far acquainted with the evils of drink that with your heart and soul, and in the large-hearted exercise of self-denying benevolence, you may give it up for the sake of others. That is the grand principle on which we base our appeal, and is the highest principle.—The Gough Library.

REAL LOVE IS REAL HELP.

Pet was only five years old. One stormy night she could not sleep, because her father did not come home. He was always drunk when he came; and Pet thought he was sick and weak.

"Oh, dear," said she, as the wind shook the house, "this offul wind will blow him down!"

Before her mother knew what she was about. Pet opened the door and ran out into the driving rain to find and help her dear father. The storm beat upon her bare head and drenched her through; but she sped on till she saw the red light in the rum shop. In she flew, but before she could see anything, a man sprang forward and caught her wildly in his arms, and hugged her to his heart.

"O, father!" was all that Pet could say.

"My poor baby!" cried her father, as he ran out into the street; and a few minutes afterwards he laid her in her mother's arms at home. "My poor baby! It's the last time," said he, kissing her, and bursting into tears.

Little Pet's love saved her father. Love is very strong. Pet never knew how; but God made her love the means of turning her father back to him.—Kind Words.

DISAGREEABLE HABITS.

Nearly all the disagreeable habits which people take up come at first from mere accident or want of thot. They might easily be dropped, but they are presisted in until they become second nature. Stop and think before you allow yourself to form them.

There are disagreeable habits of the body, like scowling, winking, twisting the mouth, biting the nails, continually picking at something, twirling a key or fumbling at a chain, screwing or twisting a chair, or whatever you lay your hands on. Dont do any of these things; learn to sit quietly, like a gentleman I was going to say, but I am afraid even girls fall into such tricks sometimes.

There are much worse habits than these, to be sure, but we are speaking only of little things that are annoying when persisted in.

There are habits of speech, also, such as beginning 'you see,' or 'you know,' 'I dont care,' 'tell ye what' indistinct utterance, and sharp, nasal tones; avoid them all; stop and think what you are going to say, and then let every word drop from your lips just as perfect as a new silver coin.

Have a care about your way of sitting, standing and walking. Before you know it you will find that your habits have hardened into a coat of mail that you cannot get rid of without a terrible effort. —Ex.

THANKSGIVING HYMN

Father of all! whose mercy, ever tender,
Crowns with blessing all our fleeting days,
Accept the humble tribute that we render;
Receive our song of praise!

Safe through another year Thy power hath brought us.
Thy guiding hand hath led us all the way.
And Thy kind care hath loving lessons taught us
With every passing day.

We thank Thee for the Spring-time's bright awaking
With balmy air, and early song of birds,
And the glad melody our hearts were making,
Too pure and sweet for words!

We praise Thee for the sunlight and the shading,
The dewy morn and cooling evening showers;
The summer loveliness, tho frail and fading;
Its wealth of fragrant flowers.

We bless Thee for the Autumn's golden treasure,
The ripened fruit, the gathered harvest-store.
And all the good with which, in boundless measure,
Our cup is running o'er.

Nor would we praise Thee less for Winter's glory—
The snow-clad field, the silent, ice-bound rill;
Nature, in her repose, repeats the story;
We learn thy goodness still!

For every joy that tuned our hearts to singing,
For health, and friends, and days from trial free,
For wishes granted, our glad hearts are bringing,
A song of praise to Thee.

And if, for some of us, the cup of sorrow,
To our reluctant lips Thy hand hath pressed,
We bless Thy name, if on the dawning morrow
We saw Thy will was best.

We thank thee for the strength so timely given,
For promises of Thine that were our stay,
And for the precious hope of home and heaven,
That cheers our pilgrim way.

For all Thy mercies, Father, we adore Thee!
With loving heart our grateful song we raise,
And wait the day, when, crowned with joy before Thee,
We give Thee nobler praise!

WATER.

[Thoughts and words suggested by Paul Denton.]

"Not brewed in the simmering still,"
With its gases so fatal and sure,
But out from the beautiful hill
God sends us a drink that is pure.

Then up with the flag of our country,
Entwine in its soft silken fold
This motto: "Pure Water Forever,"
God brews it for young and for old.

Nature breathes forth in sweetest song
The praises to God that are due;
And the murmuring streams that glide along,
Sing this is the drink that we brew.
Then up with the flag, etc.

In flowing glade and grassy dell,
Where the children meet to play,
There God has planned a curious well
That brews them their drink each day.
Then up with the flag, etc.

No poison bubbles on its brink,
No foam of madness or fear;
From sorrow or death we need not shrink;
Then down with the poison Beer.
Then up with the flag, etc.

The drink that is stilled by God's own hand
Is the only drink that's free;
Then down with the demon Alcohol,
And fight for liberty.

Chorus.—Three cheers for the Red, White and Blue.
Three cheers for those who are true
To this motto: Pure Water Forever,
Our flag and the Red, White and Blue.

Air, "Red, White and Blue." Tulare County.

STRONG DRINK MAKES PEOPLE SICK.

1. Intemperance helps to make people sick.
2. In times of pestilence those who drink always get sick first, and are the least apt to get well.
3. This was known a long time ago, and in an eastern city, to persuade the people to be sober and escape the plague, a placard, bearing the words, "Drunkards will be the first victims," was carried about the streets
4. The reason that those who drink get sick so easily, is that strong drink makes the blood impure and weakens the body, so it can not cast off disease.
5. For this reason the places where strong drink is sold are often closed in times of great sickness.
6. Doctors know this is true, for they say that disease seems to pick out those who use strong drink.
7. Those who never touch strong drink almost always escape these dreadful diseases.
8. If it were not for strong drink a great many dreadful diseases would hardly be known of.

QUESTIONS.

1. What helps to make people sick?
2. What of those who drink in times of pestilence?
3. What was done in an eastern city to persuade men to be sober?
4. What is the reason that those who drink get sick easily?
5. What is often done for this reason?
6. What do doctors say about this?
7. What about those who never drink?

CONTRASTS.

The more spacious the parlor and brighter the fire of the rumseller's, the more scantily furnished and colder are the abodes of those who patronize him. While the rumseller drives his $1,000 span, his customers cannot even afford a five-cent horse car. From the bung-hole of every barrel of liquid damnation that is sold by the dramsellers there flows a constant stream of drunkards, paupers, tramps, lunatics and imbeciles to fill poor-houses, houses of correction, jails and prisons; while blasted hopes, ruined homes, and pauper's graves are the relics of the trade. Every dollar that the owner of the rum shop and his rum-selling tenant put into their pockets, comes out of the pockets of the poor men, and is a dead loss so far as the public good is concerned. Worse than that, the more rum sold, the more burdens there are imposed upon the honest citizens and tax-payers. The richer the landlord and his rum-selling tenants grow, the poorer becomes the landlord who lets his buildings for tenements and legitimate business. It is an indisputed fact that the laboring man who has a family cannot indulge in liquor drinking and pay his landlord and grocer.—Ex.

HE DRINKS.

Tell me a young man drinks, and I know the rest. Let him become captive to the wine-cup, and he is the captive to all other vices. No man ever runs drunkenness aloue. That is one of the carrion crows that go in a flock. If that break is ahead you may know the other breaks that follow. In other words, strong drink unbalances and dethrones, and makes him the prey of all the appetites that choose to alight upon his soul. There is not a place of sin upon this continent but finds its chief abettor in the places of inebriety. There is a drinking place before it, or behind it, or a bar over it, or a bar under it. The officer said to me that night. "You see how they escape legal penalty; they are licensed to sell liquor." Then I thot within myself, the court that licenses the sale of intoxicating liquors, licenses gambling houses, licenses libertinism, licenses diseases, licenses death, licenses all crimes, all sufferings, all disasters, all woes. It is the legislature and courts who swing wide open the grinding, rearing, stupendous gate of the lost.—Talmage.

FIRST-CLASS AGENTS WANTED.

The great reputation of JOHN B. GOUGH, the magnificent make-up of "Sunlight and Shadow," and the universal demand for it among all classes, makes this the best opportunity ever offered to energetic agents to make money. We want first-class agents in every township, to whom liberal terms will be given. Address, for territory and terms, J. Dewing & Co., 420 Bush St., San Francisco.

THE Temperance Revolution is about to issue a book, to be sold at their popular price, and which will reveal the general lawlessness of the liquor traffic. The book will cover these general topics among others: The Ostracising and Abuse of Temperance Workers; Personal Abuse and Injury; Intimidation by Threats of Lawless Proceedings; Actual Destruction of Property, etc.; Bribery in Elections and Legislatures. Those possessing definite information upon any of these points which will be of value in a book of this character, are invited to communicate with The Temperance Revolution, David C. Cook, Manager, Chicago, Ill.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

CHILI AND PERU.

The following letter has been sent to the N. Y. Tribune by a very distinguished and excellent gentleman, one of the principal partners of the house of Balfour Guthrie & Co. of this city, for years a resident merchant of Valparaiso and now member of parliament for Liverpool, England.

Liverpool, December 16, 1881.

In the Chili Peru controversy I hope the influence of your government may be salutary. Peru is morally, financially and politically bankrupt. She can not indemnify Chili—her promises like her bonds are utterly worthless. The acquisition of territory by Chili is an accomplished fact. The Desert of Atacama was colonized by Chilians, and draws its sustenance naturally from Chili and not from Peru. We urge the Washington government to promote the interests of civilization and constitutional government, and these will be guaranteed by recognizing the predominating influence of Chili, so ably sustained by her statesmen and vindicated also at great cost on the field of battle. On any other lines the action of the Washington Government may be injurious to human progress.

S. Williamson. M. P.

There are many who know very little of the origin and causes of the recent war between Chili and Peru, and who think because the latter is vanquished it is hardly treated. But they forget or do not know that the miserable remnant of Peru has refused to treat or make peace with Chili, or listen to their offered terms. For a time after the capture of Lima, no Peruvian dared for fear of assassination by his countrymen, treat with the Chilians for peace. Therefore Peru is virtually still at war and can complain of no hardships endured from Chili.

There are good, honorable, noble men and women in Peru and have been all along; high-minded, honest people, scorning falsehood and injustice, and living uprightly as any other people. But the average Peruvian, the official, the trader and the citizen has been always very unprincipled, immoral, drunken, dissipated, dishonest and corrupt, and as inveterate a gambler as the Chinaman.

A large proportion of the classes who can read and write have been in the employ of the government, drawing salaries from the proceeds of the national bonds which were sold at ruinous discount against the guano to be delivered in ten or twenty years to come. Thus, any president or cabinet that favored economy or retrenchment had the opposition of this numerous body of corrupt men, and had either to change their policy or be driven out.

The parties defeated at an election, if possible at all, appealed to arms, and revolutions great and small were remarkably frequent. To encourage European capitalists to advance money on the guano deposits, the government agents were every year reporting immense discoveries of new and exhaustless deposits, which had no existence or foundation whatever, but were intentional frauds.

Extravagance and reckless waste and the wildest corruption were continued from year to year and came to a climax under the beneficent reign of brilliant plunder engineered by Harry Meiggs, the railroad king. Railroads were built at an expense to the government or rather to the English money lenders of five or six times their cost; the spoils were divided among Meiggs and the officials who carried his measures thru Congress, and many of the roads would not pay working expenses when completed.

In the year 1875 the bubble burst: Peru owed about 270 millions, had nothing to pay and was trying to mortgage more guano that it did not have, to borrow 15 millions to pay its interest of that year. The guano was so used up that there was very little that had not from 25 to 38 per cent of sand and stone mixed with it and even at that was very costly to get at. There was none and there is none to-day worth mentioning that would have been accepted as merchantable 15 years ago, and it would not be used now, but for the fact that the pure guano that used to be exported from Peru was most villainously adulterated and deteriorated by the thieves in England, America and Germany who were agents for its sale there. There is good ground to believe that the farmers generally purchased 25 to 33 per cent of the sand and rock of their own neighborhood, ground up with their guano and paid $65 a ton for it.

In 1875, the Peruvian government confiscated the nitrate beds of their Southern territory, which had been colonized, developed, worked and owned by Chilians, and the foreign residents of Valparaiso. They were to pay the owners something, but their failure to fulfil their stipulations led to the war, and their insolence and dishonesty and incompetency as a nation and a people, were solely to blame for that war.

These nitrate beds were seized to enable the government officials to raise more money to drink and gamble and dance idly away; a grand revenue from the guano deposits, for 35 years had been squandered in dissipation, corruption and war; a revenue which should have belted Peru with railroads, put a school house in every village, given them a first class navy and merchant marine, paid all the expenses of the government, without a cent of burden on import or export, developed all their mines and made it a land of gold and silver beside. But Peru has been a wine and brandy producer, and it has gone irrevocably to the dogs and can never rise of itself, above its present condition of an unruly mob—bankrupt morally, financially, religiously, politically, nationally and every other way. The only hope is to see Chili act the school master, and exercise a supervision over Peru that will lead it out of chaos—which is the only condition of which it is self-capable.

The word "Tirosh" in the Hebrew scriptures denoted the fruit of the vine in its natural wholesome condition. This and what follows regarding scripture wines is the verdict of the Christian scholarship which has thoroly studied the whole matter. It is not by any means an unsupported opinion of the writer. Tirosh occurs 38 times in the Bible; 36 times it is noted as something good and approved: twice it is mentioned without approval, but not at all implying that it was intoxicating. These passages are, "they assemble themselves for corn and tirosh and they rebel against me," and "Whoredom and wine and tirosh take away the heart." In the latter, tirosh is evidently used as something different from the intoxicating wine which precedes it.

In the 36 passages named it is represented as growing, as on the vine, in the cluster, in the vat, in the sacrifice, as failing thru drout etc., but it is rendered oinos in the Septuagint Greek, and all but 4 times, vinum in the Latin vulgate, and always wine, new wine or sweet wine in the English Bible. This is important, as is also the fact that not one of the Greek, Latin or English translators knew anything at all of the real nature of wine or its fermentation; only what they could see of its effects when used.

It was not tirosh that Noah, Lot, Nabal and the wicked priests used, or that was condemned or prohibited; not once. Hence, the idea that it could have been alcoholic, or meant alcoholic wine used in moderation, has not a shadow of probability, but is utterly preposterous.

"Yayin" is a generic term, comprehending vinous beverages of every sort; it is used 48 times, in terms of condemnation, disapprobation and prohibition, and is paired with idolatry, treachery, sensuality, falsehood, harlotry and woe. It occurs 17 times without condemnation in connection with oil and bread, corn and vinegar, milk and summer fruits, etc., and in such instances, those who prefer to believe the Bible is true and consistent, and not an erratic weathervane, believe yayin stands for the grape itself, or the grape crop, or the natural grape juice.

In all but two or three of these diverse passages, yayin, condemned or not condemned, has been translated just the same as tirosh blessed and approved was, viz, oinos, vinum, wine. And the translators were all innocent of what fermented wine really was; they all believed it to be a natural Godgiven fruit of the vine. They had no idea that it was a villainous harlot, which the devil had dressed in the stolen robe of one of Gods blessings, and seated by the wayside to decoy mens souls to hell.

"Shekar" and some other words are found, some good and some bad, but mostly all translated "wine" in our bible. One which has been rendered flagons and flagons of wine, turns out to mean pressed cakes of dried fruit.

Now as all ferment in food and drink was strictly forbidden at the passover; wine prohibited to the priests and thoroly cursed and denounced in Scripture; tirosh alluded to as a wholesome luscious food, and well known to be the table drink and an important part of the sustenance of the people of all ancient grape countries; it requires a wonderful elasticity and peculiar quality of faith to compass the belief that Christ and his disciples used the bad and unwholesome fiery cup of devils and turned their backs upon the wholesome luscious gift of God.

It is not positively stated that Christ was a total abstainer from alcoholic wine; the only time we know it was offered him he refused it; but it was not considered necessary to state that he abstained from 50 other vices, because it was taken for granted that being without sin he avoided them.

The new and old bottles could have had no allusion to fermented wine. If wine had fermented, an old skin bottle, unless very dilapidated indeed, would preserve it as well as a new one. If the wine was to ferment in the bottle it would burst a new goatskin or a new barrel of iron as readily as an old bottle. What was said about new wine in old bottles would have had no meaning, if alcoholic wine was meant. But it applied exactly to the natural fruit of the vine. Old bottles would have some sediment which having been exposed to the air would contain germs of ferment, which would set the grape juice to work and burst any skin. The idea that the new skin would distend with the fermentation is absurd, for it would have to distend to 47 times its bulk to hold fermenting wine. The wine skins of that day were prepared before the new wine was put in them, with some pitchy substance within and without, and this preparation doubtless rendered the bottle new or ready for new wine.

To prepare natural unfermented wine in Judea as the Egyptians, Greeks, Romans always did by boiling and sealing in skin bottles then kept in water or in a cool cellar for some months after it was made—or by boiling down to a syrup or cake as was the custom in those days, and is yet, to be mixed with water when used—or by the use of sulphur fumes in the bottling of the fresh grape juice—was a matter of no difficulty; every body could do it easily and very inexpensively, and they did so.

No doubt many of them let some of their wine ferment at the vintage season and enjoyed a jolly drunk on it; but to secure a vinous fermentation and preserve that wine was a matter of great difficulty; to keep it from going into vinegar at first and all the time was a difficulty, as there was no brandy to fortify or preserve it as there is now. The temperature being so high in Judea during the vintage, it must have been very difficult to produce the vinous fermentation and prevent the immediate conversion into vinegar; it is quite probable that alcoholic wine was seldom desired, and only for purposes of drunken debauch.

There is no difficulty to encounter in accepting the natural interpretations and conclusions of the bible. To believe that Christ used or countenanced the harlot wine, needs an armor of alligator hide. It is much easier to believe that the word drunkard used in scripture, with such emphasis of abhorrent condemnation, meant the people who drank at all of fermented wine, the cup of all filthiness, and not those who used it in excessive quantities; there is pretty good ground to believe that the wine bibber, meant the moderate or immoderate user of poisoned wine, and with the drunkard and glutton was pronounced unfit for heaven. Next week this will be concluded with some remarks on the communion of the Corinthians.

THE PRIZES.

The distribution of the R. H. Mc Donald prizes at Union Hall on last Friday evening, was an occasion of much deep interest to the young folks there assembled. Several of the essays were read and strong condemnations of the Twin Evils seemed to meet with general approval from old and young. The great central attraction to the latter was to be witnesses if not beneficiaries in the distribution of the prizes and medals. The doctor was in his glory in handing out the prizes to the lucky ones and decorating the extra distinguished contestants with their beautiful and costly medals. There was no public rejoicing, no grand banquet, no procession with brass bands to signalize this event; perhaps 2000 people young and old were present and but a very few of them thot this was such a hightoned and important affair as a great state horse race might be, in which some rich blackleg's fancy trotter should make a mile in two or three seconds less than it was ever done before. But properly weighing this whole affair, including the first suggestion by Miss Anna R. Congdon, of the scheme of prizes in schools: its ready adoptton by the W. C. T. U. and the $1.000 worth of sympathy with which Dr. Mc Donald so readily rendered the project possible in this city; the interest awakened on the subject; the active search made for information; the acquisition of knowledge of infinite importance to the young and to the parents and families to whom the young will impart what they have gained; the public distribution of those prizes and the emphasis which that crowning ceremony impressed upon the whole enterprise—all these things considered in relation to their influence on morals and character—it might be rash or silly to assert that this action in its entirety will not add more to the moral and financial welfare of the people of this city and state, in the near future, than the completion of the overland railway or of any of the great financial or industrial enterprises that have ever been accomplished here. How few people ever consider that the raising of the public moral status, is the only possible mode of raising the general financial status. Good morals and sobriety can amass a competence any where, on very sterile ground, but the richest yields of gold and silver and diamonds cannot divorce immorality from its natural bedfellows, pauperism and misery.

VERY GENEROUS.

There have been a great many handsome and heroically generous acts recorded of individuals and communities, rich and poor in California, from its early history down. But one that will take rank among the most kindly and beautiful and precious, occurred a few days ago. In the public school of San Bernardino the sum of $50 had been provided for a Christmas tree for the pupils. It was put to vote how this money should be applied best to fulfil its design as a Christmas enjoyment, and the pupils voted spontaneously and unanimously to present the whole amount to the Good Templars Home for Orphans. That was a noble deed of charity and a genuine one; for it involved a greater self-denial than perhaps any great contribution of $100,000 ever did from any rich magnate of whose means his donation was but a trifling fraction. Such an act deserves to be recorded in letters of gold, and the inmates of the Home and the Good Templars and all good people who read of this, will pray the good Father of all to return this blessing a hundred fold to every one of those juvenile heroes. And they will surely enjoy their Christmas most happily.

HOME PROTECTION.

These meetings at the Y. M. C. A. hall on Saturday evenings are an accomplished fact. The roll is growing and the interest increasing. At last meeting, Mr. W. H. Barnes gave a very excellent and eloquent address in which he evidenced a very thoro acquaintance with the subject he was discussing. Many interesting anecdotes very aptly illustrating his theme, elicited hearty and sympathetic applause. He paid a high compliment to the people of Riverside who are engaged in the cultivation of the vine for raisins and commented on the probable future of their community as compared with that of the wine growing populations of the state. He said he had spoken beyond his allotted time, but the audience did not think so; he concluded with the song, "That's what the temperance cause has done for John and me," and did that so well that he was compelled to add "Poor old Joe" as a postscript; in both of which Mr. Barnes proved himself as much an adept in music as in speaking.

Col. Babcock, after some singing &c., was called out and came under protest that he was being imposed upon; but he made an inspiring appeal for the conservation of the Sunday Law and the maintenance of the American institutions under which this country has become a good one to emigrate to, in preferance to the adoption of those manners and customs which have made the country of the enemies of the Sunday Law, such a favorite place to emigrate from.

It appears Col. Babcock is a species of electric light that it must have taken a good many bushels to cover up all this time; but quite lately he shines out very brightly and can be depended upon to ensure the success of any meeting in which an easy, fluent and effective speaker is needed to throw light on the temperance question. The Colonel's business is to bring up good water to the surface by means of Artesian wells, and now during the winter months while his regular business is for a time suspended, he will help us all advise our neighbors of the great superiority of clean water over the drink that satan has bathed in.

MORE PUBLIC BRIGANDAGE.

The Chronicle reports Senator Windom of Minn. as introducing a bill into the Senate of the U. S. on the 12th, to steal twelve million acres more of the people's land and present it to the Union Pacific to assist it to build a Northern branch. A better bill would be to disfranchise forever any miserable slave and malefactor's tool that shall ever dare to introduce a bill into any congress or legislature, which proposes to give an acre of the public domain to enrich a gang of thieves, who already plunder from the people in extortionate over charges, every five years, about the full amount of the value of their roads already built with the people's money.

The bare introduction of such a bill indicates a well grounded belief that the good old days of a confident tenure of Republican ascendancy have returned, and that the blood hounds of plunder are again to be let loose in this congress. No such sign of political depravity and rottenness has dared to show itself in public for some years past. It is to be hoped that Mr. Windom's name has been abused in this matter, and that he is innocent.

HAPPY CHRISTMAS.

It is the custom with almost every newspaper to try to say something more than usually pleasant and pretty to its readers at Christmas time. The Rescue goes out to all its readers with a good will and a kindly feeling, that it is puzzling to know how to increase for any special occasion. But as the day we set apart commemorates the opening of a new era of peace and love and kindness and charity and benevolence that dawned upon the world nineteen centuries ago, it is fitting that we should make it the occasion of a new departure in words and deeds and thots of kindness toward each other and the world, and in renewed effort to prosecute our portion of the work which remains to prepare this world for the promised kingdom of peace and good will which we know is to come. That the Christmas season of 1881 may be one of peculiar enjoyment and improvement in all that is good, to all readers of the Rescue, is the hearty wish and prayer of Box 1721.

GOV. ST. JOHN OF KANSAS.

The Living Issue hoists the names of Gov J. P. St John and G. T. Stewart for President and Vice President in 1884. and no one could do a more pious act. The word pious there means just what it is. From the standpoint of Christianity, morality, sobriety, intelligence, honesty, decency, not a single objection can be offered to either of those men; and their capability, energy and entire fitness are unquestionable. In the modern qualifications of a politician they are perhaps lacking, which makes them fitter still. They would not take a bribe, they could not be bot up; they would not sell 100,000 a year to the sons of the republic to be drunkards and thieves; and 10,000 a year of the dauters of the land to lives of shame, for a revenue of 60 millions. Consequently they would be objectionable to the thieves and outlaws of the land, and to no one else, and consequently neither of the old parties will nominate them. If the Republican party would head a prohibitory platform with those two names, they would in 1884 elect their whole ticket, 2 to 1, and would secure their supremacy for 30 years to come, but if they continue to play the harlot with the grogshop, they will get beaten in 1884, and never rise again, nor ever deserve to. The morally blind and the fool wont see this till it comes.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

E. H. BOSCHER, Druggist,
169 Main Street,
Stockton, Cal.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS.

There were certain parties entitled during the year past to receive premiums for clubs secured for the Rescue. It is believed they have all been ordered and paid for; but it is possible that some one or more may have been overlooked. If any one entitled to such has not received it, please drop a postal card. The Mrs. Hayes picture was to have been ready for delivery November 1st; have not heard whether it has been sent out or not.

DR. COGSWELL'S FOUNTAIN.

H. D. Cogswell proposed to donate to the city an ornamental drinking fountain, provided it be received by a special committee of the Board and erected near the Oakland ferry, maintained in good order and fuanished with lights and ice at the city's expense: otherwise to revert to the donor.—Chronicle.

Dr. Cogswell is munificent in his gifts of "drinking fountains." The design for this one indicates a very handsome ornament as well as an exceedingly useful addition to the surroundings of the Ferry Depot. There can be no doubt but the supervisors will very promptly and very gratefully accept the generous and timely gift.

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

It was proposed to issue a 20,000 edition of the Rescue about Christmas, but as every body was preparing extra Christmas agony for the people, it was deemed best to defer this paper's extra edition till the returns of the present quarter come in. So on the 10th, or possibly the 17th, of February it may be expected, some of the correspondents of the paper, it is hoped will give their aid to make it a creditable issue, by preparing a ⅔ or ¾ column article. And honest advertisers can have a good show off.

INFORMATION WANTED.

A noble Christian lady writes me to know "what is embodied in the work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union? Perhaps it would be effective in our beautiful and intelligent city." In reply have referred her to Sister M. E. Congdon, 314 Sutter St. S. F. for further information than I gave. Perhaps if Sister Congdon will give a general reply in the Rescue many will be interested and profited.

League of Freedom.—There is a demand for U. S. troops to protect the lives and properties of the people of Tombstone from the devilish work of the League of Freedom there. The groggeries of the League are turning out daily so many crazed and blood thirsty criminals to prey upon the orderly citizens that life is not safe a moment there for any one. It is an infamous disgrace to every citizen of America that one of these drunkeries should be allowed to exist anywhere for one hour, and yet driveling hypocrites will prate about forcible measures to abolish polygamy in Utah, and go strait and vote that the grogshop may continue to pollute this whole country with as much beastliness and bloody crime flowing from it every day as is committed in the whole of Utah in a dozen years.

Lathrop.—Thursday evening a meeting was arranged for Lathrop. The Saloonatics had fired up, and were prepared to break up the meting, but utterly failed to intimidate the speakers. They talked and sang, and came off victorious, organizing a lodge of 35 charter members, which was an unexpected success.

This has certainly been a piece of revival work of great value to every good interest in California, and it ought to be extended to every city of the state. It is presumed there will be a partial cessation of hostilities now till the new year opens.

OREGON.

OFFICE OF THE G. W. C. T.
HILLSBORO, Or. Dec. 6, 1881

To the Good Templars and friends of temperance of Oregon:—Col. J. T. Long of Kentucky has been employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T. of Oregon as Grand Lecturer and organizer for six months; he arrived at this place and delivered his first lecture Dec. 1st. The Col. is one of the best speakers in our Order; fluent, forcible and chaste. His record thru Illinois last year cant be excelled, having organized over one hundred lodges, thereby adding nearly three thousand to the roll of membership in that state.

Now, brothers, sisters and friends, he is with us and for us. Let us do all we can to assist him. We must hold up our banner for the right, proclaim his coming in our midst, prepare the way before him, have the hall in readiness, warmed and lighted. He likes music at his lectures: arrange for that and herald his advent in your midst that a good time is to be had. Get old sinners out to hear him, that they may be saved, before it is too late. Get the young and innocent to hear him before they fall into the snares of the tempter; and you who have taken the pledge and obligation hear him, that you may be strengthened and hold out steadfast.

Our Order is the best temperance organization in christendom; none other is as strong today. Shall we let it decline? No. Let us make it stronger than ever, that the gates of hell may not prevail against it; and in time we will conquer.

CHAS T. TOZIER, G. W. C. T.

P. S. Just heard from Col Long; he organized a fine lodge Sat. evening at La Fayette Yam Hill Co. 18 charter members. C. T. T.

Hilsboro Lodge No. 17 is the Banner lodge of the state. On last Saturday evening five were inititated and three more applications and there are some five or six elected for next meeting. We have a committee whose duty it is to arrange a program for each meeting. Under head "Good of the Order' speeches (by special ones for the occasion) music, declamations and readings, which has a tendency to bring a good attendance; hence more interest for the Order.

ASTORIA, OREGON.—The open temperance meeting on Tuesday evening, at Good Templar's hall, was opened with appropriate exercises. Such perfect order prevailed thruout the exercises as was creditable to the young people of Astoria. One of the most interesting features of the affair, was Mr. Alley's Juvenile Band of Hope, many of whom with bright and happy faces took part in the exercises. These exercises consisted of singing, short addresses, and recitations. At the close of an address on the importance of open temperance meetings, Rev. Mr. McCormac offered the following resolution which was carried unanimously: "Resolved, That we cordially endorse the action of the Good Templar's Lodge in appointing this open temperanoe meeting, and we earnestly hope that such meetings will be of frequent occurrence in future.—Daily Astorian.

IN MEMORIAM.

AT a special meeting of Guerneville Temple, No. 40, Juvenile Templars, held on Friday, Dec. 9th, 1881, the following memorial was unanimously adopted:

Death has again entered our circle, and this time taken one who can never be replaced. Brother H. H. Peckinpah, during his three years' membership, entered fully into all the interest of this temple. We have no words to tell how able and faithful he was. As a member of the Executive Committee, he was a great cause of our success; as a member of society, his character commanded respect. He was a great worker in every branch of the temperance cause.

We sincerely mourn his loss, and offer his relatives our deep sympathy in their great sorrow. We recommend that crape be worn on our regalia, and our charter be draped for thirty days. We also recommend that copies of this memorial be given to his relatives, sent to the RESCUE for publication, and placed upon a page of our record book, inscribed to his memory. In truth, love and purity,

ELLA MANNING, }
EMMA GOULD, } Committee.

GUERNEVILLE, Dec. 12, 1881.

ED. RESCUE:—My effort to get up a club for the Rescue, has resulted in receiving twenty names, which with the number already taken here, will make a fair sized club for a small place like Guerneville; and yet I feel that we ought to have added ten more names to the list.

When Good Templars come to realize their true relation to their own temperance paper, the RESCUE, and the temperance press in general, there will be no difficulty in procuring a good large subscription list.

To those who have favored me with their names, and others who have given words of encouragement, I return my sincere thanks. As to those who took the opposite course, I only hope they will come to see their error, and in future be found on the side of their temperance paper, and not on the side of the rum seller. Fraternally Yours,

MRS. M. A. ROBINSON.

SANTA CLARA, CAL., Dec. 9, 1881.

BRO. WOOD:—The Good Templars of this place sent for Bro. F. J. Culver to come and deliver some lectures for them. He kindly consented and spoke three evenings. We believe if he could have been with us longer we would have a boom. This town needs one, and Bro. Culver is the man for that. Bro. Culver's address is the Pacific Theological Seminary, Oakland, if any one desires to send for him.

The lodge in this place has rented Odd Fellows hall as a place of meeting. We took up the Sunday law; a case was appealed from here, and I suppose the matter will have been definitely settled by the Supreme court by the time this is read.

We are now agitating the subject of a "free water trough." Every lodge should see that free water is provided; it is too bad for any one to have to stop in front of a rum hole to water a team.

ELMER E. CAREY.

BRO. A. D. Duncan, who removed some months ago from Stockton to Chicago, renewing his subscription to the RESCUE, says the Good Templars are booming there, and he thinks the R the best paper in the U. S. Our good brother is evidently partial to his old Good Templar home and its belongings. He is W. C. T. of Fidelity Lodge, No. 356 in that city. Glad to see our California members shining out when they go abroad, and doing honor to the name they bear.

FARM FOR SALE.

Nine miles from Los Angeles Court House between Florence and Downey, bounded by Anaheim Railroad and Old San Gabriel river. 270 acres with 270 shares of water in San Antonio Irrigating Company. Orchard of over 2,000 apple and pear trees. House of four rooms, barn, etc., Splendid opening for large dairy business; 100 cows could be milked at a gross profit of five thousand dollars per annum.

Lands specially suitable for alfalfa—10 tons per acre per anumn. A large portion of the land particularly adapted for the plum, prune, apricot, chestnut, etc., also for Muscat grapes for raisin making which would be very profitable. The whole Farm is fenced and cross fenced, and being well supplied with water, it is one of the very best Stock Ranches in Southern California. There are a few acres in Willows, Forest Grove Station is at corner and School adjoins.

$12,000 was refused for this property by late owner, who valued it at $$18.000. It was sold under foreclosure mortgage and is now offered for $10,000 cash. Date of redemption is past; and an absolute and perfect title will be given.

ENORMOUS SAVING TO SCHOOLS.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1.00, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36, besides 133 Library books, 5 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty six million copies. There is not one of our publications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan.

The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1¼c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c. owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2 cents a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with little lesson pictures; also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c. per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words); also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45.

Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. Far better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection; books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library with little trouble or expense.

PRICES postpaid.—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5½ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5¾ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

Lecturers' Reports.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

WM. CROWHURST.

VALLECITO, Dec. 16, 1881.

At Copperopolis, three good meetings were held. On one evening an entertainment was given to about one hundred and sixty persons. Much interest was manifested, and several names obtained for admission to our ranks. After all expenses, about $25 was netted in favor of the "Hall Fund." A hall is to be erected and the Order placed upon a permanent footing. The lodge is distributing the David C. Cook temperance literature, and proposes that Copperopolis shall not be behind in the fight.

Telegraph City was next visited, and altho the people "thot the lecturer wouldn't come," we had a small but pleasant meeting. The lodge was afterward reorganized, with Bro. W. H. Pope as W. C. T., Sister Miss Lily Kinney, W. V. T., and Brother Ira Saunders, W. Sec.

For Angels' Camp we then started, but was arrested and imprisoned by Sister M. E. Tower, of Salt Spring Valley, and induced to give a lecture that evening. Her sons and daughter Etta were sent on horseback all over the neighborhood to rally the community. A pleasant little meeting was held in a cheerful little hall belonging to the lodge. Enthusiasm was manifest, and a desire in the near future to organize a Band of Hope.

At Angels' Camp we were not met by angels, but we were by a committee, and escorted to Stickles' Hotel, where no liquors are to be had, but instead, thereof, a cheerful, cosy little place, with sociability, refreshment, music and moral principle abounding. In front of the church, the Angels' Brass Band discoursed sweet music—for which the meeting gave a unanimous vote of thanks to the twelve bandsmen—and afterward a choir of ten rendered harmonious music within—this also elicited a vote of thanks. Enthusiasm prevailed from beginning to end, and the chairman, Bro. W. W. Hughes, brother of our Grand Lecturer, was proud of the success. Well he might be, for he worked hard to secure the desired result.

J. W. WEBB.

SAN DIEGO is indeed a pretty place, and has a beautiful bay, and enjoys a delightful climate; many new-comers and a business boom. Railroad will soon make connection with the East; construction trains pass thru the city daily and a steady growth is looked for; many good houses going up. Bro. Hotchkiss, who had well advertised meetings thru the county, met me at wharf, whence I went to Bay View Hotel, kept by George Butchart, formerly of Lompoc. He well knows how to keep a family hotel, and has no sign of bar, liquor, cards or billiards about the house, which is well patronized and very quiet, being off from the business part of the city. He subscribed for the RESCUE and Cook's monthly library of standard temperance stories, to be placed in the reading-room for use of guests and visitors. Here met Alex. McDonald, formerly of Modesto Lodge, who will likely unite with one of the two lodges here; also Brother and Sister Astow of Watsonville. Received a cordial welcome at Band of Hope—a band of brighi little ladies and gentlemen, with old ones enough to make it a success, Bro. Hotchkiss and Sister Henderson leading. On Sunday morning preached for Rev. A. W. Bunker, M. E. Church; then ran over to Baptist Sunday-school; took part in Bible class, urging Sunday Law enforcement (as the subject was germain to that); invited the pastor—Bro. Burchett, late of Oregon, and who with wife will join lodge here—to take part in union night meeting; then gave a temperance talk to bright little infant class, who have a room and good teachers to themselves. At 2.30 went to large school at Presbyterian Church, taking part in Bible class, and subsequently giving a temperance talk to all. Took a vote and found nearly all the young folks belonged to Band of Hope, and a second vote showed that about all the rest intended to join. At night all churches adjourned for Union Gospel Temperance Meeting in Horton's Hall; crowded, many patiently standing thru the whole service. M. E. and Baptist ministers assisted; Rev. M. Cronyn, Unitarian, would have helped but, thru oversight, was not invited—he is staunch and true to temperance and all moral movements. His wife is an excellent reader, ever ready to assist. I judge 300 present. Lectured, same place, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. At first two, much smaller meetings, owing to Catholic Fair. It was unfortunate, for both lodges have long been looking forward with much interest to this visit of a Grand Lecturer, anticipating pleasure and profit. Had I been sent to National City during the excitement of the Fair and here afterwards, we could have reached many more people, and added considerably to the membership; but we had good attention and gained some. On Wednesday night had much larger audience, owing to fine entertainment—singing, readings, dialogues and original paper, by Band of Hope. Mr. Cronyn and I gave addresses. Obtained a dozen names for RESCUE; with any one going round and introducing me, could probably get 25 or 30. D. C. Cook sent me 100 of his 5c. B. of H. library books; drew attention to these after lectures, and readily sold all, here and at National City; one gentleman bot one dollar's worth and distributed them gratuitously on the spot; took dozens of subscriptions for Cook's 5 cents a year papers, and the 2 cent library. Alex. Johnston, formerly member of Valley Ford Lodge, and whose father used to lecture on temperance in Canada, subscribed for both RESCUE and 2 cent library, to be sent to his sister in Ontario. For RESCUE Bro. Sanford, of Monument Lodge, and Sister W. W. Stewart, who helped me greatly driving over to National City and setting agencies at work for successful meetings there, consent to act as agents; they will be efficient, and many names may soon be expected. The Sunday Law could be enforced if any citizens had the courage to make complaint of defiant and contemptuous violations. I was told there were about 50 saloons in full blast. Mr. M. S. Root, the watchmaker, on the main street, is President of the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, and a strong temperance man; has a water-cooler outside his store where the public can help themselves to as good as ice water, and dogs can quench their thirst from a vessel below. Hope Mr. Root will join one of the lodges. San Diego is a very healthy place.

TIPTON, Dec. 16, 1881.

I wrote last on Saturday 3d from Visalia and the same evening met a fine audience at Townsend schoolhouse twenty miles away in the foothills.

At first they did not enthuse in regard to a lodge, but at the close of my lecture on Monday eve the list was increased to 27 names and 25 persons remained to closed work. Bro. J. A. Woodard is W. C. T., and J. A Hicks L. D.

After a long day's ride I reached Farmersville at dusk and was disappointed in finding only half a dozen persons to greet me. I learned that the lodge had been long sleeping, and that Good Templar lecturers are not popular here. By dint of some work I had a fair hearing the second eve, and arranged for future plans.

Thursday eve found me with Plano Lodge, which has done much better since Bro. McMillan's advent among them. Friday eve I spent with Porterville Lodge and Saturday eve and Sabbath morning had a good hearing at Plano. At three o'clock I was privileged to meet the children, which is my favorite work, and at the close of the conversation with them organized a Band of Hope. The threatening weather kept many away in the eve, yet a large and attentive audience favored me. I was to have spent two evenings in Pleasant Valley; but on my way thither on Monday I met Mr. Shuey of Frazier Valley, and by request arranged to spend Tuesday evening with them.

Altho 16 names were signed to an application at the close of Monday evening's meeting yet my judgment counseled that it was not best to urge an organization, and I acted accordingly.

Arriving at Frazier in good season I found the appointment well circulated and at the close of public work organized a lodge with Bro. J. E Shuey as W. C. T. I anticipate much from this lodge.

Wednesday evening spent with Pride of Tulare and at close of public meeting assisted in initiating several candidates. This lodge fell into line nobly in the RESCUE work, and ordered several copies. Why do not more lodges do likewise? Early next morning Bro. Gilstrap took me to Rochford schoolhouse, and altho the appointment had been circulated but a few days, yet a house full of people gave me closest attention, and at the close I organized Rochford Lodge, which includes many fine young men among its membership.

The Executive Com. has kindly granted my request to be off duty during the holidays, and if I decide to take the field thereafter I shall cheerfully return to finish the vast amount of undone work here. I can without reserve say that Tulare county has as intelligent, appreciative and hospitable people as it was ever my privilege to work among. Should I not return, I bespeak for my successor as kind a reception as has been mine, provided of course he come in the right spirit.

MRS. STEVENS.

THE STOCKTON BOOM.—As reported last week Mrs. Stevens and Mrs. Richardson laid siege to the city of Stockton. After getting fairly under way they sent to San Francisco for an ironclad to assist them. Col. Babcock of this city (40 Merchants Exchange) responded and on two evenings did some very heavy and effective bombarding service which with the local talent of Stockton greatly reinforced the efforts of the two gifted ladies.

The Colonel threw in some steel-pointed statistics, which seem to have taken his hearers by surprise. Altho St Louis has 100,000 more inhabitants than San Francisco, the latter has many more arrests every year. In 1878 in St Louis there were 18,000 arrests 12,482 of which were drunkards. Of these there were tramps 393; bricklayers 118; carpenters 230; clerks 348; saloon keepers 110; merchants 143; loafers 743; laborers 3,307; Doctors 27; lawyers 39; preachers 9; a state of things which shows that the licenced grogshop gathers its fruit impartially from all sources, learned and unlearned, the just and the unjust; but it derives its main sustenance from the slim wages of the working men which should purchase bread for their children.

The series of meetings resulted in a general awakening of the city to the question of temperance and the enforcement of the Sunday law. The collection for the Home for Orphans amounted to $118.50 in all, and the ladies made up their minds to get 100 subscribers for the Rescue which they accomplished and distributed other temperance literture as well, which it is hoped will have altogether a wholesome effect in making the interest created much more permanent and effective. Everything passed off pleasantly and the following card of thanks was published in the Stockton papers:

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institu ion. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

Trustees of Orphans' Home.—Wm. H. Mills, Sacramento; H. S. Graves, Yuba City; Hon. Niles Seails, Nevada City; A. G. Clark, Napa City; Dr. R. H. McDonald, San Francisco; Dr. I. S. Halsey and Samuel Kitto, Vallejo; Robert Thompson, G. W. C. T., San Francisco; Geo. B. Katzenstein, G. W. S., Sacramento, ex-officio.

Lady Managers of Orphans' Home,—President, Mrs. C. B. Thompson. No. 1531; Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Secretary, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th St., San Francisco, Financial Secretary, Mrs. M. E. Partridge, West Oakland; Mrs. M. A. Alsip, Sacramento; Mrs. M. A. Mayhew, Red Bluff; Mrs. V. A. Rix, Washington Corners; Mrs. S. L. Robbins, Vallejo; Mrs. E. P. Stephens, San Francisco, G. W. V. T., ex-officio.

When you call on any of these places please say you saw their Ad or card in the Rescue.

Bro. J. T. Brown sending 3 subscribers from Capay Valley reports seven initiations and six propositions on hand: Sunday law generally observed there and more readers of the Rescue to be sent along soon.

Seventy-four papers in Nebraska favor the woman suffrage amendment and eleven oppose it. The world moves all the time. Light increases.

The conquering Sword, before the Pen o'erborne,
Was from its ancient hard won kingdom hurled:
In turn the Pen laments its laurels shorn,
Henceforth the Scissors keen shall rule the world.

The Rescue remarked a few weeks ago upon the remarkably slovenly appearance of the Orillia Packet. The copy seen may have been an exceptional one; for two numbers have come this week of more than ordinary neatness of appearance.

Five boy-traps, sometimes called saloons to every church thruout this country. Church doors open one day in seven. Saloon doors open seven days in each week, but swinging the widest at night. No need of temperance education!—S. S. Supt.

Edward Ellington and L. R. Featherstun of Yuba City advertise in the Farmer for assistance in getting up a box of clothing for the orphans of the Good Templar's Home, as a New Year gift.

The little story on page 130 "How a busines man was converted," should have been credited to some other paper, but the latter part of the copy was lost by the compositor and the credit omitted.

Taxation without representation was a hundred years ago an intolerable tyranny, which justified the terrible sacrifices of a seven years bitter and cruel war to remove it. Its injustice has been more universally assented to every year since; but as there is not a particle of danger that women will take up the musket and engage in a seven years armed rebellion, it is quite safe and righteous to practice this manifest injustice upon them. So say the politicians.

Subscribers this week. Philomath, Oregon, 1; W. C. King, Tipton, 6; Los Angeles 1; J. W. Webb (Orange &c.) 6; Capay; 2; Iowa 1; Stoney Point 2; Folsom 1; Woodland 2; San Francisco 2.

A Happy New Year is earnestly wished to all the readers of the Rescue; may their fields and gardens and stores and goods and their virtues and good influences multiply—and withal may their numbers increase ten fold during 1882.

New South Wales (of which Sydney is the capital), has passed the second reading of the Local Option Bill by a vote of 54 to 7. The debate occupied four nights and 47 members spoke on the question. Four-fifths of the speakers favored Sunday closing, and a simple majority of votes to decide the no license question.

Mr. Herndon of Springfield, Illinois, formerly the law partner of Abraham Lincoln and in many things the leading partner, used to have a little spree occasionally; he is now a common drunkard and a pauper, like Governor Yates was and some other governors have been and will be.

The Tidal Wave very truly remarks: "The President's message is before us. It is a lengthy document and treats of many things, but is as silent as death on the great questions of reform, temperance or prohibition, and equal suffrage, which just now is agitating the minds of the people of this country, from center to circumference. A third party—A Home Protection Party—is an urgent necessity."

Lemonade.—Bro. Reiger's Lemon Sugar advertized on the last page of this paper is a grand thing for the holiday lemonade; it is no product of the simmering still; no Claus Speckels monopoly; nothing in the bitters line. It is something sweet and natural and wholesome.

Dont take temperance into politics; dont take it into the pulpit; keep it out of the Sunday school; it is too secular a subject for the week of prayer; dont be always talking about it; let every one enjoy his own opinion; religion has nothing to do with it; all these are extracts from the devil's book of proverbs.

At a prohibition meeting lately held in Auburn, Me., all the speakers but one favored separate party action. Several speakers ascribed their conversion to this opinion to having been readers of the Prohibitionist and the general sentiment was that all who talk prohibition ought to vote it.

Beware of the kind of temperance man who says, "I am as good a temperance man as there is in this lodge or this Grand Lodge, or in this town or in this state." A man who believes that thing himself, will never suspect other people of doubting it. He only says it because he is cornered and his only defense is a lie.

Is it not time that all Christian voters and people everywhere should waken up to the fact that the introduction of Christianity, with the invariable bottle and barrel which accompany it, is the direst curse and plague, the most deadly pestilence that has ever visited a heathen country. If they will not consent to vote a divorce of the rum curse from Christain civilization, we had a thousand times better abolish the two, than let the devil handle both to his own entire advantage.

The Delaware Signal (Ohio) a very live advocate of prohibition and common sense has a department of liquorgrams, reports of the awful crimes, murders, suicides etc., perpetrated in and by the grog-shop during the week. It is an apalling list of horrors but probably not more than a fourth of these occurrences can be collected by any one paper. It has 24 of these grog-shop crimes last week.

The N. Y. Tribune says "there may not be a pig and puppy Democrat ticket in 1884, but the prospect is good for that kind of a preliminary shindy." That kind of language applied to the beerdive and beergarden gang of scoundrelism and ruffianism would be altogether fanatical and abusive, but the gentlemanly? Tribune thinks it is quite good enough for Democrats.

It has been stated that Doctor Koumiss Bliss expects a large reward for completing by his ignorant fossilism, the work left only half done by Guiteau. But if Guiteau's bullets had both failed to penetrate the skin by some accident, it would have been the most eminent justice to Guiteau and the kindest mercy to innocent people had a justice of the peace at once satisfied himself of Guiteaus intention to kill, and had him hung or roasted in half an hour after the atrocious crime was attempted. That the President might have recovered does not in the least diminish the guilt of the miscreant.

The Home Protection meeting on last Saturday evening was well entertained with a very able and interesting address by Rev. E. R. Dille on the necessity of a Sabbathrest for man and beast and of using vigorous and united effort for the suppression of the villainous banditi who propose rebellion against the enforcement of the Sunday law. A good program is promised for this weeks meeting and it is determined that the organization shall have branches all over the state to become what its name indicates—a protection of the homes of the people from the wolf pack of the league of outlaws engaged in human-slaughter.

Quick Trips.—The horse cars that run on Montgomery St. on one fine day last week made three successive very quick trips from Washington to Market St., 7 blocks in 73, 74 and 72 minutes. The head engineer of one of them declares he will make it inside of 70 minutes before spring, or kill all his horses in the attempt; says he could do it easily now only he has to stop the car so often for old people and women to get out and walk, because they are in a hurry and cant wait for the car. He thinks it is a foolish idea of the company that more people ride because they are always overtaking the cars on foot, and it is so easy to catch the car always; says he dont believe it is the best policy.

Slain by Brandy.—There is hardly a single abstemious native (says the Middleburg Gazette) to be met with now. The taste for brandy a few years ago was confined principally to the Hottentots, Now it has extended to the Kaffrs, Fingoes and Basutos. The sentence of extermination which is being carried out against the Indians of North America is being extended to South Africa. The "fire-water" of the whites will accomplish what "plague, pestilence and famine" failed to do, viz. the final extinction of the black man. The progress may be slow as far as the negro races are concerned, but it is nevertheless sure.—Temperaace Standard South Africa.

People that are not a bit crazy do strange things sometimes. They see the address of the G. W. C. T. in the Rescue, and then send constitutional questions to the editor of the Rescue and to the G. W. S., to be answered. Perhaps they apply to some other quarters too. Then they see books advertised for sale in the Rescue office San Francisco and write to the G. W. S. at Sacramento to send them those books. A little while ago notice came from a Postmaster that a lodge paper was not taken out, and it was stopped. Later the L. D, of the lodge told the G. W. C. T. that he could get no Rescue and he had written to the G. W. S. about it. Now the first place to look for the Rescue when due is the P. O. If it dont come there, it would seem natural to inquire at the Rescue office, not at Salt Lake city, not at Plymouth church, Brooklyn, not at the internal revenue office, nor Fort Alcatraz, but right direct at the Rescue office, Box 1721 San Francisco.

CHARITY.

("And though I give all my goods to the poor and have not Charity, it profiteth me nothing.")

Seeking not her own, she giveth more
Than all that gentle faith may see,
Or value, or embrace;
For higher far than hope of rich or poor
That would reform the earth with beggar plea,
Her given sphere of grace.

'Tis said "Behold not greater God
The gentile may adore, nor yet conceive
Than Deity of purse;
Shut it, and vanish unto naught
Shall all he hopeth for, or doth believe
Redemption his to nurse.

Not thus. Give alms of such ye have,
And purity ye find, said truth divine.
Can more the gentile give?
Not mortal may, from cradle unto grave,
Give other than he had. The golden kine
His all, and he may live.

Yet blessed he the more, if in his day
He honoreth God, and glorified all truth
And honesty in this:
In preaching charity, t'is well to say,
For him, he meant not greater good
Than Charity of his.

J. C. K.

HOW A BUSINESS MAN WAS CONVERTED TO TEMPERANCE.

In the southern part of Jeferson county, N. Y., is the village of M——. Among the business men is a hardware merchant, a cool level-headed man. He like many other business men thot one or two licensed hotels were necessary for the good of the village. He had voted for license for years, was honest in his belief.

About three years ago an incident occurred that opened his eyes.

One year before this revelation came he had sold a stove for $18 to a drinking man; the drinker was not worth a thing, but agreed to pay for the stove in installments $1 per month. At the end of the year the merchant had not received even one payment.

He knew his debtor had been earning good wages the whole year. He had noticed the money had not been expended for clothes, for the family of his drinking customer was poorly clad, and the man himself had only one suit, and that almost in rags.

Two weeks before the time in question, the drinking man had gone five miles out of town to do a job of work at $3 per day.

The merchant knew this, and was waiting for his return, thinking he might get a part payment on the stove sold a year before, if not the whole amount.

Just before dark he made his appearance. The merchant knew the man who had employed his debtor; knew he was a man of means, and it was his custom to pay down for all work done for him.

The merchant said:

"Hold on, J——, I want to speak to you. You remember the stove? You were to pay $1 each month; over a year has gone by and you have not made the first payment yet; you have been at work for W——; cant you pay me half? $5 anyway."

"I am sorry I cant, but I have not got any pay yet out of W——; when I get it I will call and pay all."

(Remember this—men when they are drinking always (?) tell the truth)

The merchant was not satisfied. He looked up from his meditation just in time to see his customer go into the hotel (one of the necessary (?) places for the prosperity of the village).

His going into the hotel aroused the curiosity of the merchant.

He thot:

"I will just walk over to the hotel and see what is going on."

He entered the hall where he could get a good view of the bar, and was a witness to the following:

The drinker said:

"Well, landlord, what is my bill? I can pay you up now."

"Your bill may be larger than you think; you have not paid up for some time. Ah! it is more than I thought—$21 50."

"As much as that. It can't be? I do not know what my wife will say. I had promised to buy a new bonnet for her and the girl. Twenty-one-fifty!

Well, well I suppose you have kept it right. You wouldn't wrong a poor man who works hard for his money."

It is correct. Your wife and daughter must not expect to dress as well as those who have a larger income. I think your wife is most too dressy, anyway. Have a drink, J——?"

The merchant saw "the man who had not got his pay" take out of his pocket the money he had earned, count out $21.50 and hand it to the landlord.

He went out of the hotel a wiser and a better man.

The merchant went to his desk, took down a bundle of unpaid accounts, and commenced to figure up the worthless accounts that had accumulated in the ten years of his business life.

He found the sum total to be $1.324 78. Of this sum he found that all but $114 19 was against men who had been ruined by drink.

His eyes had been opened.

Three months after this came town meeting.

The hotel-keeper was busy at the polls working for the election of an excise commissioner who would continue his legal right to sell.

He approached the hardware merchant and offered him a ticket.

"Can't vote that ticket," said the merchant.

"Why? I supposed you were one of my strong supporters."

So I was until three months ago, when I was shown very plainly what you are doing. You are no better than a thief."

What do you mean."

Do you remember the night J—paid you $21 50 for whisky he had drank at your bar?"

Yes; I remember it. What of it?"

I will tell you. Nearly two years ago I trusted him for a stove worth $18. He agreed to pay $1.50 per month. I have not received a cent. The night he paid you $21 50 I asked him for a part payment on the stove. He said he had no money. I saw him go into your hotel, so I followed him. I saw him pay you that amount. It was my money. I sold him that stove for the use of his family; and he has been tempted by your iniquitous groggery to pay you the money he owed me many times over. It was my money he has been paying you these two years, and money he owed to other people in this village; thru your bar you have been a daily robber of the money which belonged to that man—of the money and clothes and food of his wife and children—of the money which belonged to me and to every other citizen and trader here, that this man has persuaded to trust him. Your business in this town is and has been to turn honest men, as he was once, and many others into thieves, and to rob, not only them and their helpless families, but to rob the whole community. Your business is that of a public robber, a public enemy, a public nuisance, and I dont vote any more for any one, to enable him to pauperize my customers and kill my trade.

SHALL OUR SUNDAY SCHOLARS PERISH?

The Sunday-School Times and the International S. S. Lesson Committee have practically answered this question, Yes! Let them perish rather than warn them against the snares of strong drink which have slain them by the million, and are doing so to-day. Rather than hurt the feelings of the finely dressed and bejeweled liquor dealers, and the rich property holders who rent their buildings to Satan—rather let nine-tenths of the dear, innocent children of the nation's Sabbath-schools go over Niagara Falls to perdition.

From "An Appeal to Sunday-school Teachers," by George Thomas Coster, in the S. S. Worker, the following selections are made:

"Many a youth, by the lessons of the Sabbath class, has been guided into an industrious, respected manhood. But is it so with all our scholars? From our prisons come sad, contradictory revelations. By the chaplains of the chief county and borough jails of the country, I have been favored with painful facts, of which take the following:

The Rev. J. Burleigh Colville, Chaplain of Reading Jail, reports: 'Number of prisoners, 88, of whom 66 had been Sunday scholars for an average length of time of nearly four years'. The Rev. John Dreaper, Chaplain of Northampton Jail, reports for the year 1867: 'Number of prisoners 505, of whom 364 had been Sunday scholars for an average of five years. As the result of my appeal, I learn that 64 per cent of the prisoners in the country have been Sunday scholars in their youth, and for upward of two years. And what has brought our Sunday scholars to the cell of the prisoner? I need not tell you—it is the testimony of the Bench, year after year—that drink, directly, or indirectly brings the vast majority of criminals into the calendars of crime.' Mr. Edward Simmons, Governor of Canterbury Jail, in a recent letter to me says—and he speaks from an experience of many years: '92 per cent may attribute their downfall to intoxicating drinks and their attendant vices—bad company and the profanation of the Sabbath day.'

And he quotes from the report of a female missionary among lost women:

"Out of the poor fallen girls conversed with, three had been Sunday-school teachers. 'They came under the power of wicked women, and drink was the bait which drew them to ruin. Fifty-six conversed with had been Sunday scholars. Some of these traced their fall to being sent to the public-house for drink; others to dancing-saloons; others to love of finery. But "their evidence was the same as the others, that they could not have lost their virtue but through drink." Twelve were Sunday scholars from other towns; some of these had been lured hither by women—monsters, rather—who represented themselves as seeking servants, gave their unsuspecting victims strong drink drugged, and, alas! they were lost. Sunday scholars these, but not abstainers. Sunday scholars, but among the other lessons taught them, their teacher had not taught them abstinence. Alas! for the slain of the daughters of my people.

The ruling aim of Sunday-school instruction should be, its crowning glory is, to bring the scholar to Jesus. The constant aim should be nothing short of this—the conversion of scholars while scholars in the school. Without doubt many in our schools are lambs in the arms of the Great Shepherd, tho not in the fold of the visible church. Mr. Fountain Hartley, Statistical Secretary of the Sunday-school Union, writes me that it is believed from the returns, that at least one in ten scholars, while scholars, join the fellowship of Christian Churches. But why not more than this? How is it that so many are lost to the school at life's most critical period? Who are these? Are they the members of our Bands of Hope? Are they our total abstinence youth? I appeal to your memories. Are such our school deserters?

Teacher! what is to be the future of your children? Are any o them to drift by drink indulgence into ruin? Is one of them? Oh, what is it to be? Do you reply, that though abstainers, yet still they might indeed; but the greatest help to criminality would be shunned. At a meeting of the Manchestey and Chester Diocesan Church of England Temperance Society, held January 4th last, the Rev. T. Hutton stated "that during the ten years he was chaplain in the Northampton jail, he never saw a teetotal prisoner there." Mr. Simmons, Governor of Canterbury jail, in a letter dated September 27th, 1867, says: "I beg to say that the number of prisoners who have been committed to prisons with which I have been connected during the last fifteen years, amounts to 22,000; and that among them I have come in contact with ministers of the Gospel, numbers of persons who were once members of churches, as also children of pious parents; but I never met with a prisoner being a teetotaler,"

Teacher! is one of the girls of your class to be found among fallen women a few years hence—ruined, ruining others? Do you reply that, perhaps even with abstinence she might fall? Yes, indeed; but drink in most cases aids to drag down the virtuous, and when down, keeps them down.

Let each teacher be an abstainer; let each class constitute itself into a teetotal society, meeting on a week night at the teacher's house or otherwhere for that especial object, and soon drunkenness—foul blot on our fame—will cease to be our national vice.

Fellow laborers! will you aid to this! Oh, seek to be like the Great Teacher, who "went about doing good," and for our sakes "pleased not himself." Let your scholars think of you in coming years to thank God for you. When in city crowds—when out upon the sea—when on alien shores—when strong temptations storm them—be your memory like an angel from God to strengthen them. And when you die, may you not die to them, but live in their lives until, the last of them gathered to your side in the heavenly home, you shall say. "Savior, here am I, and the children whom Thou didst give me!"

DRINKERS.—Under the significant heading "Half a million drinkers," the Brewers Gazette mentions the total number of emigrants arriving here during the eleven months ending May 31 last as 564,294. Nearly, if not quite as many more have arrived since that date. The brewers are undoubtedly right in assuming that at least a very large proportion of these emigrants are so many additional customers for liquor-sellers, at least till they can be reached and educated anew by the temperance movement of this country. And still the flood tide of emigration continues. It imposes a large additional responsibility each year upon the friends of temperance in America. This responsibility must be fully met, if this country be not by and by still more Europeanized with respect to beer and social drinking usages. —N. T. Advocate.

CHAUTAUQUA.

If there is any thing on which one may be absolutely certain of offering a correct opinion or suggesting a judicious and thoroly wholesome counsel, it seems safe to recommend to any and everybody, who has an ambition to cultivate and improve and adorn the talents and intellect with which God has endowed them—to avail themselves of the privileges and advantages offered in a membership of the Chautauqua Circle. The names and characters of the parties who have set this society in motion are a guarantee of the excellence and usefulness of its tendencies. To be admitted to fellowship with the men and women of character and culture and scholarship and scientific attainment and philanthropy and benevolence, who are its leaders in this and other states, is a privilege which cannot but confer an honor on any member of any class of society.

If a membership in this society was going to divert one's energies from other pursuits, and interfere with household or business duties, or shut off some other field of useful work or study, one might hesitate to venture into it; but Miss Severance told us last week of a lady who managed a busy ranch last year, and was a successful Chautauqua literary society of herself. And so it will be always and everywhere, very industrious and busy people will find just enough time to compass the studies and duties of this thing without shutting off any useful item of their daily employments. None but the idle and listless and empty will be able to plead truthfully that they "really have no time."

There are dozens, nay hundreds of young girls and boys who have just left school, and have a good deal of blank, idle, unused time on their hands, to whom an active membership in this society would most grandly and opportunely fill a daily empty hour of that time, and lay the foundation and give the direction of a vast amount of comfort and pleasure and usefulness in their whole future life. Lots of young folks in Vallejo, Napa, Petaluma, Stockton Marysville, Nevada and no end of other places who could form circles, and make them an immense benefit and advantage to themselves and each other, and at the same time secure a fund of the purest and most pleasurable and lasting enjoyment.

There are some of the graduates of our Juvenile Temples and Bands of Hope and Good Templar Lodges, who ought by all means to be Chautauquans; here are some of them in Guerneville and Placerville and Plymouth and Cottonwood and Woodland, who read the RESCUE and will know that they are here alluded to, who would become ornaments to that society and who will derive an immense benefit themselves from an immediate membership in it. This is an interest which can be embarked in with the most perfect safety; it is all prize and no blank; all pure gold and no dross; all blessing and no pullback; all upward, and nothing that can possibly deteriorate, impoverish or distress. Friends, let us do something in this matter. Read Miss Severance's letter again in last number Dec. 22; see the Chautauqua outfit and requisites and come into it at once.

We trust woman's capacity on very intricate matters, and we cannot trust her feeble cranium to decide, when she has temptable children under her wings, whether she would or would not like to have a whisky shop opened on the opposite side of the street? It is a very complicated question. Must we wait until the ladies seminaries have done tneir work for twenty or fifty years more? Must we adhere to the wisdom of making haste slowly? How long will it be before women will be involved far enough to know whether she wants drunken sons or not?—Joseph Cook.

THE GERMAN IMMIGRANT.

In the discussion of the maintenance of a day of rest and the prohibition of the drunkery and thief factory in this country, the question of nationality is frequently raised by both parties. It is a fact that the most active and impudent enemies of law and order and decency are foreigners, and most of them Germans. It rests with the honest, sober, respectable, worthy Germans in this country to say whether the rowdy element of the brewery and beer-dive and ratpit fairly represent and speak for the German people of this country.

And to this respectable German element, which every one who is not a fool or a bigot knows is equal in good citizenship and good morals to any other class of people, it is desired to point out one or two circumstances which more particularly interest them than any other people in the land.

It is shown that in a number of months 530.000 have recently landed in this country from Europe and as many more are expected in the near future. The brewers and beer sellers, who claim to represent the Germans of this country, are publicly rejoicing that the great majority of these new comers will be, what? good thrifty citizens? good settlers? good farmers? good mechanics? good laborers? a help to build up this country with happy homes? to improve the land and make us a better people? No, not one of these things; no, they would not want one of them to come for any of those purposes; but they are boasting that they will be liberal drinkers of their beer and their whisky!

Think of that, German citizens and German voters: Your countrymen are welcomed by a portion of their own countrymen and brethren, with the hope that they will be drunkards on the poison with which they intend to besot and bedevil and debauch them: Welcome, they say to the sons of their fatherland, welcome to our poison traps, to our police courts, to our jails, to our brothels, to our gaming dens, to our penitentiaries and our lunatic asylums and our poor houses, which the American tax-payers so liberally and kindly provide for our beer and whisky customers: Welcome! countrymen ours!! Welcome to the pistol bullet and the razor and the rope and the strychnine, to the morgue and the paupers grave to which we annually consign so many thousands of the best and most generous of our compatriot beer customers.

Are these men, this ring of the enemies of sobriety and decency, your friends or shall they be your mouthpiece? There is another class of people here who love this country as dearly as ever men loved the land of their birth or residence. They are the American people of New England, and Puritan and Christian ancestry and education. They say welcome too to your immigrant company of 500,000 people. They dont meet them with a beer cup extended in front, and a halter and handcuffs concealed behind. They say welcome to a home with us, welcome to a choice among our homesteads: send your children to our free public schools; come to our churches and lecture halls and libraries; join our fraternal and benevolent and our temperance societies, let your children come with ours to the Sunday-school and the Band of Hope, and learn to prepare themselves for a useful and happy life. Welcome to this grand, free, fertile, broad country, which has arrived at its present prosperity thru the SOBER industry of its citizens. Be with us and of us, bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh, and let us be Americans together, and unite in making this country great and just and rich and happy, and help us to keep out and down all the vices and debaucheries which have rotted and pauperized and destroyed all the vicious nations of history down to our own day.

In the crowd that clamor for freedom and liberty, and who call themselves German Americans, we find prominently men whose whole business is to keep dens for the entrapping and ruin and damnation of innocent girls, of whom a fair sample was the infernal gallows bird on Sacramento street who was lately decoying American girls to their death under an advertisement of Help wanted in a restaurant. Such men are the natural and inevitable product of the brewery and the beershop as the branch is of any tree. Such men are found, and all and every other kind of human monster and beast and ravenous murderer of soul and body, wherever the brewery and beer garden and beershop exist; just the same in Germany and England and Ireland and Scotland and France and America—and nowhere in the civilized world where there is no brewery and beershop. The brewery and the beer keg, the same as the wine vat and the whisky mill—all alike, or any of them mean vice, nastiness, debauchery, ruined homes, crime, barbarism, pauperism, harlotry, suicide, death—and they all degrade any and every class and kind of people who use them, to the same level of vice and misery.

It is the duty of all honest Germans to disown the destroyers of their race, the poisoners of their own brethren, and to help us to make and keep this country a free and happy home for the stranger as well as for their own children.

THE FATE OF POLITICAL PARTIES.

We behold a few men martyrize themselves for a moral principle or a political theory. Inspired by an impulse none can trace but to pure, if not holy motive, these battle against the combined forces of prejudice, ignorance and customs of the past; trust to naught than the justice or righteousness of their cause, are mocked, slandered, anathematized and hated by the large, large majority. They persevere, and the normal result is a party.

It is one of the immutable statutes of existence that while a party or church is nailed to the stake, cross or pillory of public contempt and persecution; while no prospect of spoils, power or other earthly consideration actuates its hope; while it suffers for righteousness, it will gather strength, power, purity, dominion, glory—and what not in the list of truly divine blessings.

Once enthroned however, its founders recede from our sight, take a back seat and die off. The spirit vanishes; the skeleton remains. It offers for vitality whatsoever is food for our political or ecclesiastical rat.

Like a certain caterpillar which is subject to a disease filling its frame with maggots it creeps along, seeking deliverance from its parasites, and finding none. It has long ago sacrificed all principle, honor and prestige for policy—policy to prolong its miserable existence. The rats, mice, or maggots which enliven its fast decaying corpse, point for identity of body and soul to the fact of their being in the party and the party in them.

"I am part and body of His church," quoth the sectarian rat. And from a materialistic standpoint, proves this, like his political brother.

As a rule, every one of these professional feeders would be (or has already been) one of the bitterest foes of that identical body, had it life—life of truth and principle. Being dead, it offer them meat.

None may bottle up sunshine in a dark cellar. Nor the spirit of just or holy cause in a political party or ecclesiastical combination. Where the carcase is, the vultures are gathered together.

Vote for principle, not men. Battle for righteousness, justice, holiness, against evil in every form and under any cover. Heaven will sustain you and lead you higher.

JOHN C. KASTNER.

The Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the State of West Virginia, Dr. T. H. Buck, the gifted author of "John Rodman's Pledge," and other popular writings, has just completed a new temperance and Good Templar story. Its publication will begin in the West Virginia Good Templar—official organ for the state—at an early day, and every Good Templar in the country should read it. The paper containing the story and much other valuable matter will be sent on trial three months for 20 cents, or six copies for $1. Send for it. Address,

DEGREE TEMPLARS

Rev. W H Cross for No. 284, Riverside.

The appointments of Prof. Wm. Crowhurst for Amador and the north part of Calaveras counties, are all canceled.

The reason for so canceling these appointments is that the District Lodge of Amador has had the Rev. Mr. Haskell lecture through that county recently on the Sunday law and it was thought best to wait for a while before further lecturing there.

One hundred and sixty eight honorary members of the League of Freedom were being entertained by the police of San Francisco on Monday morning last. They had the head ache.

A TWO EDGED SWORD.—From several localities in the state come accounts of the work of the League of —— Freedom (?), Licensed Dealers protective (?) Associations etc. all of which are names only to cover a nasty and outrageous traffic, which, to the discredit of the Nation be it said is licensed and fostered by the government. The enforcement, or rather the desire for the enforcement of the Sunday law—so called—in this state is made the pretext for a species of contemptible persecution and personal abuse of temperance men. Such are to be "spotted." If a temperance man shall become the nominee of a political party, these leagues with one accord will unite in procuring, if possible his defeat. If he be engaged in business an endeavor is made to break him down. If he be a member of some fraternity he is to be combined against and persecuted there. If he is none of these and simply an inoffensive citizen, he is to be pounced upon and pummelled. And temperance men, church men and moral men generally stand quietly by, see these things done, offer no resistance nor rebuke: and by their passive policy become silent partners in the business of degrading their own sons and daughters. How long before the better class of people, who certainly comprise the majority, will arise and assert their rights? How long before they will commence the work of retaliation which must be resorted to?

EL DORADO.—Bro. Hughes, Grand Lecturer, has been awakening the echoes in El Dorado county by his sturdy blows at the opposition to morality, temperance and social order. Five months ago, there was not a lodge of Good Templars in the county. Since then, Brother Hughes has made two visits thereto, and to day a record of nine good lodges is made for that county. If it be true that whoever makes two ears of corn or two blades of grass to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, deserves better of mankind, and does more essential service to his country than the whole race of politicians put together, then what shall be said of the righteous seed sown and the human sheaves to be garnered as the result of Brother Hughes' labors. Certainly the people of such wine cursed localities as Coloma should rise and call him blessed.

"HE POLISHED HIM OFF."—It is the custom of some persons to shield themselves behind an editorial tripod and through the "impersonality of journalism" single out persons for abuse and vilifacation. A temperance worker, of either sex is usually the legitimate prey of certain branches of the press who do the dirty work of the whisky ring. It seems, however, that in Nebraska a mistake was made by this gentry, as will appear from the following extract taken from the local news column of the Daily Nebraska State Journal, published at Lincoln, the capital of the state and the home of Bro. John B. Finch universally known as one of the ablest advocates of the temperance cause. Says the paper quoted, in its issue of Dec. 17th, "John B. Finch accompanied Gov. John P. St. John to Plattsmouth on Thursday. That evening a paper lately started in that city by Mr. Sherman, called the Plattsmouth Daily Journal, doubtless encouraged by the attacks of other irresponsible papers made a dirty attack on him. Yesterday morning Finch called at the office of the paper and coolly thrashed both the editor and local editor. Our informant says Finch was arrested on complaint of the editor and pleaded guilty to the assault, saying he committed the assault and would do it again if necessary. Leading citizens like Hon. Sam Chapman, James E. Morrison, Joseph Connor, Pat Murphy, paid Mr. Finch's fine, saying he had done a good job."

The same paper remarking upon the occurrence, editorially says: "It is currently reported that John B. Finch thrashed the city editor of the Plattsmouth Journal on the streets yesterday, and then, his appetite for walloping being unsated, he marched into the sanctum and polished off the editor-in-chief in a style that did honor to the muscular nature of his christianity. We are pleased to note this variation from the usual meek submission of the victims of newspaper calumny and slander. These Topics are not an admirer of Mr. Finch, but he has supplied a long-felt want so fully, that he must be accorded a due meed of praise. The editor who abuses a man personally in his paper, deserves to be kicked, and it is to be hoped the example will spread until a certain class of press-liars are pounded into a decent regard for their personal comfort, if not a comfortable regard for personal decency."

GLEANINGS.—Columbia Lodge No. 128 of Gilroy, Santa Clara County, is doing well and has thus far, this quarter added eleven new members to its roll, according to Bro. C. W. Pedlar.....Chrysopolis Lodge No. 210 of Woodland is still increasing in numbers, with a prospect of a still greater increase for the remainder of the term. Twenty additions are so far noted this quarter. So writes the W. C. T., Bro, B. F. Loomis.....Rev. F. H. Wales of Tulare sends $7,50 for a seat for White Lily Band of Hope in the Home for Orphans new school room, and adds, "both Lodge and Band of Hope doing finely, Five initiations in Lodge at last meeting, two more for next. Have good news from Bro. King also had a fine time at District Lodge ..... From Pheonix A, T. and concerning aGrden Valley Lodge No. 1, Bro. G. H. Rothrock the L. D. writes under date of Dec. 20 "We had four initiates last evening and are nearing a hundred members in number".....

"THE CHINESE MUST GO."—Stamped on a box of cigars means that the Chinese must go to work to make more cigars for the white labor to smoke. "Only white labor employed" on the label of a box of cigars, means that only white labor is required to smoke them; the labor of making them is performed by the Chinamen. On a sign in front of a door that motto means "that only white labor is employed" to superintend the Chinamen who do the work.

A CONFESSION.

"There are at present ever 3,500 saloons in the city, each of which pays the ridiculously small license-fee of only $52. But it is to those same saloons, which collect from the people nearly $12,000,000 a year, that the necessity for the maintenance of a police force arises in great part. An overwhelmingly large proportion of the crimes against the person and property are due to the saloons. There it is that the bummers and vagrants, the thieves and the murderers are made. Men who would otherwise be decent, respectable, orderly members of society, earning their living with the sweat of their brow, get into the habit of going to these places, abandon labor, and, unable to pick up a living in any other way, resort to crime for it. Yet notwithstanding this enormous burden, which is thrown upon the city yearly by the existence of these saloons as they are at present managed, they are called on to contribute only $175,000 to the city treasury." * *

"Since the liquor shops originate or foster most of the vice and crime of every city, the license fees on these establishments ought to be raised to a price which will yield revenue enough to support a police force of sufficient strength to preserve order, arrest criminals, repress crime and protect the lives and property of law-abiding people."

"High licences are good in their way, because that way leads to prohibition; but was there ever a greater farce enacted in government than loosing an evil in our community which must needs pay over $500,000 a year, or more than one dollar per capita annually, to protect people from its ravages? And were ever good and honest citizens in any community, before the days of the dominant liquor traffic willing to pay heavy taxes in order that vice might be licensed to do its deadly work?

"My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge," mourned the Hebrew prophet. It is not that lack that destroys us, but lack of comprehension, lack of heart, lack of honest brains."

When the paid advocates of the drunkard makers in Chicago, confess that the liquor shops originate or foster most of the vice and crime of every city, and when everybody who has any brains at all knows it is strictly true, it is a very idle and contemptible farce for the Chronicle or any other paper, to send round reporters to interwiew ministers, lawyers, editors, doctors, writers &c., enquiring for the source and growth of hoodlumism and crime in the cities of this state; it is especially asinine or satanical for teachers of the people of any class or grade, to attempt to give such reasons as lack of parental discipline, careless mothers, Sabbath breaking, rail-road excursions, Chinese, a spirit of independence in the forty-niners or the climate; all of which have been offered by cowards who feared to tell the honest truth, which they knew quite well. The false prophet and the lying seer is what we have too much of in California.

VENTURA.—The members and friends of Constancy Lodge, No. 209, enjoyed a rare treat recently, the occasion being open lodge and lecture by Sr. Mary Guthrie of Springville Lodge in this county.

The music, reading and recitations were excellent but the lecture was the main feature of the evening. Quite a number declared it was the best they had heard in the place, and judging by the close attention of the large audience it was a success. It was very interesting thruout.

The hall was full and jammed, and some had to leave.

We hope for many similar occasions and recommend other lodges to do likewise, use all the home talent possible and not depend entirely on the Grand Lodge to send a lecturer to have a public meeting.

MYRA WALLBRIDGE.

CHICAGO Dec. 1881.

DEAR SIR:—Enclosed you will find copy of a book written by Eli Johnson Esq., Corresponding Secretary of the New York State Temperance Society, entitled "Drinks from Drugs; or The Magic Box."

This book is a complete and thoro expose of the reprehensible practices of the liquor dealing fraternity in adulterating their liquors.

Mr. Johnson has an almost world wide reputation as a successful temperance lecturer, and is known in almost every state in the Union, in England, Scotland and Ireland and in Sweden. He has devoted years of careful and conscientious study to this subject, and has gathered his facts from all reliable sources, having obtained access to the most carefully guarded secrets, private books and pamphlets of the nefarious traffickers in drug manufactured liquors, thus enabling him to state with certainty (the facts being taken from the identical recipes and directions which are in circulation among the liquor-dealers), how the public are being imposed upon. The result of his investigations and researches he has embodied in this volume. The work is a most exhaustive one, and treats the subject in a vigorous and incisive manner; discovering and denouncing the iniquities and frauds now being perpetrated by liquor dealers, and giving a host of extracts from secret books supposed to be only known to the trade in which recipes for concocting and doctoring drinks from drugs are given in minutest detail.

Perhaps the most conclusive argument in favor of the book lies in the fact that the writer was offered $10,000 by a leading brewer if he would keep still and not expose these practices. It has long been known that liquor dealers have been in the habit of adulterating their goods, and the practice has been pretty generally hinted at and condemned, but there has never yet been such a complete exposure as is revealed in this book, and it is anticipated that it will cause a great sensation amongst its readers in all classes of society.

We feel sure that you will peruse the book with much interest, and we trust that you will aid in its sale and circulation by giving it a favorable notice in your columns. The book is destined to do an incalculable amount of good if it can be placed in the hands of the people; and as there is no better means of doing this than thru the medium of the press, we confidently appeal to you for aid in placing this book before the public.

It forms one volume of our popular temperance library, and we offer it for sale at the following fabulous prices: Single sample number, 10c. Five or more sent to separate addresses for 8c. each—5 or more to one address, 5½c. each—25 or more to one address, 5c. each. Special rates on large lots.

DAVID C. COOK.

148 Madison St.

This book will open the eyes of our country wine makers, and is commended to all good people to learn from it what the League of Freedom is. It is a grand exposure of that League. Send for it everybody

DR. H. D. COGSWELL has just received photographs of his Fountain in course of construction, to be presented to the Town of Willimantic, Connecticut. That is on the Boston and New York air-line of railroad, has 8,000 population, is a thriving manufacturing town, using river water power, and working in cotton, silk and metals. The fountain in question was offered as a gift by the Doctor to the Town of Lowell, but altho he wrote to several officials there tendering the handsome gift, not one of them had time to pay him the compliment of a reply or take the least notice of his communications.

Dr. Cogswell has also just received a formidable parchment, headed in large capitals, Victoria by the grace of God, etc., which is a patent for his useful invention of refrigerating a water supply, cooling hospital beds, churches, theaters, etc. This patent is for Great Britain, Ireland, and the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

He has offered a similar Fountain to the City of San Francisco, to be placed at the Market St. Ferry, as reported last week. The dedication of the Cogswell Fountain at Orwell, N. Y., was a grand affair, and being presented, as the inscription states, on behalf of the Good Templars, we owe the generous donor a very kindly appreciation.

WHISKY AS AN ASSASSIN.

Guiteau claims that it was the Deity who fired that shot, but it has been pretty conclusively proved that whisky had about as much to do with inspiring Guiteau as any other one thing. And now "Gath, the famous correspondent, gives the following as the testimony of an acquaintance upon the killing of President Lincoln:

"Now, I want to call your attention to a fact about Booth that I think has been overlooked in considering him. Liquor crazed him. He went out with me one night, and we were together till late in the morning. He drank that evening repeatedly, until his system was all braced up to a condition of excitement in which he would have done any desperate thing that could be named. I believe that the murder of the President was done under that drunkenness. You will find that Booth had been drinking in Washington for a long period of time and the rum had something of the same influence on him that it formerly had on his father. Old Booth when drunk did the most extraordinary things. Wilkes Booth was a changed person under the influence of liquor. That spoiled him from being a great actor, and fortified him to kill Lincoln." Monitor Journal.

That Monitor Journal will be getting himself into trouble soon. Dont you know Guiteau claims it was the Deity who inspired the deed, and the speeches made by pulpit, rostrum and press have coincided that the murder of the presidents was the work of an inscrutable providence, and thatis what Guiteau claims exactly. He never says once that it was beer that put him up to it.

The only instance on record of a public repentance and confession of sin occurred in Nineveh, and that dont seem to have lasted long. To acknowledge that we, the public and the church and the temperance people could ever be guilty of a public sin, will make the Monitor Journal and the Rescue unpopular, and "too radical." Better subside, agree with Guiteau and keep on good terms with everybody. The day of reckoning is away off in the far distance; dont be afraid of it.

DRINKS FROM DRUGS.

Samples of this work by Hon. Eli Johnson have been received. It gives some startling revelations of the frauds that are practiced in making what are called the finest wines and liquors as well as the common. It is not likely they ever get any poison into them much worse or more deadly than the pure alcoholic product would be. But the value of this book consists chiefly in showing up the folly of supposing that any liquors, either fine wines or brandies can ever be worth much more than 25 cents a gallon beside the government duty. It will show the grape raiser how completely he is in the hands of the wine compounder who can from glucose or sugar or cider or potatoes make exactly in a San Francisco cellar, the finest wines and brandies and exactly the same which can be raised in any vineyard in America or Europe, and make them for 8 to 15c. a gallon; and most commonly escape paying revenue tax upon them. It ought to convince people that when doctors prescribe brandy, beer or wine for the sick they have not the most remote idea of what kind of poison their patients are going to imbibe, nor can they have any idea whatever of the effects they are going to produce, being utterly ignorant of their properties and ingredients. And it should also open the eyes of those who still grope in the utter blindness of substituting an accursed rat poison for the fruit of the vine at the communion table.

A CRY OF DISTRESS.

And now comes a cry of distress from Germany—a cry of alarm at the increase of drunkenness. The advocates of light wines and beer as substitutes for rum and whisky have for years pointed to Germany as illustration. The advocates of the free sale of beer and ale have pointed to the same example. But now the Nation publishes a Berlin letter upon the alarming increase of intemperance and the use of alcoholic drinks in place of or in addition to the use of beer. Belgium has, since 1840 more than doubled the use of alcohol, and in the industrial counties has a dram-shop for every seven persons. In Germany, the dram-shops increased in two years, 12,261; about 10 per cent. The Emperor of Germany in his late address to his Parliament, called attention to the serious increase of crimes and misdemeanors, committed by men in a state of drunkenness, and Parliament has sought to limit the number of licensed dram-shops. One great diffiiculty in the way is the fact that the Prussian aristocracy have a monopoly of distilling whisky. All the same it is apparent that wine or beer are not preventatives of drunkenness.—Rather they awaken and stimulate the appetite for stronger drinks. We commend these facts—coming as they do from a source, not under suspicion of special favor for total abstinence—to those good men who defend moderate drinking, and especially the drinking of wines and beer. It may be suggestive, also to the cider drinkers.—Living Issue.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent or Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

FOX AND GOOSE.

Some of the older folks remember a game which was a favorite in their boy days, called fox and goose. A square board had a number of holes, perhaps three or four dozen in several rows, which were made in the form of a cross. A number of these holes at the start of the game were filled with a wooden peg each which stood for the geese, and one larger pin was the fox, so terrible and tyrannical an enemy of the geese. The geese had to be moved, and so had the fox; but if the boy who played the geese made a careless or foolish move, the fox could sweep the field, and the last goose was easily gobbled.

But there was one way of playing the geese from the first, that not only was the fox prevented from catching a single victim, but the geese faced him bravely and persistently till Mr. Fox was penned up in a corner, and imprisoned so that he could not move a single step. But woe to the flock if the proper moves were not made at first; it was too late to try to gain the victory when a false step had been taken once.

A good many of us have continued to be players on this fox and goose board ever since, and as of old there have been a good many geese for every fox. In 1875 at the first of a series of very successful temperance meetings among the ships at Independencia Bay, in Peru, the first man of 38 who came up to sign the pledge, was carpenter of an English ship. On the next Sunday he made a little speech; he said he had never but once before heard any one speak of temperance and that was at an open air meeting, where a tetotaler was speaking on the steps of the Liverpool Custom House. The carpenter had occupied in the past, several comfortable positions on shore, but he had been a regular attendant at his favorite public house in Liverpool, which had the name of the "Fox and Goose." Ever since he had heard that temperance talk he had been studying over his past life, how he had lost one situation after another and how he had been going down and his family going up, till they were now in a sixth story garret, because of his frequent visits to that Fox and Goose; every time he thot it over, he had been obliged to confess that the name of that concern was very appropriate, for he himself had been the goose and the landlord had been the fox right along.

It is surprising how many people are willing to be played on the board of life as geese, if some fellow chooses to play fox. In almost every community in the state there are many places where a fellow sets up a barrel of rotten, poisonous beer, and abottle or two of snake poison whisky, hangs up his Fox and Goose sign, sets out a card table, and opens a fox and goose board game, but he dont ever let any of his customers play fox; they willingly submit to play GOOSE, Goose, Goose, every time, every day and several times a day. And the fox makes all the moves and wins every game, and gobbles up at last every one of his Goose customers and all their substance, and if they have any families he gets most part of their bread and butter and clothes and all the pictures and books and strawberries and cream and all the sweet and pretty things that God intended the poor man's children and all the other children to enjoy alike.

And there is another very cunning and rapacious fox that dont put up any sign nor show openly his fox and goose board. He is after the young folks and is a very old player. If he can coax any of our young folks to make one false move on the board, it is pretty easy for him to make them play goose for him thru life. If a young person will once lie or steal a little, or do a dishonorable act—anything which he would be ashamed that his mother should find out—he has made a wrong move and enlisted on the goose side of the devils game; and it is pretty easy for the old fox to keep him there right along, and move him as he likes till the game ends in the usual way, and the fox gobbles up all his geese.

But there is a way of keeping that fox, like the one on the board, at bay; by always making the right move, doing the right act, which gives the fox no advantage; in this way he can be penned up and rendered helpless and harmless to you. A manly, honest, truthful course, your duty to God and to your parents, to your family and neighbors, to yourself and your own good name and record, will carry you safely thru without ever playing the goose. Those who have played goose once or many times in life can, by God's mercy, get back into the right moves again; but it is a most dangerous game, and very seldom wins; when it does, the one who has played goose gets wounded with the claws and teeth of the fox, and carries the scars thru life. So make up your minds never to let any one play you as goose. The Band of Hope children will know better.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

All parties writing to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work are requested to give their county as well as post office, as it is necessary in answering, especially in sending supplies, to include the Co. as well as the P. O. in addressing. Much time has been consumed in hunting thru the list of lodges, and sometimes even the P. O. Directory, and if every one writing will bear this in mind, and write accordingly, a favor will be conferred on

BAND OF HOPE INFLUENCE.

This can frequently be seen by our Grand Lecturers as they travel through the country. When Dr. Haswell addressed the Modesto Band of Hope, he related a number of instances of the influence following the juvenile work.

At Copperopolis, we were aided in procuring names by a young lady who was intensely interested in the work, and who afterward proved to be Sister Lizzie Baker, one of the earnest girls in the Modesto Band of Hope. Her training there had fitted her for work in Copperopolis. Most cheerfully were we greeted on account of previously co-existing membership in that Band; and most tenderly and affectionately was Bro. J. J. Porter remembered and referred to as his grand and self-sacrificing labors were brot forward in brief but striking panorama. How sweet these recollections! How bright these little episodes! Go on, brothers and sisters, in this noble work among the youth. It pays. It will make the world better. God bless such noble work.

W. Crowhurst.

REASONS FOR FORMING BANDS OF HOPE.

I. There is ample and overwhelming proof that drunkenness begins so very early that it is impossible to get hold of the children too soon. Lately at the Newcastle Police Court, a young woman only twenty-one, was brought up for drunkenness for the fiftieth time. Last month a boy, only seven years old, died near Leicester, from the effects of drinking brandy. At a recent Ragged School treat in London, a little child, only four years old, on finding only tea provided, cried for its accustomed beer.

II. The children are exposed to continual temptation and opportunity to drink. They are sent to fetch ale from the saloon, and treated at the bar; they are employed with elder people, who try as hard to make them drink as ever did any tetotaler to keep them sober. A Band of Hope boy, employed as a messenger by the Leeds Tramway Company, lately said that every day, and many times a day, he was tempted to drink, and nothing but his pledge would have kept him from yielding.

III. The difficulty of a drunkard's reform is so overwhelming, as to increase tenfold the zeal for prevention in all who have attempted the cure.

IV. The children's influence with their parents is very great, and has often produced most happy results. It is a grand thing to have a temperance advocate living in a drunkard's home. The little ones are also a link between their home and good Christian influence; a channel of communication between their parents and their Band of Hope friends, who, by coming to visit their members, find opportunity to benefit many others.

V. The Band of Hope is the best auxiliary of the Sunday-school. When a Committee on Intemperance was appointed some years ago by the Congregational Union, their inquiries had largely to do with the influence of strong drink on the young; and they estimated that 75 per cent of the scholars were from this cause lost to the school, and, as might be feared, ultimately lost to the church. This percentage is already much reduced by Bands of Hope, but needs to be reduced much further still.

Our work for the children is but half done when we tell them on the Sunday to avoid all places of bad resort, and all bad company: we must also help them to spend their week evenings properly. At the Band of Hope the teachers can meet their scholars, and strengthen the bond of sympathy and affection between them, and teach them much that is desirable for them to know, which can not well be brought into the Sunday lesson. They can show how recreation can be innocent as well as cheerful; and help to form in the children a taste for that which is pure and profitable.

We need Bands of Hope for the children.

Because the habit of secret drinking among women is growing lately with alarming rapidity. None but the doctors know how widespread is the fatal habit.

A leading medical man in Manchester said lately that he owed to it the larger part of his practice.

Because drink is one of the worst snares in our public schools. Boys often exercise the utmost ingenuity to smuggle drink into the school premises without the knowledge of the teachers; and form during their school days the habit of drinking, that blights their after life.

We want all the children on our side. We do not want to secure those only who are in danger of becoming drunkards; we want the children from Christian homes who have neither inclination nor temptation to drink, that they may be early interested in our cause, and early enlisted to fight in its behalf.—Methodist Temperance Magazine.

HOW TO START A BAND OF HOPE.

Obtain samples of necessary supplies. Talk the matter up with your fellow-workers and see that they understand the absolute necessity of juvenile temperance work. Be prepared to meet objections and do not take "cant" as a valid excuse for non-action.

When you have enlisted all the help you can, decide upon a time for the band to meet, and appoint a meeting. Have some interesting exercises to occupy the time, and a pledge roll to be signed; tell the children just what you propose to do; elect officers and arrange the work, and make all necessary preparation for succeeding meetings.

In ordering supplies of us, send for first quarter's Lesson Quarterlies, and first numbers of Red, White and Blue. These are not dated, and should be used in commencing the course, no matter when the Band commences.

In addition to the Quarterlies and the paper for the primary classes, badges, certificates of membership, class record and collection envelopes, a paper for general distribution, reward and attendance cards, library books, and other "supplies," will go far towards keeping up the interest of the Band.

You can commence a Band at any time. Do not wait for the commencement of a quarter. The lessons are not like the International Lessons, in being assigned to a particular date, but are to be taken up in course the same as any other study, and prosecuted without any reference to dates.

Bands commencing, will want "First Quarter's Lessons," next, "Second Quarter's Lessons," and so on.—David C. Cook.

TRUE HEROISM.

There are no heroes in this world who are selfish and mean. Meanness and selfishness are no elements of heroism. True heroism is to do for others, to work for others, to sacrifice for others—that is true heroism. All the world's heroes may proclaim their greatness; but He who spake as never man spake, tells us, "I came to seek and to save that which was lost." Reverently we ask, By what means? By giving himself a sacrifice for them. Competitors for heroism, fix your eye there; and take your rank according to the most magnificent standard of heroism the universe has ever gazed upon. We are ready to acknowledge such heroism.

When I was in Cornwall, many years ago, I was shown a mine in which two men were once engaged in sinking a shaft. It was rather a dangerous business that they had to do—it was to blast a piece of rock. Their custom was to cut the fuse with a knife. One man then got into the bucket and made a signal to be hauled up. When the bucket again descended, the other man got into it, and—with one hand on the signal rope and the other holding the fire—he touched the fuse, made the signal, and was rapidly drawn up before the explosion took place. It was a dangerous business. One day they left their knife up above, and rather than ascend to procure it, they cut the fuse with a sharp stone. It took fire. "The fuse is on fire!" Both leaped into the bucket, and made the signal; but the windlass would haul up but one man at a time; only one could escape. One man instantly leaped out, and said, "Up with ye; I'll be in heaven in a minute." With lightning speed the bucket was drawn up, and the one man was saved.

The explosion took place. Men descended, expecting to find the mangled body of the other miner; but the charge had loosened a mass of rock, and it lay diagonally across him; so that with the exception of a few bruises and a little scorching, the man was unhurt. When asked why he urged the other man to escape, he gave a reason that skeptics would laugh at. If there is any being on the face of the earth that I pity, it is a skeptic; I would not be what we call "a skeptic" to-day for all this universe. They may call it superstitious and fanatical; but what did he say? "Why did you insist on this other man's ascending?" In his broad dialect, he said, "Because I knowed my soul was safe, for I've gie it in the hands of Him of whom it is said that 'faithfulness is the girdle of his loins;' and I knowed that what I gied him he'd never gie up. But t'other chap was an awful wicked lad, and I wanted to gie him another chance." All the infidelity in the world can not produce such a single act of heroism as that.—Gough Library.

THE TURNING POINT.

Traveling last summer thru Vermont, I chanced to be sitting one evening upon the piazza of a little country hotel in the company of a gray haired man, a large and wealthy manufacturer of Massachusetts, who was a native of the town; but had left it years before, and was now returning for a little visit for the first time in nearly forty years.

Our conversation touched upon the subject of temperance. He spoke of the thousands of young men of the present day whose lives were utter failures, and who were wrecks, body and soul thru intemperance.

Deploring this fact, he also spoke of his own decision in the matter as the key to all the success of his life. Then pointing to an old building across the way, he said—

"When I was a young man, that old building was a thriving factory, its manufactures the chief industries of the town. There I earned my living. These were the days before the subject of temperance was much agitatdd; almost every body drank more or less. It was the custom universally for the factory boys to meet on Saturday evening in a certain place, and have a jolly night of it, drinking and making merry to close up the week. None liked this better than myself and my special crony, Jim Mathers. Jim and I usually led the crowd in stories, songs and drinking toasts.

"But after a while, one day it suddenly dawned upon me that, even as early in the week as Wednesday, I found myself longing for Saturday night.

The consequences of this discovery gave me a shock, and, thank God, opened my eyes to the way I was tending. I said not a word to a soul, not even to Jim Mathers, but when Saturday night came I set out as usual for our place of meeting. Between here and the store—I could set my foot upon the very spot now—I met Jim coming toward me. We neither of us spoke. I put out my hand, and he his, tho it was not a habit with us to extend such form of greeting, but it seemed as if the same thot was in each mind.

" 'Come, Jim,' said I, 'let's make a resolution to quit.'

" 'Agreed,' said Jim.

"We kept our pledge—he till his death, some ten years after, and I till the present moment; and what ever success I have had in life, I owe fo the resolution of that hour.

"I have come back now to the old town to look for 'the boys,' but I find none of them. There was not one of all that merry-making crowd that ever made an impress on the world, or won even a position of honor."

After this little story from his own life, he told another, which is interesting as showing how times have changed from that day to this.

There was another young man, who left the town about the same time as himself, with the idea of educating himself for the work of the ministry; but he found, after a little, that it would be better to change his purpose, and so he abandoned the effort, and went to Boston for employment.

Failing at first to find anything more congenial, and unwilling to be idle, he took a position as a butler or steward in one of the first families of the city.

For a time all went well. He found a good home, and his employer a good servant.

But the day came when the gentleman gave a great party, and wine and liquors flowed like water. Before it was over, the services of the steward were more in demand as nurse or attendant upon guests unable to care for themselves, than in any other capacity. The ideas of the Vermont boy were in advance of his times; he was a staunch advocate of temperance, and he was filled with disgust that his duties forced him to mingle in such scenes.

As soon as the next day dawned he appeared quietly before his employer with a request for a settlement of accounts and the announcement that he must leave him.

"Why," said the stately gentleman, "have you not a good home?"

"Yes."

"Are you not satisfied with your wages."

"Yes."

"Then why do you leave? I am satisfied with you, and would not have you leave me, and you will not readily find such another home, I think."

Well, then," he replied hesitatingly, "I cannot stay in a place where I must mix with drunken men as I did last night!"

One can hardly tell whether the Boston gentleman who opened his doors to none but the choicest society, was more astonished or amused. But it was in vain that he argued that he must set before his guests what others did, and that it was the custom of society. The youth was determined to free himself from such a custom. No inducement could tempt him to remain.

The gifted son of that very household from which for such reason a servant thus went forth forty years ago is to-day one of the most silvery tongued orators of our land, and one of his latest and most brilliant appeals is in behalf of the temperance reform.—Youth's Companion.

THE BLOODY BALLOT.

BY REV. C. W. DENISON.

"Father in Heaven! Thy Kingdom come!"
This is the prayer we Christians pray,
And yet we vote the demon Rum
Over thy Kingdom's sovereign sway.

"No drunkard ever enters here!"
Sounds forth from Heaven its fearful knell,
And yet we vote from year to year
To plunge the drunkard down to hell!

By votes we run the Devil's still!
By votes we kill God's living grain!
By votes the drunkards cup we fill,
And doom him to eternal pain.

Who casts those votes? Thou, voter! Thou!
Thy ballot dams these drunken souls!
Thy brother's blood is on it now.
Dropped, red and reeking at the polls!

Protectionist.

Choose the life! but one thee way;
Follow as is given thee,
Feeble tho thy strength may be,
Every hope shall have its day.
Yet deny thou not one plea,
Heaven hath for cause of His:
Greatest cross is greatest bliss
Life unto eternity.

GENEROUS FELLOWS.

If there is anything a liquor-drinker or seller prides himself upon, it is that he is a "generous fellow." A sprightly fellow jingles his few silver dollars in his pocket, walks up to the bar, turns around, addresses the loafers usually congregated in a saloon:

"Step up, boys; what'll you have?"

All drink, and he slaps down his change with the utmost freedom and nonchalance. He takes his change and walks out, very likely with a ten cent cigar between his teeth. The barkeeper or one of the loafers speaks, "He's a generous fellow," and the rest chime in, "You bet he is, there's nothing small about him." That is the usual verdict. But that is only one side of the question. In nine cases out of ten, if you follow that fellow to his home, you will find that his wife and children are denied many comforts that could be purchased with the money so foolishly spent, and which has won him the name of "generous fellow." We know from actual observation that the wife is frequently and cruelly denied money to purchase those things much needed, or if her request is granted it is done grudgingly.

This "generous fellow" when at home doesn't sing out to his wife and children, "Step up and have something." Oh, no, not he. He swallows his supper and walks down town to have a game of billiards, and returns to his home after all the family have retired, generously full of drinks, and more than likely alarms the whole family in his efforts to get in the door or take off his boots. Oh, he's undoubtedly a "generous fellow," We know quite a number of such. After a few years his money is spent; he is down, and when he walks up to the bar for a drink, the saloon-keeper waltzes him out of the door. His money is gone.—Missouri Temperance Advocate.

A TEMPTER.

A few evenings since we stood talking with a gentleman on the sidewalk near our office, when a lawyer in this city approached us and said, "Come, let's go and take some beer." "What!" said we, invite a man to take beer who wears a blue ribbon?" pointing to the one on our coat. "Oh, I dont want to tempt anybody, but you come in with me," said he to our companion, "and let's have a drink."

We remonstrated with him and offered to pilot them around on 11th street, to the best pump in the city where they could slake their thirst with something much better than beer.

"Oh, we want a little beer to settle our stomachs just now, and by and by we shall want a little to stir them up again," replied the one who had extended the invitation, and they both entered a saloon near-by.

In a few moments they reappeared, the lawyer going up street and our friend rejoining us. "There are two events that we shall never forget." we said; "one is the invitation that man just now gave you to drink, even urging you and going in with you and drinking himself; the other is, that a few years ago, when he was occupying the very responsible position of President of the Y. M. C. A. in this city, we have heard him exhorting and praying and addressing Sabbath schools in the interest of the religion taught by Jesus Christ.

The very boys and girls and young men who saw and heard him then, see him now going in and out of rum holes and lager beer saloons. His example today destroys all his teachings and prayers of a few years ago. And he must meet them both at the judgment day. If they were your children, which of the two examples would you have them follow?" —The Anvil.

BEER VERSUS BOOTS; OR THE PROCEEDS OF A "TIS BUT" BOX.

"I wish that you would give up drinking beer; it only tempts you to the salooon for more," said a lady to her servant boy, in the beautiful village of Highgate.

After some further conversation it was agreed that a penny a day should be allowed in lieu of beer, A " 'Tis but" box was provided into which the pennies were daily dropped.

At the end of ninety-six days the youth opened his box; and, wending his way to the shoemaker's bought a nice pair of new boots, for which he carefully laid down his eight shillings—or niney-six pennies.

If all the "tis but a nickel (s)," or "tis but a dime (s)," were dropped into such a box there would in time—and not a very long time, in many cases—be enough saved to buy a corner lot," or to enable you to avail yourself of that good business opening where a "reliable young man, with a ready capital." was needed. Try this plan.—Our Young Men.

HOW TO RUN A BAND OF HOPE.

Run it. We can hardly give you fuller directions than this, for it comes as near running itself as any thing can and not be self-acting. But a little thot and care in making the exercises as interesting as possible, in looking over the details of the work, in providing teachers for the classes, and in seeing that the scholars receive the proper credits where they are working for rewards, will be necessary to ensure the complete success of the undertaking. The superintendent, too, should promote the missionary spirit as much as possible in the Band. To make the children helpers and active workers in the temperance cause, is the surest way of enlisting their interest and making them staunch advocates of temperance; and there is plenty of work which they can do better than any one else. Bringing in new members, obtaining signatures to the pledge, canvassing for temperance papers, are all lines of work in which they can take an active part.—S. S. Supt.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

HAWAII.

There may be,and no doubt are gross abuses on the Hawaiian plantations, The system of contract labor hunted up from abroad, and compelled to fulfil the stipulations it entered into perhaps voluntarily and gladly, is one that necessitates the use of force under the most favorable circumstances. But it is a demoralizing business, like that of a city police, and invariably must lead to gross abuses. And it is more than probable the Hawaiian government has acted in a very unscrupulous manner, and winked at the existence of an actual slavery in the islands.

But the charges made by the S. F. Monitor, by E. T. Slight in the Santa Cruz Transcript or by any one else who makes it, that the missionaries of Hawaii are in the least chargeable with the immoralities of the people and government, with the vices of the islanders which have led to their rapid decrease—is about the meanest and most infamously false and malicious that ever disgraced a professional harlot pedlary of infamies. The Monitor is afflicted with such an insane hatred of any thing American or Protestant that it may possibly plead like Guiteau, insanity, as a cloak for its diabolism, and Slight whose ravings one is surprised to find in the chaste columns of Bro. Wheeler has evidently the same idiotic craze against Christianity and Sunday and ministers, which inspires him to be another Guiteau, minus the pistol and the dastard courage of that assassin.

Forty years before the American Misssonaries went to Hawaii, the islands were open to the ravages of rum and destructive disease abundantly distributed among the people by every ship of war, French, English and American, that visited them, by every whaler and merchant vessel and by every rum and crime trader and pedlar that went there. Mr. Slight himself says the population was estimated in 1779, at 400,000; in 1823 at 142,000, and a census in 1832 made it 130,000. Then was a gradual decrease down to 51,531 in 1872. And then with scurrilous venom he attributes the decrease to the "liquid hell and damnation given them by the missionaries to gratify their beastly lusts."

They have done their best to entirely prevent the sale of liquor to white or black; but when its import was prohibited, the French government piratically took posession of the Islands and held them until they agreed to permit the import of their thrice accursed wine and brandy. Another time when there was a Sunday Law protecting the native women on Sunday from the foreign savages, an American Lieutenant, commanding a small naval vessel of the U. S., went ashore with armed marines on Sunday and forced a repeal of it.

It is well known, too, that before the arrival of the missionaries, female virtue was a thing unheard of, unknown to the customs and habits of the country; and everything that is better or higher among the natives than the universal and unrestricted promiscuity which once prevailed, is due to the teachings and examples of the missionaries, and has been implanted in spite of the poisonous influences of the foreign rumseller and rumdrinker and lying debauchee.

The natives had no written language and were heathens; the rumseller and the infidel have conspired right along these 100 years to make this worse, but the missionaries have taught them every one to read and write and they now have their own schools and churches and send knowledge and light and the gospel to almost every other island of the Pacific.

The natives were of themselves the most persistent and undisguised thieves; the missionary teachings and examples have made theft less common among them than among any people in the world where rum or beer is sold.

It is perhaps the case that some of the missionaries sons and grand sons may have plantations; for no people in all the world would be more likely to prosper. It is possible some of these young people may deal hardly with their convict or contract laborers. It may be so or it may not. But it is safe to say that since the beginning of this century there has not been nor is to-day a class of people on the globe any where, that have compared or can to-day compare in true nobility of race or in heroic devotion to christianity and philanthropy, in excellence of character and the highest and best characteristics of humanity, moral and physical—with the whole body of American missionaries who landed in Hawaii from 1820 to date with their families and descendants.

And honest men will admit it to be one of the strongest evidences of their excellence of character and record that they enjoy the most refined hate and malice of all such venemous slanderers as the Monitor and Mr. Slight and the haters of morality and Godliness.

PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE.

For many years previous to the war of the rebellion, and up to its beginning a vast number of the good and worthy men of the nation, who had no interest in slavery nor friendship for it, belonged to and loved the Democratic party with an intense affection. They had seen the country grow up into greatness under Democratic supremacy, and they associated its success with the capacity and administrrtive ability of that party; and its deposition from power they feared would be a prelude to national disaster.

They knew there were abuses and wrongs which had barnacled on to that party. They lamented its subserviency to the interests of slavery, they lamented a variety of things; but still in their opinion the displacement of their "glorious old party would result in irretrievable ruin; nothing but our party can save the country. Then there was a great wrong in the land; a cruelty and injustice that wronged both oppressor and oppressed, as all wrongs do. The glorious old party in power could not see back into history or would not try to; it chose the wrong, embraced the wrong, and the end of its adulterous union with that crime was a four years war and the downfall of the party after all,

That was a result that all statesmen should have been wise enough to foresee, as plainly before the drama was enacted, as after they had witnessed its terrible events. To preserve the party, to maintain its wrongs and fortify it in its iniquities, justice, mercy, humanity, honor, country were sacrificed; party devotion, which was really treason, was accepted and accounted and installed in the seat of patriotism. And the end was disaster, ruin, war, wreck —which genuine, honest, unswerving patriotism adopted in time might have averted.

Now the best of friends in reality of that glorions old Democratic party, were the honest patriots who implored and entreated it to do justice, and love the truth and live—who threatened to desert it, who split and scratched the ticket, who did all they could to reform the party in the party, and then in despair left the party to embrace the cause of the country.

Now let us observe how the avarice, greediness, lust of place and power, ignorance and prejudice of men, compel history to repeat itself. Some say very foolishly, that history must always repeat itself alike; but history does just what its actors compel it to do. It repeats every time its punishment for wrong, and it repeats as unerringly its rewards of virtue and rectitude and godliness, whenever the rare opportunity is offered. The Republican party which was the party of principle and patriotism, for that reason triumphed, and as soon as its success was entirely assured, many of the worst men of other parties came over to it. The consciousness of security in power led to corruption and contempt for public opinion, and abuses so intolerable that patriotic men began to give it warning in turn.

Horace Greeley, who led a division of the party in 1872, was perhaps the best and truest frieud that party ever had; but he was scorned as a deserter, almost a traitor, because he pnt the welfare of the country before the supremacy of a freebooter's ring in the party, to lead it to its death.

And that party has twice as nearly as possible gone overboard by its own monstrous delinquencies; and that under the management of those whom the party loves to call its loyal adherents, its stalwarts; who, whenever they have been in the ascendant, have led the party to the brink of its grave, and whenever they have been driven into a back seat, it has revived and recuperated.

At this time, and for years back, there is a wrong, a curse, a monstrous injustice, a murderous national crime, beside which, slavery was comparatively a trifle. It is right among and around us, desolating homes, reveling in the slaughter of our brothers, sisters, men, women, infancy and old age. The best men in that Republican party, the men who love it most, for the good it has done, and which it might do, the only men of whom it at all deserves to be said "They are true and loyal to that party," have prayed and begged the party, year after year, to embrace the right in this most momentous of all questions that was ever presented to a nation—to do justice, entrench themselves in the hearts of the people and live.

The worst enemies of that party, its barnacles and parasites—leaders tho they be—deride the only true patriots, who would thus save party and country too; and they bargain with the devil to save their party at the cost of 100,000 human victims every year, and a billion of treasure; preferring to trust his lying promises and confide in the triumph of crime and wrong and hell, rather than believe in the word of Almighty God, enforced by all history, human experience and common sense.

The coming end of this is clear—the grog-shop must and shall go; the women of the country are in the most determined hostility to it and will never go back one inch, or give a moments quarter to the villainous infamy. There are enough honest, intelligent men, to see that both old parties are hopelessly besotted and bewitched by the rum-fiends, and have really sold out the country to perdition, for the devil's worthless promise to keep them in power. These men and these women would save the party if the party would, but if the condition of its safety is the damnation of the country, and its abandonment to the legions of crime, they believe that the good men that are left uncorrupted in the various parties, who are sober and honest and patriotic, can be better trusted to be, and lead, a new party of sobriety and honesty, whose motto is, "For God, and home, and native land," than any nest of Catalines, who barter their own souls and the nation's, for a miserable bribe of present place and unholy coin.

The article in the Pacific Methodist which has been under discussion, refers to the passage in Corinthians, "One is hungry and another is drunken," to prove that the sacramental wine used there was inebriating. The word here rendered drunken is translated in the French bible, "filled or satiated," and that was its frequent meaning as well as drunken. The Septuagint bible uses it in the following and various other passages, where it does not at all apply to anything more than abundantly fed or filled. "Abundantly satisfied with the fatness of thy house." "Thou waterest the ridges, and settlest (or fillest) the furrows." Let her breasts satisfy thee." "I will satiate the soul of my priests with fatness." It cannot mean drunken there, and why should it when contrasted with hungry?

Paul says same time, "brethren, when ye come together to eat, wait one for another; if any man is hungry, let him eat at home." He was evidently reproving indecorum, disorder and gluttony, which the converted idolaters had borrowed from their heathen customs. He told them also of "the cup of blessing which we bless, a communion of the bloop of Christ," and which ever he was reproving, gluttony or the use of fermented wine, he adds, "I would not that ye have communion with devils; ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils." So if it was fermented wine, it was, in Paul's opinion, the cup of devils and the table of devils. This is slim commendation of the fermented wine theory, but it was an eminently just description of its use.

When this subject was discussed sometime ago in this paper, complaints of unfairness came from two quarters, because it refused to publish the infidel argument just as it is propounded in the Pacific Methodist, that Christ used and commanded the use of poison wine, but with the conclusion that he thereby disproved all claim to a divine origin, and founded a system of morality inferior to that of Mahomet, Confucius or Budda. And if they could with the assistance of Dr. Crosby and the Congregationalist and the Christian Union, establish their assertion, their deduction would be irresistible.

Other systems of religion have proved their entirely human origin, by their falsehood in history, science or mathematics. But hitherto Christianity has never been tripped up in that way, tho frequently assaulted on its apparently indefensible points. Had the bible given the size and distance of the sun as its writers would have probably estimated it, or misstated other self evident facts, it could not have commanded our belief. But it has done nothing of the kind.

Moses, Daniel or the apostles might have been excused for misunderstanding a scientific fact, on the ground that they were not inspired in chemistry, medicine and solar eclipses, those things not being connected with their mission. Not so with the Savior; if he was what he claimed to be, he knew all about wine; knew all the properties and processes of grape juice, and the changes it undergoes in its prostitution; knew perfectly well all the evils the cup of devils and harlots had done, and would always do; knew it was a device of Satan from the first; knew that Satan would foist it on to his table and drag millions of souls by means of it from the altar and table of God to perdition.

Now, it is to be particularly noted, that he nor the apostles never once called the communion drink "wine," but He called it the "fruit of the vine," a term which admits of no uncertainty whatever. Had he called fermented wine the fruit of the vine, he would have made a very grievous scientific error, which a mere man could and would have easily fallen into. But he did not. He knew better and that is a very strong evidence in support of his more than human knowledge.

It seems fair to believe that none of the apostles or disciples ever used alcoholic wine: John the Baptist, Timothy, the Rechabites, Essenes and some other sects would not touch a grape or anything that belonged to the vine, for fear of evil associations connected with it. Others, like the Savior, were not afraid of the innocent grape and its precious wholesome juices. Paul said to Timothy; use no longer water, but for your frailties of constitution, take some fruit of the vine, as we do: it will nourish and strengthen you. It probably never occurred to any one in those days that Paul meant to advise Timothy to touch the cup of devils. If he had, we should have now to plaster him all over too, with apologies for his mistake. If he had, science would now prove him to have been a fool on that question, because it would have been the very worst medical advice that could have been given. But Paul can stand up without any whitewash or excuse; the natural wine, God's wine, which he prescribed was the most admirable aid and nourishment and strength for the weakly stomach of an invalid.

Bro. Simmons has been led into two very serious errors which may exercise a misleading and mischievous tendency upon those who may have read his article. He states that Dr. F. R. Lees, our greatest biblical authority, recanted lately his opinions upon this subject on reading a book by a Mr. Wilson. There was never a particle of foundation for such a report respecting Dr. Lees. The book of Wilson has been thoroly exploded by Dr. Norman Kerr as false in its teachings and defective in its facts, its science and its authorities. An eminent Christian philanthropist in England who had been led astray by Wilson's nonsense was entirely set right on reading Dr. Kerr's "Unfermented wine a fact."

The other misstatement is that a reformed drunkard runs no risk, but can safely partake of the cup of poison at the communion, depending upon a miracle to change his physical nature for the time being. If all the reformed men and women who have fallen at the communion table thru the wretched pittfall there, were hypocrites, and intended to drink and sin, as Bro. Simmons asserts, there is no faith to be put whatever in any human profession of conversion.

There are various books and pamphlets which treat this subject fully and rationally to be had at 1041 Market street, San Francisco. They are by the first scholars in the world, and no scholarship dares to assail them openly. It may be criminal ignorance that refuses, as we know some people do, to learn the truth on a matter in which their conduct is an assault upon the validity and integrity of the Christian system.

P. S. This was intended to end the matter for the present, but after placing it on the copy hook, the Glasgow Good Templar came to hand with a very interesting article on communion wine by the great apostle of science, Dr. B. W. Richardson, which will appear in the next number and to which the attention of all who are interested in the truth and the right, is especially requested.

GOOD OF THE ORDER.

Unless that means "good of the cause" a little more than it does "good of the Order," it is a failure. It is of the highest importance that the quality and character of our average lodge exercises should be raised and improved about 1000 per cent. The program of exercises in many of our lodges under Good of the Order, would not once in five years convert one fallen man, confirm one weak or wavering brother or reclaim one backslider. Not because our people dont want to convert and reclaim, but because they dont give thot and study how best to do it.

Songs about milkpails and blossoms and canary-birds and little Polly Hopkins, recitations of scalping scenes and suicides, Dutch and Irish and drunken mimicry, unrelieved by a word on the great object of our order or a particle of any useful discussion or information—night after night consuming idly all the time so wisely provided for Good of the Order by its founders—makes such a purgatory for the real active temperance worker who has to sit and listen to these wasted opportunities, that he or she is wearied and discouraged, and to be actively useful must go elsewhere.

And the party who really enjoys that kind of thing is set to thinking whether that kind of program which can be seen in the beer garden or cellar every night, performed in more artistic style by professionals, and its appreciation enforced by copious appeals to the beer mug, is not as cheap, enjoyable and profitable after all.

It is sometimes flippantly but foolishly said, that we must provide entertainments and fun to compete with those of the beer swinery. It may be admitted that if people will sing, dance, swear, gamble and smoke, it is better they should do so where there is no drink to aggravate their follies and vices—but that is all that can be said of it. To reclaim men from the low and despicable haunts of vice, we ought to invite them to something they do not find there, and we can most easily substitute something more interesting, entertaining, useful and elevating, every time.

If there is anything good in the swinery which the devil has stolen from us, let us re-capture and use it. The piano, organ, clarinet, violin, good music, etc., let us use, of course, but leave to the beer den everything which has not an elevating, educating, improving or refining tendency. You say, we want to reach down for the fallen, and keep them from temptation! That is so, but we want to raise the fallen and the falling, up to a higher moral and intellectual level—not to drop ourselves down to their level. Unless our exercises are above those of the grog-shop, they may as well nearly be practiced there as in the lodge, the open entertainments, or the Home Protection meetings. In short, we want most positively to make the things that are light and frivolous and funny, to be only the occasional interludes—not the sum and substance, the beginning and the end, the aim and object of a temperance meeting.

There is now no scarcity of good, fresh, sprightly, spirited, national temperence exercises; songs, recitations, music, debates, essays, poems, scientific and instructive lessons by Dr. Richardson, Miss Colman and many others; David C. Cooks literature and a vast variety of really useful and entertaining studies; these with debates and five or two minutes speeches upon the multitudinous issues of our great reform, will make us entirely independent of all second hand cast off or horrowed tactics and gymnastics. And in that way we can make our exercises so pleasant and attractive to ourselves and so useful and attractive to those who come to participate, that our own profit will be immense and our influence upon the community will be increased a hundred fold,

A Good Templars Lodge that meets only for amusement is only a wooden gun, a paper sword, a stuffed club, in comparison to what it might be and can be this day three weeks, if it will. The object of a lodge is to educate the whole people up to secure the prohibition of the horrible curse and crime and wo of the infernal liquor traffic. Till that is effected there is no room for folly, no time to waste idly. And when a lodge fails to make its main object prominent, and not drily but pleasantly prominent at every one of its meetings, it helps to drive its best membership away discouraged and to inspire the outsider with a contempt for our order and an entire distrust of our sincerity to push or our capacity to accomplish the reform for which we so loftily profess to labor.

The talent in our lodges is able and willing, and plenty of it, every time to do justice to a bright and useful program—and we do them too a wrong when we waste their energies upon a useless or barren theme We are missing acres and miles of useful precious opportunities of self improvement and occasions of the highest and sweetest enjoyment—for want of a little intelligent forethot and enterprise and energy to get up out of an old played out and worn out rut.

These remarks are made not to lessen the enjoyments of the lodge meetings, but with a hope of making them vastly more pleasant to everybody and infinitely more useful. Those who love the Order and cause will accept them in the kindly spirit in which they are offered. There are lodges which might have done a grand work in their communities and have done it, and there are others with equal opportunities and perhaps better, that have done nothing and are doing nothing and have no more influence in their neighborhood than a tin toot-horn. And the lodges that have to get up dances in defiance of the laws and decencies of the Order, are just so far as they are able, making the lodge the equal and on the moral level of the beerdive.

THE CHRONICLE.

With much justice the Napa Register commends the Chronicle for various good services it renders the public in unmasking scoundrelism and making war upon the schemes of unscrupulous monopolists who conspire against the public welfare. It says that paper has done more to keep the San Francisco police force up to its work, than all other metropolitan papers combined. It is not afraid to point its index finger at a rogue, rich or poor, in office or ou of office, and say, "Thou art the man." The city is cursed with body and soul destroying vampires, who grow fat upon the sins of those more "sinned against than sinning." These wretches have been able to procure licenses on the recommendation of certain craven individuals who are little better than themselves, and without which they cannot carry on their infamous trade. These dens have in several cases been refused licenses of late, and why? Because the Chronicle threatened to publish the names of those who endorsed their several petitions It is not so conservative as to disregard the duty it owes to the community. It does not crawl in the wake of popular feeling, but is the first to catch the quickening of the public pulse on all questions, and it no sooner sees than it speaks. There is a class of newspapers, and a class of men to match, who are incapable of doing wrong or recognizing it in others; for they have too little mental force to commit a sin, and too much policy to declare against it. Both are heartily despized by the public. The Chronicle in its zeal; sometimes strkes a little hard; but the blow is unerringly and heartily bestowed, and if taken in the Christian spirit, will work good to those who deserve it—and who generally receive it.

It is a public benefit that no other paper or public officer or class of reformers secular or clerical, has ever before attempted, to effect the withholding of license from some of those infamous scoundrels like that of the depot of crime at 626 Sacramento street

That trap for the ruin of honest industrious girls was perhaps no worse than the average beer shop, but it is well to see some branch of the iniquity headed off. And it is to be hoped the Chronicle may some day soon, see fit to open its batteries on the whole worse than satanic system of beer and gin dives which in hands of the league of free outlaws are the cause of all the crime, vice, pauperism and misery of thiscity—which live solely by the plunder, ruin and murder of the citizens.

MRS. EMMA MCLELLAN, lately of Benicia, collected from friends there for the library of the Home for Orphans, the following books, very handsomely bound and has presented them: Mitchell's Atlas, the Bible and Commentator, Achievements of Stanley, Ladies of the White House, Bible Animals, History of the United States, the Animal Kingdom. These will be a most useful as well as ornamental addition to the library.

GOVERNOR ST JOHN.

Has issued a splendid proclamation, setting forth that as there is in the cities of Atchison, Leavenworth, Wyandotte and Dodge, a combination of persons determined to violate the prohibitory law, he offers the following rewards for the arrest and final conviction of the guilty parties named; $100 for every one keeping a rum nuisance; $100 for any marshall who fails to perform his duties under this law; $300 for any policeman in similar default; $100 for any sheriff; $300 for any deputy sheriff and $100 for any county attorney failing to do their duty under the law. Also $300 for arrest and conviction of any one engaged in making any intoxicating liquor and $300 for any one committing perjury on the trial of persons violating the law.

It will be very distinctly understood pretty soon, that prohibition will effectually prohibit in Kansas, with a real live man for governor. Is there any valid reason why Governor Perkins should not issue a similar proclamation with regard to the League of Free Jailbirds, who openly defy the law here, the jurymen who perjure themselves, the justices, city and county attorneys and other officials who openly violate the Sunday law of this state, who visit the thief resorts on Sunday, and declare that they will neither obey nor enforce the law.

EXPENSE OF BEER ALONE.

'During 1880," says the retailer, the organ of the brewers, "taxes were paid on 13,374,000 barrels or 414,000,000 gallons." This is equivalent to about one hundred and fifty mugs for every man, woman and child in the country. Leaving out the females and children, this vast quantity represented 600 glasses a year for each male over 21 years old in the in the United States. When we consider the very large number of adult males who drink no beer at all, and the other host who partake of it only in the most moderate manner, and at more or less protracted intervals, it is evident that some other Americans must drink a great deal. At five cents a glass this beer manufacture of 1880 brot $375,000,000 or about $7.50 per capita for every man, woman and child. This is a quarter more than the total expense of running the United States government. This is a stubborn and an appalling fact.

BILLY'S TEN COMMANDMENTS.

1. When thirsty, thou shalt come to my house and drink.
2. Thou shalt always keep my name in memory, and forget all others in the same business.
3. Thou shalt honor me and my bartender so that thou mayst live long in the land and continue to drink at my house forever.
4. Thou shalt honor me and mine that thou mayst live long and see me again.
5. Thou shalt not destroy or break anything in my house, else thou shalt pay for double its value.
6. No singing—Thou shalt not raise thy voice in song, nor thy feet in gaiety.
7. Thou shalt not pay thy bill in bad money, nor even say chalk on the slate.
8. Thou shalt not steal from me, as I need all I have and more, too.
9. Thou shalt not expect too large glasses, for the landlord must live on his profits.
10. After eating and drinking at my house thou shalt pay promptly, for the landlord never likes to chalk, especially to poor customers. AMEN.—Signal.

That saloon keeper has only written down what everybody who votes the old party tickets says and acts at the ballot box.

RISING STAR.—The colored lodge at Chico, Rising Star No. 404, has made itself a fixture by securing a hall and home for itself. The local paper speaking of the event says:

"The new hall of Rising Star Lodge, I. O. G. T. was a scene of unusual interest last Friday evening This building has just been completed and furnished by the colored people of Chico in a most comfortable manner. It is also provided with a handsome parlor organ. It is carpeted and supplied with benches to a seating capacity of about 125. On this occasion the hall was crowded, and even standing room was scarce. The pastors of the different churches of the city were present, also a large number of Good Templars from the other lodges, besides a number of citizens. The members of Rising Star Lodge were extremely happy on the occasion. At about eight o'clock Chief Templar Beeden called to order, and the exercises opened with an anthem, and Rev. J. N. Burroughs offered prayer. Rev. J. B. Warren made the first address—"Organized effort." Rev. A. Holbrook followed with "The cause of temperance in its relation to the State." Rev. J. N. Burroughs spoke upon the temperance cause in relation to Christianity." Rev. J. W. Atkinson, on "temperance in its relation to the family." The Rev. J. M. Woodman was the last speaker and spoke feelingly of "the cause of temperance in its relation to the colored race. All these subjects were ably handled, and illustrated with telling anecdotes, some of which created considerable mirth and relieved the monotony. The songs sung between each address were well rendered by Miss Powers, Mrs. Pearsall and Miss St. Clair with Miss Burroughs as organist. A collection at the close netted $8.25. On Saturday the ladies of the lodge gave a chicken supper which was well attended and enjoyed by all. We wish Rising Star Lodge a full measure of success."

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

It was proposed to issue a 20,000 edition of the RESCUE about Christmas, but as every body was preparing extra Christmas agony for the people, it was deemed best to defer this paper's extra edition till the returns of the present quarter come in. So on the 10th, or possibly the 17th, of February it may be expected, some of the correspondents of the paper, it is hoped will give their aid to make it a creditable issue, by preparing a ⅓ or ¾ column article. And honest advertisers can have a good show off.

DAVID C. COOK.

Be sure to read with care David C. Cook's list of excellent publications in another page. Now is the time to secure good and interesting reading for the family, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, and to fill up every bodys library. Never before was such a chance to get proper books, papers and music for the young folks. They can be had too, for about half the price that old, battered, second hand books used to cost. Every body who dont spend money for tobacco and beer, can well afford to reap the benefit of these publications: exery one who does spend for tobacco and beer ought to use twice as much money for good literature to enable him to keep his conscience from becoming too persistently troublesome.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

E. H. BOSCHER, DRUGGIST,
169 Main Street,
Stockton, Cal.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS.

There were certain parties entitled during the year past to receive premiums for clubs secured for the RESCUE. It is believed they have all been ordered and paid for; but it is possible that some one or more may have been overlooked. If any one entitled to such has not received it, please drop a postal card. The Mrs. Hayes picture was to have been ready for delivery November 1st; have not heard whether it has been sent out or not.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

David C. Cook has recently opened, at 148 Madison St. Chicago, a Revolution Temperance House, and we are amazed at the amount he offers for a little money. He furnishes excellent and unique material for educating the children. It is a grand work. We advise all to send for samples and buy what they can afford. A little money expended in this way will hardly be missed, and will do you and others much good.—Prohibitionist, Lewiston, Me.

David C. Cook's Sunday-School Supplies.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1 0 , and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36, besides 133 Library books, 5 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty-six million copies. There is not one of our pub.ications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c. to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing, etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1¼c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2 c a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with litt e lesson pictures; also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words); also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty-three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45.

Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in a neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. Far better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection; books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5⅝ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5¼ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

Lecturers' Reports.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

National city is a busy and growing place, four miles below San Diego on the bay and terminns of the railroad. Lectured Friday night, preached Sunday morning, assisted in Sunday school and addressed them about Band of Hope, kindly entertained by Sister Lamb, materially aided by sister Langdon. Rev. Bro. and Sr. Field, Bro. Caswell, Lodge Deputy, Bro. Asa Adams and others. Bro. Edwin Hunter and Mrs. Thomas gave us excellent readings and Mrs Curtis fine singing.

Seeing the masses were at the railroad works I proposed going there to an open air meeting on Sunday afternoon , and in Bro. Adam's dining hall at night. The latter was densely crowded and we obtained a good many names for the lodge. Held special lodge meeting next night and initiated 8, reobligated 2. Started good Band of Hope same day, and with Bro. Field and Sisters Losee and Langdon it is sure to be a success. Obtained several subscribers for the Rescue and a good number for Cooks cheap books and papers. Sr. Losee agent for Rescue.

Cajon. Next morning hired Bro. Journey who keeps a livery stable, to drive me out. Very hospitably entertained at Mr. Clark's and Mr. Hill's. Beautiful Valley good wheat, fruit and raisins here. soil adapted for wine grapes, but the gentlemen named have decided on conscientious grounds, not to plant them.

Bro. Judge Ogden took pains to advertise and prepare for meetings. Almost succeeded in starting a lodge, but influential men decided there were not people enough. Organized good Band of Hope, Miss Della Hll, the very efficient teacher, Supt. Two subscribers for the Rescue a number for Cook's publications. Came pretty near having to walk 14 miles to Poway; but by sending my baggage back to San Diego by stage, and Mr. Clark driving me a good piece of the road, I only had to foot it 6 or 7 miles, carrying the Home for Orphans. A temperance and Christian English family, Baker by name took the best care of me.

This is a beautiful fruit, grain and climatic valley; wonderful how the people turned out; sociable. musical, appreciative. I want to come here again. Preached to full and most attentive houses Sunday morning and night, spoke to Sunday school and organized good Band of Hope same day, Bro. Adams Chapin Supt. Lodge doing well; after last lecture, obtained a dozen new names of very desirable people. Bro. Parnell led a splendid choir with his violin at both lectures. Rro. Chas. Baker, W. C. T. appointed Agt. for Rescue. I obtained 3 subscribers and a good list for Cook's publications and distributed Dr. Mc Donald's leaflets which he sends me, and I take out my commission for selling Cook's works in his attractive papers which I give away. I recommend this plan to all our lecturers.

In addition to $1.25 for the Rescue hardly any one will refuse a nickel for a good monthly for the family, or some boy or girl at home or elsewhere or 5 cts. for a $1 or $ 1.50 book, postage paid, and sent in a separate wrapper to any boy or girl, man or woman anywhere in the U. S. or Canada! Cook will send you abundance of samples. Get the people reading constantly. Pleasant stay at Bro. Rickeys. Thru mistake had another 7 miles to walk going towards

San Diego where I dedicated hall of Monument Lodge room; crowded to excess; good music and recitations by B of H: fine addresses by Sister Losee. Obtained several more namss for the Rescue. Golden Rule Lodge is having many additions. Hope now that Old Monument will.

H. R. HUGHES.

Sat. the 10, addressed the Greeenwood B. R. C, at their regular meeting, Sunday at 2 P. M. lectured; again audiences small on account of weather, return Saturday.

Sunday evening lectured at Spanish Dry Diggings, and on Monday organized Mountain Fern Lodge with nineteen charter members. A. H. Walker D. D. to whom I an indebted for kindness and favors. It is a small place but they believe in training up their youth right, they had a Blue Ribbon Club and Band of Hope.

The 13th, addressed the school at Garden Valley, and a small audience in the evening. We aim to sow the good seed beside all waters.

The 14th had a meeting in the M. E. Church of Georgetown. Met an old friend Rev. Mr. Jones, had a fine meeting. I organized Georgetown Lodge last Aug. with a small charter list, the first in the county, now they have 72 members and are taking in some at every meeting.

The 15th went back to Pilot Hill through the rain, had a small audience.

The 16th having a day off drove to Auburn and met a few friends in the M. E. Church. Was very kindly treated by Rev. Mr. Hopkins who is solid on the temperance question. I find that Placer County need ssome work. They have 15 lodges but some of them are alive and that is all. A thoro canvass of the county at this time would result in great good. Auburn itself needs waking up. It should have a lodge of 100 members at least and make its saving influence felt in this work of reform. To-night I return to Greenwood to make an effort to start a lodge. We have seven in Eldorado county now and still there's more to follow.

Auburn Dec. 17th, 1881.

Saturday the 17th, had a fine audience in Greenwood, received 16 names for a charter, and in the afternoon of the 18th, organized the lodge. The charter is open one week, and Bro. Watson L. D. of Georgetown, will install the officers, when delegations will be present from Georgetown and Mountain Fern Lodges.

The same evening attended church in Coloma, and was permitted by Rev. Mr. Jones to make some remarks and announce the meeting for the 19. Lectured two evenings and organized Marshall Lodge with 21 charter members

Coloma is noted over the world for being the place where gold was discovered by J. W. Marshall. It is now called the Second Sonoma, the center of wine interest in this county. It gratified me to be able to organize a lodge, and have it named in honor of the old pioneer Marshall whose home is still there. I shall not soon forget the kindness received at Coloma. The Brass Band volunteered their services both evenings and gave us excellent music, calling the people together and retaining them while we conversed for hours.

The 21st, six of the nine lodges were represented at Placerville and El Dorado District Lodge was organized. We had good meetings and an excellent meeting in the evening. Mrs. M. E. Congdon who is here working for the Union, attended the sessions, and gave us an excellent address at the Mass Meeting.

The 22, had a meeting at the Six Mile House got nine names for a lodge—another visit would probably give us enough to organize.

On the 23, at Upper Placerville some interest was manifested and seven gave their names for a lodge. There are several places that I have visited that a little more work and time would give us lodges. The prospects for the temperance cause, and our order in El Dorado is very hopeful indeed.

Placerville Dec. 24th, 1881.

San Francisco, Dec. 26, 1881

Vallecito has been visited and revisited in behalf of the temperance work, but has always most strenuously resisted every attempt to organize in any form or under any banner. Fourteen years ago we visited that town and tried to procure a charter membership, but was baffled by the negative influence of a professing Christian. During our visit on that occasion swearing, fighting, shooting and murder actually were committed. On the following day about twenty men promised to unite, "if our Christian friend will". But our Christian friend would have nothing to do with it for various pretended reasons, all as flimsy as the following: "You often appoint chaplains, men who are unconverted." But the people are changing their opinions here, and some of them having some backbone in them, concluded to wait no longer for any leader. They therefore organized Golden Lodge with Bro. D. E. Booth as Lodge Deputy, Henry Kuhn W. C. T. and Mrs. Anderson W. V. T.

After the close of our first meeting the whisky influence succeeded in inducing five charter member to leave the ranks; and after the second meeting a professing Christian told us that altho we had given a good address he would have much rather heard us preach Christ. He then most positively refused to become a Good Templar. Thank God a few have have been found that will try to live Christ and fight Christ's enemy, the devil in the whisky saloon. May they have unbounded success!.

Douglas Flat is a small place between Vallecito and Murphys—about two miles from each—hence can only be a feeder to both. We had a decent audience and a good Sunday forenoon meeting, a few of our brethren and sisters being present from Murphys, where we had lectured the night before, and a report of which we postpone till next week.

Sheep Ranch gave two small meetings. The place. is rapidly running down, and of course the lodge suffers. But about ten whisky places are supported there in spite of the running down

At ElDorado a pleasant meeting was held and the officers installed; five new members were initiated, and the lodge in its reorganized form will go to work, pay $100 due for its hall, own the property and become permanent.

C. N. GOULDING.

I lectured in Oro Fino on the 8th, Crystal Creek on the 9th and 11th, and instituted Fort Jones Lodge with 38 charter members on the 10th—W. L. Rogers, L. Dept. This Lodge starts with very fine prospects. Unusual care was taken and observed in electing their officers, and I expect good results in the future. I lectured in Fort Jones four evenings. House crowded each evening. Found the lodge at Oro Fino fighting for existence. Clerk of of the School Board and the Champions being the contesting parties, but believe they will "hold the fort." On the 11th, 12th and 13fh lectured in Etna. Large audiences each evening, but as the sons and champions each have a division there it was difficult to establish a Lodge ; but influenoes are at work that may be felt in the future, in our favor. Lectured at Callahan's on the 14th and 15th. Obtained additional names for membership, and had time permitted on Friday evening should have had the pleasure of initiating them. As it was, we partook of a feast of good things, provided by the members of of the Lodge, and at 7:30 P. M. left for this place. Arrived at 7:30 A. M., twelve hours of the most excruciating torture, over thirty-three miles of the worst road that can possibly be imagined. Snow two feet deep on Scott Mountain, and mud any depth required. The old ancients had many forms of punishment, but it is questionable if they ever had any one, or all combined, that could compare with a ride by stage, at this season of the year, from Callahan's; and this is the feast that awaits me in this Trinity and in Shasta county. Should I survive this trip any first-class life insurance company will issue me a life insurance policy at reduced rates. I can sum up my labor in Siskiyou county as follows: Delivered 21 lectures, and to large audiences, for all which I am under many obligations to the Press and public and formed many pleasant acquaintances that will not soon be forgotten, being as it is the strong hold of the "Champions and Sons." I had them to contend with, I mean by that that it was impossible, and impracticable to institute lodges as might have been done under other circumstances, the same influences confront me here, and will be met with in Shasta County, there is no lack of Temperance sentiment in Siskiyou Co. the point is to turn "the tide" our way; this is being done gradually, but surely—"may the shadows of the "Siskiyouons" never grow less, is my sincere wish. I presented the claims of the Rescue and canvassed for it faithfully but for reasons and influences stated, it was all in vain. I am still "toiling on," and if my work could be supplemented, if some one of the eloquent Grand Lecturers now enjoying the mild and balmy breezes of Californias' Southern Clime, could be transplanted "as it were" up here it would be beneficial to them, and the cause, Bro. Webb for instance from his peculiar build and being "light of foot," could climb these hills and mountains like the Native Deer, and Bro. King comes from a country where they have "nine months winter and three months late in the fall" and is thoroughly inured and seasoned to "wintry blasts," as I think of these Brothers, and all of you how forcibly the words of the poet present themselves to my mind, "it might have been."

All these men of business in Stockton may be considered as friendly to temperance, sobriety and the general welfare of the community in which they live; and it is hoped the other readers of this paper in Stockton and San Joaquin county will keep this list posted up and remember them and call on them when they have any business to transact in their several lines. It is always cheapest and most profitable to expend your dollars with men whose business is a help and a benefit to the community, and who themselves are helpers and patrons of the moral and benevolent interests and institutions which are the best and surest aids to the financial welfare and progress of the country.

FROM OREGON.

HILLSBORO DEC, 13, 1881.—I have just returned from Dallas, County Seat of Polk Co, Circuit Court was in session there last week, which made things rather tropical for evil doers, especially venders of the ardent. Then at the close of Court on Saturday evening came Col. J. F. Long of Ky. Grand lecturer of the I. O. G. T. for the state, to fill his appointments for Saturday and evening and to pour oil of consolation into the wounded spirits of the court stricken offenders against the license law. His audience in the evening was fair, but on Sunday at Two P. M. the house, (M. E. Church,) was filled to overflowing by the best citizens of the place, including ministers of the Gospel, judges, lawyers, doctors and teachers besides many noted visitors from other sections of the state. The lecture was the best I ever heard and all I heard speak of it, said it was good; some never heard its equal, that it was grand, splendid, cant be excelled etc. One whiskey man said, "such argument cant be answered." The Col. has tact of winning the attention of his audience at the start and holds it till the close of the lecture, his illustrations are plain and forcible. His comparison of the Old Ship of Zion and The Temperance Boat, was beautiful, and when he related an incident of a suicide of a warm and intimate friend of his earlier years, caused by the Hellish Demon, strong drink many were moved to tears.

The Col. is the right man in the right place. Temperance friends, go and hear him; wake up from your lethargy and we can carry the state for prohibition four years hence.—"PROHIBITIONIST."

SUNDAY LAW.

ED. RESCUE:—The following extracts from the records of the Supreme court of the United States may be of some use to those engaged in the prosecution of those who violate the law by selling intoxicating liquors on Sunday, as well as to those law obeying citizens who take no active interest in enforcing such laws. Please publish: G. B.

Chief Justice Taney said: "If any state deems the retail and internal traffic in ardent spirits injurious to its citizens and calculated to produce idleness, vice or debauchery, I see nothing in the constitution of the United States to prevent it from regulating it or restraining the traffic or from prohibiting it altogether if it thinks proper, 5 Howard 577.

Justice McLean said: "A license to sell is a matter of police and revenue within the power of the state (Ibid 589) "If the foreign article be injurious to the health and morals of the community, a state may prohibit the sale of it. (Ibid 595) "No one can claim a license to retail spirits as a matter of right. (Ibid 596).

Justice Curton said: "If the state has the power of restraint by license to any extent, she may go to the length of prohibiting sales altogether. (Ibid 611.)

Justice Daniels says of imports when cleared of all duty and subject to the citizen, 'They are like all other property of the owner, and should be equally the subject of domestic regulation and taxation, whether owned by an importer or his vendor." (Ibid 614).

Justice Grier said: "It is not necessary to array the appalling statistics of misery, pauperism and crime which have their origin in the use and abuse of ardent spirits. The police power which is exclusively in the state, is competent to the correction of these great evils, and all measures of restraint or prohibition necessary to effect that purpose are within the scope of that authority. And if a loss of revenue should accrue to the United States, from a diminished consumption of ardent spirits, she will be a gainer a thousand fold in the health, wealth and happiness of the people. (Ibid 532.)

CHICO.

Bro. Rev. P. Powers of Chico, sends report of Rising Star Lodge which had already been set in type in the G. W. S. Dept. He also says, "Our membership is 32; we have captured every intemperate man of our own people but one. Butte County is suffering for a lecturer, and saying, come over into Macedonia and help us."

When we used to have only one lecturer, and could get no more for love or money, there were lodgesand individuals all over the State that asked or clamored or growled to have a lecturer sent to them. And now when there are six constant and many more occasional and volunteer lecturers, it is a cheerful sign to note that there are more demands to "come over and help us," than there used to be when all the lecture force and eloquence was bottled up in one man.

It is to be hoped Butte County may be visited in good time, and till then and after then, the RESCUE will take any amount of contracts to deliver 52 temperance lectures in Chico for $1.25; not for each, but $1.25 for 52 lectures. Bro. King, who gets a RESCUE club in every lodge he organizes, reports the most satisfactory results as already apparent.

INDIAN GULCH, Cal. DEC. 21, 1881.

ED. RESCUE:—Cathey's Valley Lodge, I. O. G. T. had a very pleasant evening's entertainment Dec. 7 the first anniversary of the organization of the Lodge. It was an open lodge meeting, and a goodly company assembled with us rejoicing at the successful year's work, and the evening was pleasantly and profitably spent. Last Saturday evening was the occasion of another notable episode. Bro. J. W. Rowland, and our Templar, Sister Lizzie Harless were united in marriage by Rev. R. A. Sawrie, during recess in the Lodge room. Next Saturday evening we expect to have a Christmas tree at our schoolhouse, and from the preparations going on we can certainly anticipate a pleasant time.

The prospects for our Lodge are bright and cheering, and we feel encouraged to work on in aiding our fellow-men to "shun the cruel cup."

J. B. WILKINSON.

Anybody might have prophesied good luck was coming to that Lodge; it starts with a good club for THE RESCUE, and is getting well posted on the principles and progress of the temperance reform.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.—At Drain, Oregon, Dec. 9, 1881, Bro. H. A. Wallace, Lodge Deputy of Pass Creek Lodge No. 332, a loyal, worthy member in good standing, and a Good Templar in deed and in heart. The lodge passed appropriate resolutions to the memory of our dear and beloved brother. Peace to his ashes.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 24, 1881.

A Band of Hope was organized in this city last Saturday, with 25 charter members. Merrill Lodge, I. O. G. T., has a membership of nearly 300 strong; it to a great extent redeems the fair name of this place, and proves to the world that we are not all Law breakers under command of King Alcohol. The respectable element here are appalled at the bold and defiant atitude of the rum-sellers; they have spat on the face of our law, and have openly declared that they will not obey its mandates by closing their saloons on the Sabbath. They are in a state of open rebellion and insurrection, and in the memorable words of Boss Tweed they exclaim "what are you going to do about it?" The insurrectionists are holding public or secret meetings every Sabbath. The defenders of law and order are not sleeping; they too are holding public meetings, and have mutually pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor, that the laws of our land must and shall be obeyed. Respectfully.

SAMUEL MCCURDY.

TO A MODERATE DRINKER.

No, not even the mildest of California wines will prove useful. Wine is no more healthful than alcohol diluted in water. Suppose wine contains seven per cent of alcohol—and that surely would be light enough—it is no more healthful than water with 7 percent of alcohol in it. The wine is practically just that, with a little coloring matter added. Often very often there is an addition of poisonous adulterating stuff. There is no doubt, as you suggest, that the wine is better than lager beer. This is a wretched stuff, puffing a man out and making his brain stupid. There is a kind of drink known as water which I advise you to try. It may taste strange at first, but you will find it the best drink when you are sick or well, when you are cold; indeed under all possible circumstances.—Dio Lewis.

And people are foolish enough to blame the down cellar city vineyard men for making wine out of turnip juice and rotten apples, sweepings of canneries, etc. What a folly it is to talk abusively of using rotten things to make wine and beer and cider of. To make the best and choicest genuine fermented wine of any kind, every grape must be rotted to the last degree of filthiness so that the dirtiest slops of the swiltub are no more rotten and filthy and unwholesome than the very choicest of the choice products of the prostituted grape, even that used at the communion. It dont appear nearly so wicked to make drunkard's swill out of already rotten things as it is to destroy and rot good wholesome grapes for that purpose. Let us do even justice to everybody. Fermented wine is the drink of harlotry and gluttony and debauchery and vicious savage crime, and the filthier its source, the more appropriate it is for all its uses; and the quality of all is exactly alike; alcohol and water.

SOUND BUSINESS PRINCIPLES.

"Concerning the new Sunday law we say it is not fanaticism' it is sound business principle. The retail liquor dealer represents the business of a debaucher; a business which instigates crime, a business which is inimical to the welfare of society and a business which bears heavily upon the pockets of tax payers. No one can deny that such is the exact nature of the business which insists upon a discrimination in its favor, embodying the addition of a day more in which to inflict physical and moral injury upon men. On some election days all the liquor saloons are required to be closed. Why? because there are a large number of men not at work on those days and who will ply themselves with liquor until they have no longer control of their wits. Then they are prepared to commit crime. For the same reason the liquor saloons should be hermetically sealed Sunday. There are fewer men at work Sunday than at any other day. And if several hundred saloons are open for business, they are likely to do business with a vengeance in their own peculiar and detrimental style. Liquor dealing is a very peculiar and confessedly dangerous business, and it should be dealt with in a very peculiar way—just like gunpowder for instance, which is carefully stored and locked up at isolated points, for reasons of public safety. It has come to be the rule that the bloodiest crimes of the week are committed on Sunday, and almost every one of them has its origin in Sunday drinking with resultant quarreling and violence either in the saloons or near them. There is certainly abundant reason why the mended Sunday law should be enforced."—Louisville Courier Journal.

THE BEST RESTORATIVES.

One of the first questions that is asked by all sorts of people when it is proposed to drop alcoholic liquors from medicines is, "What can we use in their place?" I thot it would be interesting to know what those English doctors say who are making such progress in temperance, and I find such facts as the following:

An English clergyman got very tired on Sunday evening, so he asked his doctor whether he had not better take a glass of wine to put him right. "No, by no means," was the reply; "go to bed." Not all doctors make so sensible a reply, and perhaps this one took his cue from Dr. Richardson. This is what he says; "Rest, however short it may be, is the best of all restoratives. Five minutes' rest is worth a glass of the best wine in its direct action, and it is good every way. After rest, food and sleep."

When questioned what he did after a long walk, or other physical task, he replied, "I rest by sitting still, or by reclining at length if that be possible. Then I take a light meal if that be at hand, or a draught of milk if solid food is not ready; or a dish of oatmeal or wheatmeal and milk if that can be secured. Afterwards I take a warm bath when that is at hand, and as soon as I can I go to bed. These are all natural plans, simple as the drinking of any stimulant, and safe as nature herself.

Remember all this is from an old-school physician who has been for years familiar with the taste of wine, and with its social and medicinal use, but who has given them up from common sense reasons; that is, from a knowledge of the nature of alcohol, and close observance of its effects upon others.—Julia Colman to the Weekly Witness.

Well, the poor boy came into this world with a weak body, for his mother was troubled with much household care and labor when she bore him, and his father, tho a church member in good standing, was an inordinate tobacco chewer and kept his strength bolstered up thru the stimulus of the weed. So long as the boy ran about loose with other children, and played in the sand with bare feet, he was tolerably healthy. But when sent to school he pined. At the boarding school he was counted a good scholar and made great progress in memorizing. At eighteen he was tall, "spindling" and slightly stooping, always complaining, eating according to custom whatever was set before him, working and studying directly after eating and complaining of a weak stomach. So he went on in life till the age of twenty five. Then he married, was always in poor health and in frequent consultation with doctors. First, doctors at home; next, doctors abroad; then, special doctors; now, regulation doctors, with reputations and diplomas, and then in despair applying to outside doctors, herb doctors, bush doctors, botanic doctors and tramp doctors; doctors who said it was his liver, doctors who said it was his heart, doctors who said it was malaria, doctors who said he didnt make blood enough, doctors who starved him, doctors who stuffed him, doctors who chilled him in cold, wet blankets, doctors who parboiled him in medicated vapor baths, doctors who advised him to go North, doctors who advised him to go South, doctors who suggested springs, doctors who recommended mud baths, but never a doctor who told him that half the damage had been done before he came into the world and the other half thru his own ignorance and that of the authors of his being afterwards. But he died all right and the doctors then found out what ailed him, and they gave the complaint a Latin name, and its now raging round seeking whom it may devour.

EVENINGS AT HOME.

The long evenings which follow the short days, are made in some families the happiest of all happy times. The cares of the day are ended; the mother's resting time has come; the father has dropped all sorts of business worries and perplexities, and the whole family throw themselves with zest into the innocent pleasures of the home circle.

It is well for women of the household to remember that the pleasant evenings at home are strong antidotes to the practice of looking for enjoyment abroad, and seeking for pleasure in by and forbidden places; for relaxation and recreation will be indulged in somehow by most men, and happy are they who find in the home circle the diversion they need. A lively game, an interesting book read aloud or in musical families, a new song to be practiced, will furnish pastime that will make an evening pass pleasantly.

A little forethot during the day, a little pulling of wires that need not appear, will make the whole thing easy, and different ways and means may be provided for making the evening hours pass pleasantly, and the time to be looked forward to with pleasant anticipations. We visited once in a large family where it was the duty of each sister in turn to provide the evening's occupation; and there was a pleasant rivalry between them as to whose evening should be the most enjoyable. The brothers entered fully into the spirit of the simple home entertainments, and were as loth to be obliged to spend an evening away from home as their sisters and parents were to have them absent. Every one spoke of this family as an uncommonly united one, for each and every member showed a strong attachment for the home to which each one contributed so much of pleasure.—Signal.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

WE HAVE HEARD of President Arthur's New Years Reception at the White House. Not a word about wine on the occasion. It may be relied on that there was none. Were it otherwise, a grand "Te Diab. laudamus," would have been rung out from east to west and from north to south. Make a good mark for President Arthur for that.

BOSTON, and several towns in Massachusetts, have voted for license by small majorities, while other towns have voted against it by much larger majorities. The Boston Congregationalist will no doubt be gratifed at the result of the Boston and other license votes. If "alcohol is a food and wholesome, and its use is enjoined by Divine example and injunction," as that paper takes so much pains to preach, the maintenance of license is a Christian virtue whose triumph should be recorded with joyous applause. But Babylon may fall one of these days, no matter how supported.

OREGON.—During the week an official circular from the Ex.Committee of the Grand Lodge of California has been sent to the Worthy Vice-Templars of all the Lodges of California, asking their assistance in extending the circulation of the RESCUE. While they were being addressed and mailed from this office, the liberty was taken to enclose a "copy" to the Lodges of Oregon and Washington, where it goes unofficially, and without any authority at all. It is merely an indication of what is being done here, and as a hint that if any who receive it may choose, of their own free will and friendship, to go and do likewise, it will be thankfully appreciated.

SUBSCRIBERS this week: Maine, 1; San Diego, 1; San Francisco, 2; Woodland, 2; J. W. Webb, 6; W. Jones, Stockton, 5; Elk Creek, 1; Orwell, N. Y., 1; Willow Spring Lodge, 1; Trinity Center, 2; (Mrs. Stevens) Castroville, 8.

"AMERICA'S DISGRACE" is the heading under which the Chronicle gives the news of the Anti-Mormon movement in progress in Washington. The grogshops of San Francisco are a thousand times more disgrace to America than all the immoralities ever committed in Utah Territory.

FOUR honorary members of the League of Freedom were hanged last Friday for murder; one in N. J., one in New York and two in St. Louis. But there are a great many more of them who will be hanged before the year ends.

Bro. Oscar Smith sends a Brentwood club for RESCUE and says they hold the fort, no grogshop being allowed in the school district, and they have done all they could to enforce the Sunday law in adjoining districts with the hope of seeing a day of rest in seven adopted all over the state.

MONO COUNTY.—Bro. H. J. Bland, formerly of Mono Lodge, Colville, came into the RESCUE office last week with four other members of that distant lodge; Bros. W. L. Douglas, W. H. Chessall, A. D. Streeter and Dr. Marshall J. Roe, the latter an old acquaintance formerly of Vallejo. It is the first time such a large delegation from that lodge has been in San Francisco.

SANTA CRUZ, January 6.—Baldwinn of Boulder Creek convicted of violation of the Suday law, refused to pay his fine, and was arrested. A writ of habeas corpus has been issued in the Superior court. A hearing will be held on Wednesday. The city council to-day raised the liquor license from $15 a quarter to $60. The Chronicle calls that a gloomy outlook for cheap drinks.

JOSEPH LIVESEY, one of the old giant oaks of the temperance reform, one of the old pioneers of total abstinence, a few days ago issued his annual New years temperance tract. The old hero lives in Preston, England, and is in his 88th year. May he long be spared. His has been a grand life. He says in his recent address: "What a glorions thiug it would be if the people of England were all sober, perfectly sober, always sober."

OUR UNION, sets out in the New Year with an amended and improved program. Always full of interest it promises to be more interesting in future and it has a separate colum for five districts to be filled with matter of more particular reference to those localities. The price is only 75 cts. a year, 16 pages monthly. Every woman worker in the fields of temperance and christianity should avail herself of the privilege of frequent communion with the noble women apostles whose sayings and doings appear in every number of that paper.

THE AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE has been pounced upon by its creditors and the old company has been broken up. Some publishers are rejoicing over this defeat of a formidable rival, but the public has no ground of rejoicing in the matter. The Revolution Company has been a grandly useful institution. It has furnished the million with choice books of good and useful information at a price that made them accessible to the humblest purse. If the Company has failed to meet its pecuniary obligations or to fight off the pecuniary obstacles thrown in its way by plotting rivals, it has not failed to confer a lasting benefit upon the people of the United States. A new company has been formed from the wreck, called the Useful Knowledge Publishing House No. 26 Beekman street, New York city. They offer the library of U. K., 15 vols. octavo in cloth at $12; in half Russia $15. The receiver of the old company promises to fill former orders, or refund the money that has been sent, and it is hoped everything will be so arranged that the new company may be again afloat, and that all who have sent their money for books will have their confidence justified and restored.

I HAVE spoken of my judicial experience. Oh, could I gather into a single picture all the terrifying objects of these twelve years in the Quarter Sessions and Oyer and Terminer, worse than fabled Gorgon's head or Medusa's snakes, it would appall the sight and wring the nerves with fear. See—rags, squalor, bleared eyes, red faces, bloated features, disease, running sores, ghastly forms, dark treacherous looks, low-browed villainy, bold and defiant ruffianism, ignorant, rude and depraved women, and every varied form of vice and crime. At the bottom of this dreadful array of pollution, misery and sin, lay one great pervading cause—drunkenness. I can say with full assurance of truth that four-fifths of all the offenders punished in course of justice come directly or indirectly from intemperance—directly when offenses are committed under the influence of intoxicants; indirectly by those reduced to their low condition, and incited to crime by continued intemperance. I have seen the stabbed hearts of murdered victims brot to court to display the cut the drunken knife had made.—Judge Agnew, in Templars Record.

NOVA SCOTIA has a very good temperance paper, the Watchman. It is devoted to the general interests of temperance, but probably because the Sons are more numerous there than the I. O. G. T., the Watchman devotes a little more space to the doings of the former, but is by no means exclusive or invidious. The I. O. G. T. have now started a monthly organ called the Good Templar. If Nova Scotia can or will support six good temperance papers or twelve, it were best to have that many; but while the one was struggling for existence, would it not have been more for the Good of the Cause to have centralized all the temperance support upon that one and made it a success and a power, than to divide, and perhaps produce the result of having no paper at all? Every temperance paper should be one that all classes and sects of real temperance people can feel equally interested in supporting and deriving their support from. It is a mistaken idea wherever it prevails, that subscribing for a temperance paper is conferring a favor that is not more than fully returned.

THE GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY CO. OF CANADA lately issued its eighth annual temperance circular to all its men employed on the road. It is a very wholesome document, filled with arguments and admonitions against the use of all intoxicating drinks, declares them entirely unnecessary and useless, and the duty of railroad men in charge of lives and property to be entire abstainers. Mr. Spicer, the superintendent, deserves great credit for his long continued efforts. The circular ends with the quotation "wine is a mocker" etc. and a pledge which the employed is urged to sign.

This benign conduct of a railroad company stands out in bold contrast to that of the Central Pacific company of this coast, who are possessed of an enormous store of unused and to them useless millions, beside their enormous income from their roads and lands—yet for the paltry miserable bribe offered them by a miserable gang of lazy cut throats and poisoners they dot their whole line of road and all their ferry boats with poison dens to tempt their employees to lose their heads and wreck their trains and kill their passengers and to rob and curse and pauperize the public who support the railroad. The man of a few hundred or a few thousand dollars who lets his property for brothels and rum dens can plead the poor excuse of tempting avarice, but the millionaire who lets and runs thief dens can only plead the temptation to commit wanton crime for the love of it.

"WHY WILL YE DIE?"

Life hath full many a mystery,
Beyond the reach of human ken,
Beyond the power of human thot.
Tho pondered o'er and o'er again;
But is there one more wholly sad,
More wholly void of hope or joy
Than that which gives the wine cup power
To lure, debase, enthrall, destroy?

We see the mystery every day,
We know not how, we know not why
Nor whence, that that same treacherous voice
Which said, "Thou shalt not surely die,"
As at the first should still have power
To cheat the soul with poisoned breath,
And lure its wretched victims on
To crimson shame and pallid death.

Walking where others walked and fell,
They fall, then rise to fall again,
How can they choose such paths to tread?
How could they, did they see the end?
They see it not—believe it not—
Deluded by a fatal spell—
And at the last can only say:
"The tempter whispered and I fell!"

I would not hear that other voice;
I held as foe who was my friend;
They warned in vain; my chosen way
I took, and now behold the end!
O, mystery of misguided youth—
Unfathomed thot, unfathomed deed—
That will not heed the voice of truth,
Nor e'en the wail of ruin heed!

—By B. L Baxter, in the Lever.

WHAT THE DOCTORS SAY ABOUT INTOXICATING DRINKS.

COMPILED BY REV. A. SIMS.

Tetotalers tell us that 60,000 die thru drink every year, but Dr. Richardson says that if drink was not known it would save us 230,000.

Dr. Carpenter says out of 1,500 inquests there are more than half thru drink.

Dr. Grinrod says the greatest amount of injury to the system is caused by moderate drinking.

Dr. Macintosh says that men shorten their lives by taking drink moderately.

Dr. Coupland says that moderate drinking is an injury to the system.

The Register-General of Canada says that five saloon keepers die to two of any other class of men.

Dr. Trotter says that drink in any form is injurious.

Dr. Conquest says that we cannot take it in any way without mischief.

Dr. Buchan says that malt liquors render the blood unfit for circulation.

Dr. Goodwin says that he was called to see a man said to be mad. He found him nearly dead with delirium produced by drinking.

Dr. Gregor says, I never got a patient from water drinking, but I have got thousands by strong drink.

Another doctor says that out of ten young men that take one glass of grog daily, eight out of the ten will shorten their lives twelve or fourteen years.

Dr. James says moderate drinking undermines the constitution without the suspicion of the victim till reformation is hopeless in many cases.

Dr. Garnett says a moderate quantity taken with food will blast the strongest constitution.

Dr. Lees says moderate drinking debilitates the digestive organs.

Dr Brewster says it injures the soul and the body.

Dr. Johnson says the beer-bibber and the dram-drinker are both bringing on disease.

Plutarch says: "One drunkard begets another.

Howe: "Half the idiots are the offspring of intemperate parents.

Brown: "Mental disease is entailed on the drunkard's family; drink cravers have to thank their parents for the unfortunate propensity."

Darwin confirms all this; and there is no variation in the opinions given. Alcohol irritates and inflames the mucous membrane of the stomach; the other organs in the body become deranged, the liver is enlarged or shriveled up, which prevents the proper assimilation of food. It (alcohol) produces an unnatural stimulation of the brain. This poison produces certain diseases which are not amenable to treatment; it increases the rate of mortality, and largely contributes to insanity, while three-fourths of the criminals and the paupers are made such by the "poison."—Delaware Signal.

A temperance "Mission" has been held recently in Nottingham England which was a campaign carefully pre-arranged by the leading temperance societies and running eight days (Dec. 3 to 10th) with most gratifying success. The Christian Commonwealth says of it, "six great public meetings were held in the Mechanics Hall, addressed by a large number of speakers, among whom were Dr. B. W. Richardson, Mrs. G. S. Reaney (the lady apostle of the Band of Hope), two members of Parliament, the Queens Chaplain, J. W. Kirton, author of "Buy your own Cherries," and Weston, the cultured pedestrian. There were sermons in various churches by celebrated Reverend advocates of temperance, beside 60 other meetings in chapels, schoolrooms, board schools, factories, warehouses etc. in which 100 speakers were engaged and as many as 30,000 were listeners at more or less of the meetings. The Commonwealth continues:

"We scarcely know the exact amount of influence exerted upon people's minds by getting them to sign the pledge. We will only state that nearly two thousand persons have taken the pledge during the week's Mission, while double that number have tied a small piece of silver cord—the distinctive badge of the Mission—in their button holes. But better than mere pledge-signing is the far-reaching influences which have been brot into operation by the gigantic efforts of the past week. The five hundred ladies, for instance, who listened on Wednesday, the 7th, to the impassioned pleadings of Mrs. Reaney and the motherly counsel of Mrs. Hind Smith, will not soon forget the influence and teaching of that meeting; while the large number of local medical gentlemen who held conference with Dr. Richardson on Thursday must of necessity be benefitted by hearing the views of such an able and enlightened authority.

Very interesting too were some of the meetings conducted in the large factories and warehouses of the town. At Messrs. M. Jacoby and Co.'s warehouse in Stony Street, where upwards of five hundred employes had assembled, fifty-eight came forward and signed the pledge; while at Messrs. Lamb and Lees, W. Dixon and Co., Midland Hosiery Co., and other places, similar results were realized. And last, but not least, the tetotalers have great cause to congratulate themselves upon the fact that Mr. H. S. Cropper, ex-sheriff of Nottingham, has at length resolved to become a pledged abstainer, and better still, the work-people, amounting to about four hundred, employed by the firm of which Mr. Cropper is a partner have formed a total abstinence society in connection with the works.

There was a tone of triumph in the great closing meeting, numbering about two thousand persons, in the Mechanics' Hall, on Saturday, the 10th inst., which, if we mistake not, will soon be echoed thru the length and bredth of these islands, and which will be calculated to strike dismay into the hearts of the traffickers in strong drink! M."

Those who desire the triumph of temperance should read the foregoing and carefully think it over. There seems no reason why 200 of just such Missions should not be held in the United States in 1882 attended with equal or grander results. The plan adopted by our friends in England is evidently a most excellent one.

REJECTING AND NEGLECTING THE RIGHT.

It is of late years becoming common for men of all parties and all grades of temperance men to say: "You cannot stop intemperance or the liquor traffic until you get at the fountain head." The manufacture and importation must be stopped." "So long as the manufacture and traffic therein is allowed and sustained by the general government little can be done," etc.

These ideas are correct. The truth has been well stated thousands of times; indeed, these ideas constitute the basis of the Prohibition Reform Party, and yet men are slow to accept what they have previously admitted to be a necessity.

The Jews did not accept Christ, altho they had long prophesied his coming and always been taught to expect him.

And why did they, who considered themselves God's own people, reject him? Largely because he did not come in their way. He was not heralded by their leaders; he was not of their aristocracy; instead of becoming to them a stepping stone to power they were exhorted to humble themselves and bear fruit.

He taught right-doing, righteous living, rather than professing and making clean the outside. In short, he came in God's way, and that happened to be contrary to their expectations.

The Prohibition Reform Party has been founded on the very principles and reforms that nearly all temperance men have admitted, for years, to be right; and yet all are not ready to embrace it. It is not popular; it is not heralded by the leaders of the people; it will not contribute to the success of other parties; in short, it involves sacrifices, breaking of party ties, it declares so plainly "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon" that men turn away and say, "We are not quite ready." Many, like the young man who was told, "Yet one thing thou lackest," turned sorrowfully away intending to wait for a more convenient season.

In the days of slavery thousands professed to oppose it, but they could not leave the Whig or Democratic party. They hoped against hope and gradually saw the impossibility of the work being accomplished in their way.

They began to see that the seven thousand of 1840 were right—one by one and two by two they broke their party ties and united with those they had regarded as fanatics and impracticables.

The clouds slowly began to lift. Hope that in the darkest hour had not perished in the hearts of Garrison and Lundy, cheered Wilson the shoemaker, Greeley the compositor, Chase the farmer boy, Lincoln the store clerk, and their humble co-laborers.

It was an irrepressible conflict. God was with the right. Slavery, which might have been ended peacefully by ballot and remuneration, had the old parties adopted the issue, finally went down in blood.

It is said, "History repeats itself." The rum power must be overthrown or the nation is doomed.

It is for the voters to decide; they have the power at every national election to say live or die.

Whatever the mouth may profess, the ballot tells the story. The breaking of old party ties is the great obstacle to prohibition growth and success.

God grant that we may all do our whole duty before it is too late.—Prohibitionist.

GOV. ST. JOHN.

The next president of the United States, John P. St. John, now governor of Kansas, is a native of Indiana. He was born in Brookville, Ind., Feb. 25, 1833. Like Garfield he has had a various life. He has been a miner, a woodchopper, and a steamboat man in California; has been a voyager to South America, Mexico and the Sandwich Islands; was in Indian wars in 1852–3, and amid these vicissitudes of life studied law. He was a soldier in the great rebellion, and rose from the ranks to a Lieutenant Colonelcy. Since the close of the rebellion he has given himself to the practice of law till elevated to the gubernatorial office.

As a temperance worker he has no superior and few equals. He will be a safe man to send to the White House when President Arthur has completed the term of office upon which he has just entered. Two years from this passing present the American people will be ripe and ready for such a movement.

To Republicans, Democrats and Nationals we send greeting, and advise them that a staunch prohibitionist Governor St. John is to be the chief magistrate of the nation by a lawful election in 1884.—Advance.

The Nationalist of Manhattan, Kansas, fulfils the conditions of a patriotic, public spirited, wholesome, honest family newspaper. It is an earnest outspoken advocate of prohibition and of so amending the law without delay that it may at once and forever kill the great mischief breeder of the State. It proposes an extra legislative session to make amendments to the following effect.

1. To make the possession of saloon paraphernalia prima facie evidence that the business is carried on.
2. To keep every drunk in custody until sober and till he makes oath as to where he got his liquor and gives bonds to testify in court etc.
3. A search and seizure clause.
4. Authority for appointment by the governor of officers to enforce the State law where the regular officers do not.
5. Compelling prosecuting attorneys to commence suit against perjurers.
6. Making the possession of a U. S. Revenue permit by one having no permit from the state, conclusive evidence of violation of the State law.
7. Holding building and owner responsible for costs and fines of liquor sold therein.

Oh for such papers to be the rule in California or even a few such as exceptions.

BATTLE HYMN OF THE CRUSADE.

BY MRS. EMILY J. BUGBEE.

On the plains for bloodless battle, they are gathering true and strong,
All the hero-hearted women, who have wept in silence long;
At the terrible oncoming of this raven-winged wrong.
Now God is leading on.

CHORUS:—Glory, Glory, Hallelujah, &c.

They have rallied forth to conquer, and will never beat retreat,
While the banner of the rum-fiend, is still flaunted on the street,
And his hellish snares are waiting, for the all unwary feet,
For God will lead them on.

They will pierce the bending heavens, with united prayers and cries,
Till the strong holds shall be shaken, and the foe defeated lies,
Who has slain his many thousands, of the strong ones and the wise,
For God will lead them on.

They have looked to law's enforcement, for the help that never came,
Now, God hath surely kindled, in their hearts undying flame,
And relying on His Spirit, they shall conquer in His name,
For he is leading on.

For the future of their dear ones, for their country's power and pride,
Onward moved by bitter memories of the past, whose pains abide,
They are working, weeping, praying, in their weakness side by side,
For God is leading on.

Be still oh tongue of caviler, be strong oh heart of fear,
See you not the cloudy pillar, that is ever hovering near,
Know you not an ear is open, that will not refuse to hear,
For God is leading on.

Oh the beauty and the blessing, when the curse is swept away,
That has turned to midnight darkness, so many a golden day,
And is throwing weary shadows over many a life-long way,
For Christ is coming near.

All the desert and the wilderness, shall blossom with the flowers,
Of industry and plenty, in this blessed land of ours,
And the grace of God unstinted, shall come down in gentle showers,
For Heaven will be begun.

CAL. W. C. T. U.

The second annual report of the W. C. T. U. of Cal. has been received, a neatly-printed pamphlet of 50 pages. The report of the President arraigns the villainous traffic in drunkenness, in its relations to taxation, to destruction of property, to crime; its hostility to health and the public welfare, its enmity to the home, to morals etc.

To resist the ever encroaching foe, organization is recommended, and a more general and vigorous enlightenment of the people upon the nature and effects of the insidious poison which is devastating the land. Dr. Richardson's lesson book is proposed as a text book in the schools. The members of the Union are requested to use their influence thru the press, and upon the doctors, ministers, teachers and superintendents of schools to discountenance and denounce the use of all intoxicants in the various opportunities that may be afforded them.

The report of the Secretary, Mrs. Congdon, recounts the work of the year, action to prevent the sale of liquor near the University, the school essay enterprise, public meetings held etc.; acknowledges much generous and timely substantial assistance from Dr. R. H. McDonald in a variety of directions.

It advises new efforts in forming Unions and enforcing existing ones; work in the Sabbath and public schools to save the young from the pernicious habits which are so constantly paraded before them by their seniors.

It does not believe Christ ever blessed the cup of inebriation, but commends a careful study of the important matter of proper communion wine, and hopes to see the Sunday law triumphantly sustained.

In an article contributed by a member, there appears (page 28) an inaccuracy, probably of the printer. The retail sales of liquor for the year ending June 30, 1881 are set at 160 million dollars in place of about 600 million. And California's share of this little bill, set at 8 million must be from 35 to 45 millions. The lower figures would be appalling enough to call forth all our energies. The higher and truer ones indicate a rapid march to chaos in finance, morals, government and religion, if the source of all our evil is not speedily removed.

It is beginning to appear to some intellects which a very hard and thick covering has hitherto protected from sunstroke and sunlight and new theories, that the womanhood of America is going to be soon a very important factor in American politics; it has been educated in the public schools and in the homes of the land; it has quite an equal interest with the other sex in every question that affects the welfare of the State and Nation; and it has an equal intelligence as to how those questions should be dealt with, and a much greater honesty of purpose in settling them properly. There is none of this last paragraph in the report but it merely prefaces a hope that the W. C. T. U. of this State may be not a whit behind their more experienced and practiced Sisters in the Eastern States,and may be ever guided by a spirit of wisdom in their councils and of consecration to this great interest of humanity, that their valiant help may materially hasten the victory over the great enemy of our race and age.

HOME PROTECTION PLATFORM.

PLATFORM.

1. The object for which they are working is the removal of intemperance and the evil resulting therefrom.

2. The basis of their work is the Christian system of philanthropy. The temperance work is the ripening of Christianity. The Christian, method of building up character by appeals to and education of the higher nature of the individual, and the removal of temptation by law is the only one which promises permanent success.

3. The work of all organizations based upon cardinal principles of total abstinence and prohibition contributes to final success, and there should be no antagonism between them. The spirit which seeks to destroy and uproot one form of organization by another, or to disparage one class of tried workers in the interest of another should be emphatically condemd.

4. Each organization should work to hold all its present positions, and gain new ones wherever it can do so without injuring other forms of organization, and these various organizations, in order to secure greater harmony in plans and methods of work, should at once combine in State and county alliances.

5. Lecturers who travel over the country without the endorsement of State organizations in the State in which they are working should not be encouraged. All lecturers should be required to have the endorsement of a State organization in the state where they are working.

6. Prohibition must include all alcoholic liquors. Laws favoring beer and wines are drawn in the interests of drunkard-making, and should be opposed as favoring dangerous heresies.

7. Concise and simple prohibitory laws,which prohibit the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages; place the sale of such liquors for medical and mechanical and scientific purposes in the hands of parties who will not have a financial interest to violate the law: make liquor kept for illegitimate purposes contraband, and provide for search, seizure and trial of the same; provide for the appointment of special officers by the governor to enforce the law in districts where the local officers fail to do so—these are the only laws which are acceptable to the temperance people, and for which they will be responsible.

8. The temperance people, while law abiding citizens, favoring and assisting the enforcement of all laws in the statute books until repealed, emphatically refuse to be responsible for enforcement of liquor laws involving the pernicious principle of license, the enactment of which they oppose.

9. The use of alcoholic wine in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is not warranted by scripture, and its use for the purpose should be most emphatically condemd.

10. The union of the best element of the North and South upon the temperance reform is a happy omen of the destruction of that sectionalism which is so dangerous to the welfare of our country, and which is the cause of bitterness, wrangling and corruption.

11. A political party whose platform is based on constitutional and statutory prohibition of the manufacture and sale of alcoholic beverages in the state and nation, is a necessity; and to give those who suffer most from the drink curse power to protect themselves, their homes and their loved ones, the complete enfranchisement of women should be worked for and welcomd.

12. The temperance people of the several states should call conventions for the purpose of organizing in every state a home protection party upon the basis of article 11 in this plan.

13 We hereby authorize the officers of this convocation to carry out the provisions of the foregoing article by correspondence with prohibition leaders and the calling of National State and Legislative Home Protection Conventions.

14. While working to advance these principles and achieve victory, personal effort to reclaim the drunkard by all efforts known to enlightened civilization must be kept ever in the front.

Miss Frances E. Willard, Evanston, Ill., Rev. A. J. Jutkins, Lexington, Ky., and Hon. John B. Finch, Lincoln, Neb., were made a special committee to carry out the 13th plank in the platform.

Resolved, That the officers of the Convocation be a committee empowered to call, if they deem necessary, a National Convention to carry out the plan of work just adopted.—Lake Bluff Leaflet.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

The question now agitating the public mind in some of our States is whether women shall be allowed to vote. Especially is this a live question in Indiana; the legislature of that state having at its last session adopted a joint resolution in favor of a constitutional amendment, conferring the right of suffrage on women of the age of twenty-one years, and otherwise qualified under the law to vote. If the next legislature shall approve the resolution of its predecessor, the matter will be submitted to the people for ratification or rejection at the ballot-box.

The Indianapolis Times of the 9th, in a bold leader, announces itself in favor of conferring the right to vote, upon all women qualified by law to vote. Indiana does not stand alone in the agitation of this question, and in a few years woman suffrage will be one of the livest of live issues.—World.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Dec. 1 1881.

TO THE LOCAL W. C. T. UNIONS:—I forward you a few leaflets and urge yonr special attention to them. The great movement in the Northwest for unity and organization, which centres in the "Lake Bluff Convocation, furnishes for you a most important and profitable field of activity, entirely in harmony with the relations to the work and to society. The conviction is deepening every day that organization is the necessity of the hour. Many are organizing schemes of their own. These seem for the moment embarrassing, but they are springs which will eventually find a way to the great river of a temperance party.

Please study carefully Miss Willard's suggestions. They point to organization in each town and ward, and you can aid in this most important work. Pick out the best man you know to lead. Go to him in the spirit and with the authority of Deborah. Secure a meeting of the reliable unfaltering temperance men, and an organization of a "club" or "league" or "alliance." The thing is important, not the name. (The plan of R. W. Nelson of the National Liberator, 106 Franklin Street, Chicago, is good.) Then recruit for the club. Keep the officers stirred up. The men, even the best of them need steady pushing for some time. Make them understand that it is folly to talk about the inexpediency of "making temperance a political question." The question whether a brewer's Congress shall dictate under what law we shall live, is in politics, and has been since 1862. The best organized and most compact political party in the country to-day, is the Alcohol Party. It has $1,000,000,000 of invested capital, 200,000 club rooms open every day in the year, and its purpose is to maintain the dram shop in every community. These are facts the people want to understand, and a woman can tell them as well as a man. Let us organize our company; in what regiment or Brigade it will at last fight, will be determined hereafter. Yours, A. J. JUTKINS.

MISS F. E. WILLARD mentions that the Rev. C. D. Barrows of Salem, Mass. has been called to preach in San Francisco. He gave a grand lecture quite recently at Portland, Me., and Mrs. Stevens the president of the W. C. T. U. of Maine thinks he will be a valuable help to the ladies of the Cal. W. C. T. U. Mr. Barrows should receive a cordial welcome and it is hoped much benefit will be derived from his assistance in the cause.

DEGREE TEMPLARS

Mrs. C. E. McBeth, for Deg. T. No. 6, Greenville.

DELINQUENT LODGES.—The following lodges have so far failed or neglected to fill the Quarterly Returns report for the term ending Oct. 31st last, and under rule cannot receive the pass word for the next incoming quarter until the report is forwarded and received at the office of the G. W. S.:

Nos. 7, 100, 101, 105, 106, 118, 126, 133, 135, 142, 146, 151, 153, 158, 159, 161, 162, 173, 202, 205, 226, 227, 240, 273, 282, 287, 292, 306, 308, 320, 346, 380, 383, 386, 394, 395, 407, 408, 420, 426, 436, 437, 439, 447, 449, 453, 454, 466. In each case, a personal circular was addressed ten days ago, to the Lodge Deputy of the lodge, calling attention to the omission. Information as to the condition of any of the following lodges, is solicited by the G. W. S. from any source. In many of the cases it is known to be simply a matter of carelessness that the reports have not long since been filed.

FACTS FROM THE RETURNS.—The two lodges reporting the largest membership for the last quarter were Merrill Lodge, No. 209, having 263 members, and San Luis Obispo Lodge, No. 444, reporting 234. There were twenty-two lodges reporting over 100 members each, the aggregate being 3,171, or an average of 144 members to each of the lodges. The lodge reporting the smallest membership is Cordua, No. 141, of Yuba county, which gallantly holds the fort with 10 members. So that the range of membership in lodges is from 10 to 263. The average membership per lodge is 50. To date, exactly three hundred lodges have filed quarterly returns; the delinquents number 48, and are elsewhere noted.

PERSONALS.—The Grand Lodge office received a pleasant call during the week from the G. W. C. T., Bro. Robt. Thompson, of San Francisco; also from Grand Lecturer Hugh R. Hughes and his brother, Bro. W. W. Hughes; also from Bro. W. H. Chessall and W. S. Douglas of Chapel Lodge, No. 191, Coleville, Mono county; also from Bro. J. J. Duckworth, of Del Monte Lodge, No. 357, Monterey, and some others whose names were not noted at the time, and cannot now be recalled.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens delivered 14 lectures, traveled 150 miles, addressed audiences composed of 264 children and 2210 adults; a total of 2,474 persons. Collections, $121.80, Charter fees, $30. Total receipts $151.80, expenses $51.30.

Col. C. N. Goulding delivered 22 lectures, traveled 275 miles, addressed audiences composed of 442 children and 2,105 adults, a total of 2,547 persons. Collections, $114.20; Charter fees, $15. Total receipts, $129.20; expenses, $97.90.

Elder J. W. Webb delivered 24 lectures, traveled 234 miles, addressed audiences composed of 951 children and 1,871 adults, a total of 2,822 persons. Collections, $50.40, expenses, $31.20.

Hugh R. Hughes delivered 25 lectures, traveled 394 miles, addressed audiences composed of 342 children and 1,083 adults, a total of 1,425 persons. Collections, $39.25, Charter fees, $45. Total, $84.25, expenses, $93.20.

Rev. W. C. King was in the field and charged for but 20 days services during the month of December. He delivered during that time 13 lectures, addressed audiences composed of 170 children and 800 adults. a total of 970 persons. He traveled 394 miles. Collections, $29.40, Charter fees, $45. Total receipts, $74.40, expenses, $43.45.

Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, up to Monday afternoon, 9th inst., had not been heard from. No report.

The five lecturers named organized nine new lodges, traveled 1,447 miles, addressed audiences composed of 2,169 children and 8,069 adults, or a total of 10,238 persons. Received in collections, $355.05; Charter fees, $135. Total, $490.05, and expended $317.05

CHARTERS TO NEW LODGES. The new lodges organized at Fort Jones, Spanish Dry Diggings, Frazier Valley, Lathrop, Rockford, Vallecito, Marshall, Greenwood and Saratoga have not as yet been supplied with charters, and cannot be until a new supply is received from the R. W. G. L. Three weeks ago 25 charter plates were forwarded to the G. W. C. T., for his signature. He reports having signed and immediately returned them by mail to the G. W. S. office, where they have not been received up to date. They have probably gone to Washington to look up the Star route cases, and may return after their wanderings. Meanwhile a new supply has been ordered from the R. W. G. L: as above indicated, and as soon as received the lodges at the points named will be supplied therewith.

NEW LODGES.—During the month of December 12 new lodges were organized, three each by Bros. W. C. King and Hugh R Hughes, two each by Sr. F. P. Stevens and William Crowhurst, and one each by Bros. C. N. Goulding and F. J. Culver. The whole number of new lodges instituted since the commencement of the current fiscal year, or during the first three months thereof being 31.

KEEP AGITATION ALIVE.

Our great ultimate aim is to banish drunkenness. To work well we must work intelligently. Cause and effect are as much involved in our work, as in raising a crop of wheat or corn. No one expects a good crop without good tillage and seasonable rains. The proper means produce a bountiful harvest with the farmer and this is no less true with the moral reformer.

Intemperance being considered immoral, those who are at work to prevent it are called moral reforers. Strange as it may seem, while all will admit that getting drunk is an immoral act, yet great numbers do not think that doing that which causes men to get drunk is at all immoral. We must agitate until it is seen and felt that those who encourage by their example an evil, are committing thereby an immoral act.

So long as moderate drinking is considered harmless, there can be no end of drunkenness, for drunkenness grows out of the moderate drinking. As long as the cause exists, the effect must follow. We must agitate and keep agitating, until it shall be well understood that every moderate drinker is a supporter of immorality. The enormity of a wrong is shown by its results. That which results in the greatest injury is the greatest sin. Weld all else of evil into one solid mass, and compare it, when thus combined, with the evils arising from the use of intoxicants; you then have but a mole hill to stand beside the mountain; and drinking prepares a man to break the entire decalogue.

It is the parent of all the other vices. Were it not for drinking, few other sins would be committed. He who ignores our drinking customs, and undertakes to preach righteousness, wastes his breath upon trifles.

The quickest way to banish the other sins is to banish drunkenness, for these other sins arise mainly from that. Do you wish to be free from profanity? Stop drunkenness which causes it, at least, most of it. Do you wish to stop quarreling? Stop drunkenness which causes nine tenths of it, and your work is quite nearly done. Do you wish to banish immorality? Banish the use of intoxicants and the great bulk goes as the morning dew. Do you wish to economize that you may have the means to support the church and school? Banish intoxicants and you have saved more than the people now spend for food and clothing combined, Keep these facts before the people, teach them to our young, and impress them upon the old. Thousands know our teachings are correct, who have not the courage to declare their belief to the world.

By and by, when the multitude arise and throw off this yoke of oppression, they will come out openly and speak their minds and act in accordance with their convictions. Our agitation is not lost in the mean time. It is preparing the way for a final declaration of Independence. This agitation must be kept up by the many, not left to the few. We have eighteen thousand in our own ranks alone. Let there be no drones. But this encouraging number is not all. There are many good workers on the outside ready to do battle for sobriety. We are fighting the great battle of our age; let us be valiant soldiers. If we are diligent and faithful, we shall win the victory and an everlasting pension besides.

During the month of December Bro. Crowhurst traveled 354 miles and delivered 17 lectures, 5 public school addresses, two Sunday-school addresses and one in behalf of our Bands of Hope. He organized two new lodges, and reorganized one old one; addressed 656 children and 1550 adults. Total, 2206 and initiated 50 persons into the Order. His collections were $37.30, charter fees $30. Total, $67.30. His expenses were $63.45.

We, the salooners and liquor-dealers, with our associates, the old and young bummers, old sots, moderate drinkers, brewers and beer-guzzlers, wine makers and wine-bibbers, are now an oppressed, irritated and much-abused people. The ignorant, bigoted Good Templars, and other temperance people, have risen up to a man and to a woman all over the state, and demand that we shall quit selling our goods on one day of the week. If we accede to their insolent demand, they will ask us next to shut up our drunkard factories every day. Then what shall we do? We cannot degrade ourselves with work, and we dont like to beg—and if we steal openly, we shall have to associate in prison with our old customers whom we have sent there.

Under these forlorn conditions we are obliged to band ourselves in a "league of freedom"; some of us proposed to call it "league of Satan," but we chose the former as sounding better. We want liberty to run our drunkard and crime factories and make our living out of the men that work and earn money. If we live well what is it to us or you if working people's wives have to dress in gunny-sacks, and their children eat second hand hash and play with sardine boxes and oyster cans for Christmas toys; all that is good enough for them. They would be slaves in some countries and belong to somebody, and why should we not own them in this country and have them to work for us? We give them their beer, and if the head of the family gets enough beer, that is as much as the family should expect from us—if they want anything more, let them scratch round and get it themselves where they can. It is not our lookout to feed and clothe the working men's children and wives. This ought to be a free country, and when the liquor sellers are free that is enough; it dont answer to have too many people free.

Of course we send people by the thousand to jail, and hospital, and lunatic asylum and cemetery, and if we did not, what would the police and jailors and doctors and undertakers and grave diggers and lawyers do? We make a living for them too, and what more do you want? We are just the men wanted in this country to keep the workers in their places—to keep them down, same as in other countries—and we demand the fullest liberty for us; liberty for workers is folly, beyond the liberty to drink all the beer and whisky they can pay for, and properly support us, the gentlemen and ballot box managers, and electors of the state.

Talk of republicanism, that is nonsense, except for us. We are running the country all right; we hope to be able to buy judges, juries and voters, and if liquor wont do that, nothing will. So now we think your fanaticism is out of place; we have all the requisites, the whisky and beer, the money, the official positions, the law makers, and we control the large majority of the Christian and temperance vote, and what are you going to do about it?

CONSISTENCY.

BY W. C. KING.

Among the other inconsistent things said on the wine question in the article in the Boston Congregationalist referred to a few weeks ago was the following:

Alcohol, when taken in a moderate quantity, and in its natural combinations, is not proderly a poison but is assimilated and healthily disposed of in digestion." I would call your attention to the four distinct assertions touching alcohol, which are made in this short sentence. (1) Its moderate use is commended (2) in its natural combinations for (3) it will then be assimilated (4) and digested.

There is in this a tissue of falsities. Will the Congregationalist please define the term moderate as here used. If the editor has ascertained just how much of the alcohol is a moderate dose for himself—just how much his system "assimilates" and easily digests, will he not enlighten us as to the quantity and by what series of experiments the knowledge was gained. We are very anxious to learn how it is possible that this element alcohol can be in small quantities or in any conceivable combination a food, and in larger quantities exactly the opposite.

How is it metamorphosed from a life-sustaining blessing into a death-dealing foe? Is the essential nature of alcohol in wine different, opposite to that in rum or whisky? True, a gill will not produce as serious results as a quart; but because one grain of arsenic does not produce disastrous results, shall it be declared no poison, but a food? For indiscriminate use as a food, what shall be declared to be a moderate quantity of Arsenic.

The evidence to substantiate the poisonous nature of alcohol is just as conclusive as any regarding the less dangerous arsenic. But who will define the word moderate as used here, or will each person be a law unto himself? To illustrate, conceive of a half dozen persons seated at a table sipping wine. One by one they become hilarious; finally one and then another are drunk—stupified—except one who has drank as much as any one, but who rises in well-feigned disgust, and with a sneer asks, why cant men drink without going to excess? Why is it that four of the six are under the table, the fifth boisterous and yet number six walking away, apparently his own master?

I believe it to be because of all the company, his holding capacity is the greatest. He is not susceptible to the influence of this poison. The man whose mind is finely balanced—whose nervous system is very sensitive to exciting influences is more easily affected by alcohol.

The amount that will make of him a raving demon, will make your heavy, sordid, swinish guzzler simply good natured. How long shall a man experiment upon himself to learn what is a moderate quantity for himself? But again, having ascertained what is a moderate quantity for the present, will the Congt. not explain why it is that this amount will be wholly inadequate five years hence?

The truth that alcohol is a deceptive poison in the worst sense is clearly shown by its creating an unnatural appetite.

A mature man in normal health will find his appetite for wholesome food unsatisfied with about the same quantity year by year. This is a self evident law. What does experience show regarding alcohol? Two things. 1. It must be first introduced before there is an appetite. 2. This appetite will increase as it is fed until it is insatiable.

The infant free from hereditary taint feels no craving for alcohol. This holds true thru childhood, youth, manhood and on to old age. When manhood is reached however, if it be introduced, only a strong constitution and unyielding will power can control the appetite it generates, and restrict its use to small quantities. The majority of persons do not possess these two desirable gifts; hence we find the number of persons who have drank long—regularly and in so-called small quantities to be in the extreme minority. We shall have more to say on the other assertions later.

MR. NAISMITH, S. D. of Brooklyn Lodge, says it was not true that Fountain Lodge had a Masquerade Dance on Jan. 2 as stated in the RESCUE. As the information was given by a member of Fountain Lodge and the tickets read "Fountain Social Club," and as it has been the custom of certain lodges to have regular dances under the lodge name with the words "Social Club" substituted for "lodge," it was supposed to be correct. He says some of the members of Fountain Lodge are offended at the publication alluded to; and that the lodge had a Christmas tree and Festival and temperance addresses on Wednesday evening, 28th and has no connection whatever with Fountain Social Club. If this is the case the report was incorrect; but it is by no means the fault of the RESCUE if a member of Fountain Lodge was ignorant of the facts.

INDIANA.—The Rev. E. T. Curnick in the Monitor Journal says the census gives that state a population of 1, 974, 358. There are 32 Protestant denominations with 4,286 ministers, 451,715 members and 4,768 churches. The Catholics have 219 priests 266 churches and 170,000 members, making a total of 5,034 churches, and 625,219 members; very nearly one-third of the population are members of the church of the God of temperance, and 5,034 churches against 1728 grogshops. Nearly 3 churches to 1 grogshop, and a majority of people at least opposed to satan worship; but still it is a very hard fight to get a law that shall cast out these temples of sin and leprosy and death; but it will be accomplished one of these days.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

LEAGUE OF FREEDOM.

In this country, people are justly proud of the freedom they enjoy; that is, there are none who need be slaves. We have perfect freedom to own our own clothes and home and property, and our lives and persons. There is no king, or lord, or chieftain or sultan who can take from us what we own, or order us to work for him without pay, or to serve in his army or dig canals or build pyramids under his orders.

That is what we are proud of and have reason to be, for that kind of freedom does us all justice and forbids all injustice and cruelty. But there was always and is to-day, a class of people who desire to have freedom to do everything they choose. Now if that were granted, every stout, able man could, if he wanted to, take away the property and pocket money of any boy, and then beat him if he complained. So any man could be unjust and abusive and cruel to almost every woman; and if we had much of that kind of liberty, we should have a very hard time of it.

Liberty, then, is only genuine and precious and proper, when it means freedom, perfect freedom to do right; todo just as you please so long as you do not interfere with your neighbor, or any other person's liberty and happiness. If my neighbor had liberty to stone me, to take what is mine, to puff tobacco smoke into my eyes, to cut down my trees to build his fire &c., there would be no liberty at all in this country; for I would have an equal right to set fire to his house or to do everything I please to destroy his liberty.

Honest, worthy people who desire to do right and live uprightly in this country, are perfectly satisfied with that kind of law and liberty which permits them to do right and forbids them to do wrong. No honest man or woman feels distressed because the law commands us not to steal sheep and clothes and bread and money. Honest people want to have just such laws. But thieves do not like them.

We all like liberty to buy or sell just as we like; but honest people dont want to be allowed to sell poison to men, to kill themselves or others. We dont desire to be allowed to sell gunpowder to blow up a house, nor revolvers to shoot a friend. Honest men dont want liberty to sell poison to a man to craze him and make him beat or kill his wife and children. Thieves do. Honest men dont want liberty to make the poor man drunk on Sunday, and then steal the money he has earned all the week, and which he ought to employ to buy clothes and food and shoes and school books for his children. But thieves do. They want to have liberty to rob the working men and let their wives and children starve to death for all they care.

Honest people are satisfied to keep the Sunday as a day of rest. Every honest man and honest business can be helped and benefitted and made better by a day of rest. All would gain and none lose by it. But men who are dishonest and have a wicked, miserable, shameful business that ought not to be permitted on any day, are determined to make Sunday a day of business and no rest for any one; to take that priceless boon of a rest day of peace and enjoyment and moral culture away from the people of this country, and make it a day of drunkenness and fighting and violence and murderous crime—that they may make money by selling drunkenness on Sunday.

Working and selling rum and getting drunk on Sunday is not an American custom; the Sabbath has always been an American day of good words and thots and acts; a day to cease work and thank God for blessing our work of the week and for providing us with a plenteous and beautiful home and country. Sabbath desecration is a foreign crime, and in the lands where it prevails, the great mass of the people are so poor and so enslaved and have so many hardships to endure that they would nearly all leave their homes and come to this country if they had enough money to pay their way to a place where there is liberty and morality and Sunday and plenty of food.

But the worst of these people that had to leave their own country, and some of the meanest of our own people too, are not satisfied with our liberty, and want liberty to break all laws and destroy liberty and commit all the crime they choose, and make this a pauper country too. They desire to destroy their own respectable better countrymen along with us, by selling them and us their beer and whisky which they have poisoned and made more crazing than mere alcohol can make it.

These men are brewers and liquor sellers, and call themselves the League of Freedom. The devil and his servants generally use a disguise when they want to do mischief. This is a gang of outlaws who are in a league to destroy the freedom which we have, and make this country a baleful despotism under the rule of King Satan. But we are going to prefer to have the American flag wave over a free, well clad, well fed, respectable, honest, moral people rather than over a rabble of drunken criminals and maniacs and a mass of ragged, starving tramps and paupers.

THE NEW YEAR.

The first day is the very best of the whole year to start right, to date a new departure from, if our old course has not been exactly right. That was what the writer tried to persuade three young men many years ago, he being a little the youngest of the party. It was New Years day; on the evening before we were having a very nice time, where the ice was two or three feet thick and the weather had its very coldest side out at that season. We went with several others to visit friends, and wherever we went there was plenty of brandy and whisky, warm and cold, and some of our party had lots more in bottles in their wide coat pockets. One of our party was missed from the sleigh after a visit at a friend's house but we supposed he had joined another team and felt no uneasiness and thot no more about it till we found he had dropped by the wayside, having become suddenly helpless and was picked up by a belated traveler, fast asleep and in a condition where in about fifteen minutes more he would have been frozen and dead.

But he laughed next day at the idea of starting right, only weak people were in danger, he said, and "I guess I can take care of myself." About six weeks later he met with a similar occurrence, and was picked up by a sober man who by chance, was out very late. In trying to open the door he had fallen and slept, in an intensely freezing temperature at about 1 A. M. In a few minutes he would have been frozen stiff but next day he could take care of himself without any body's help and needed no advice.

That young man had a brilliant opportunity to become a leading partner in a large wealthy mercantile establishment with his relatives, but the shadow of the bottle always pursued him to his ruin; he never took a new departure. In every enterprise, every effort, every movement of his, thru a troubled gloomy life he was beset and upset and buffeted and disgraced by that infernal bottle or glass to which he always clung, or which always clung to him.

Another of that quartet, a jolly, hearty, laughing, joking, generous fellow, burst into peals of laughter when commended to start right on New Years day, and steer strait away from the bottle. We went to sea together, talked this matter over in the night watches, and he always laughed boisterously over it as a monstrously funny joke. He did not like drink; would not have given a dime for a puncheon of it to gratify his own taste, but it would not do to be singular and odd, and unable to join in the fun and fashion. After a while the question of the bottle separated us; our taste and choice in the matter of company consequently differed, and we took each our own way. Two years after that he was in Liverpool; his ship was leaving the dock about 9 o'clock in the evening to go to sea. My friend had been taking a parting glass for form's sake, with some cronies he had found there—not because he liked it at all as yet;—the steamer was alongside the ship at the pierhead, when he came, and climing over the paddle-box to get on board the ship, he slipped and fell overboard, and as the wheels were going, he was instantly mashed into an unrecognizable mass. He was one who probably would never have been a drunkard, but he fell a very easy victim to the murderous bottle.

Another of that party owned the danger of drink, and naming two of his companion drinkers, said if he ever found himself becoming like them, he would sign the pledge, but for him it was not necessary: singularly, that was what each of the others said about his two companions. This last was a witty, pleasant, gentlemanly young man, a good musician and a general favorite; but in early life he became a sot, lived for years a pauper, and so died. And of his two friends just referred to, one died at about twenty-six of delirium tremens, the other fell drunk from a river steamer in the night and was drowned. As before stated, each of these used to say, if he should ever get as fond of drink as the other two, he would at once join the Sons of Temperance. To tell of all the friends and acquaintances of mine whom the evil spirit of wine has slain, would fill a large volume.

And as with drink, so with any other evil habit; the first day of this year was the best to quit it; to-day is better than any later day of the year, and every other day is a better time than the 31st of December.

IRON SHOD.

BY THE REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER.

The safety of a mountain climber depends upon being well shod; therefore the Swiss guides wear heavy shoes with sharp spikes in the soles. On a bright July morning a famous man of science started with two gentlemen to ascend the Piz Morteratsch, a steep and lofty snow mountain in Switzerland. Tho experienced mountaineers, they took with them Jenni, the boldest guide in that district. After reaching the summit of the Morteratsch they started back, and soon arrived at a steep slope covered with thin snow. They were lashed together with a strong rope, which was tied to each man's waist.

"Keep carefully in my steps, gentlemen," said Jenni, "for a false step might start the snow and send us down in an avalanche"

He had scarcely spoken when the whole field of snow began to slide down the icy mountain-side, carrying the unfortunate climbers with it at a terrible pace. A steeper slope was before them, and at the end of it a precipice. The three foremost men were almost buried in the whirling snow. Below them were the jaws of death. Everything depended upon getting a foot-hold. Jenni shouted loudly, "Halt! Halt!" and with desperate energy drove his iron-nailed boots into the firm ice beneath the moving snow. Within a few rods of the precipice Jenni got a hold with his feet, and was able to bring the party all up standing, when two seconds more would have swept them into the chasm.

This hair-bredth escape shows the value of being well-shod when in dangerous places. The lesson is specially needed by the young. No boy is prepared for rough climbing unless he is well shod with Christian principles. Sometimes temptation ices the track under him, and then he must plant his foot down with an iron heel or he is gone. A poor boy of my acquaintance signed a pledge never to taste liquor. One day his rich employer invited him to dinner. There was wine on the table, but the lad was not ashamed to say:

"No, I thank you, sir; I never touch it!"

Then came on a rich pudding, which the boy tasted and found that there was brandy in it; so he quietly laid the tasted morsel back on his plate. The employer discovered that the boy had "pluck" enough to stand by his convictions, and he will never be afraid to trust him. He is a sure-footed boy.

God knows what steep places lie before us. He has provided the "shoes of iron and brass" for us to put on. They are truth, and honesty, and faith, and courage, and prayer. A clear conscience will keep the head cool. And up along the hard road there is a sign-board, on which is written in large, bright letters, "He that walketh uprightly walketh surely."—Banner.

MOTHER SANTA CLAUS AT ASTORIA.

My Dear Juveniles: You remember I wrote you shortly after beginning the juvenile work in this city, that it was so cold and discouraging here, but promised you as a faithful fellow soldier to fight the harder when the battle was darkest, trusting in our great Captain who never lost a battle. O, my! how shall I tell you about matters now? You know that after the cold dreary winter come the genial sunshine and laughing flowers of spring. After the dark night come the joyous morning and songs of birds. And so the genial sunshine of juvenile smiles and the music of happy greetings along the street and in the churches, homes and schoolrooms of Astoria have superseded the discouragements of the past, and I thot myself richly rewarded for what little of plain duty my limited time and circumstances had permitted me to exercise in the important work that I love. But "No" said the old lady Santa Claus (The old gentleman was sick and could not attend.) No the smiles and happy greetings are not sufficient and when she had written upon a slip of paper, "To Mr. T. J. Alley, from the friends of temperance in Astoria as a token of their appreciation of his zeal and energy in the temperance cause. pinned it upon a fine suit of clothes and hung them on the Christmas tree at the Presbyterian church, and then wrote about the same words upon another scrap and pinned it upon a very fine heavy overcoat and put that on the Christmas tree at the Methodist church.

The old lady and her helpers gave not the slightest intimation or ground for suspicion of their tricks and the wonder is how they got the measurement, as every article is a most perfect fit. Capt. Wood, and every navigator, knows how the villains in the rum dens of every port, shanghai poor rum ruined sailors on board the ships; but who ever heard of the "friends of temperance," shanghaiing one of their number into a tailor shop.

Now, the clothes are both beautiful and useful, but by far the greater value is in the kind assurance of "appreciation" of feeble but earnest efforts in a good cause. How it nerves one's arm for the battle to know of the confidence and appreciation of good people! It makes me feel more that ever like toiling on for circumstances that will enable me to devote more time and greater efforts in the holy cause in which we have enlisted. The sweet chimes of the Christmas Sabbath bells, called young and old to the temples of the living God, to hear the story of the little Originator of Christmas in the manger of Bethlehem, and after service and Sunday school, I accepted the kind invitation of Bro. Milligan, pastor of the Presbyterian church, and enjoyed a nice dinner with his pleasant Christian wife, and little black-eyed romping Willie. And isn't it strange in the midst of such happy surroundings and privileges, crowds of men should seek for congenial associations in the loathsome dens of shame, to breathe the foul odors of reeking pipes and spittoons, and the poisonous breath of rotting beer, swill and maddening rum? How did they get so, boys? Ah! they were weak and silly enough to turn off on to the cigaret road, and there is where it leads. They were foolish enough to suffer the "little ropes" of error to be thrown upon them, and now they are bound by the fearful cables of degradation, and will never get free. Let us heed the warning, and keep to the right, boys. T. J. Alley.

Ed. Rescue—San Diego holds its own very well in the temperance cause. The enemies of our work are very active and seem to be acting in an organized manner to induce as many of our young men as they can to drink. I learn that quite a number have broken their pledge during the holidays. Golden Rule Lodge will take measures to reclaim these young men at its next meeting; failing in which, they will be "fired out." The business men—particularly the railroad officers—are warm friends of temperance, and the young men who give way to rum will not be in favor in the company's employ, and will lose the confidence of many other business persons. We initiated five persons at our last lodge meeting. Bro. E. W. Nottage, a reclaimed man, our W. C. T., goes on the steamer today to East Portland to act as superintendent of the water company there. He will there fall into line with the I. O. G. T. Nottage, familiarly known as "Cast Iron" Nottage, is a whole man in the cause—our loss is Oregon's gain on him.

I told you some time since of our Band of Hope, Excelsior, and claimed it to be the star band of the state. I feel very proud to belong to it, to be its president. In the enclosed you will see that we furnished entertainment to the good people of this city for the holidays.

The children are hungry to see that dear temperance lamb," Sister Stevens; where is she? They also want to see Dr. McDonald, the great patron of temperance of the state. Cant the Grand Lodge organize a general pilgrimage thru the state in a body It would do great good. Our whole county will come out to meet them. Let the Grand officers in a body visit the leading points in the state that can be reached readily by rail or steamer. It will pay: let them bring Dr. McDonald along. Please publish this report of our Band of Hope meeting. A. B. H.

A PLEASANT ENTERTAINMENT.

The exercise opened with a song by the Band. This was followed by a dialogue entitled "The Tory Housekeeper, by Miss Lizzie Pidgeon, Grace Gildea and Master John Simpson. Little Louise Cassidy, a miss of five summers, then spoke, "Father, May I go and Shoot?" Recitation, "I'll Take What Father Takes," by Minnie Wescott; song, "Give Me the Beautiful Water." Miss Etta Jones then recited a beautiful piece and Miss Loleta Levet gave "Lulu's Speech." A dialogue entitled "Woman's Rights,"participated in by Misses Minnie Weymouth, Mary Rennie, Ida Little and Master Archie Hooker; Harry Overshiner sang the song, "O, Plumpy is Dead." "The Two Glasses,' by Miss Maggie Hartler. The Band sang "Dare to Do Right." A dialogue followed from "Widow Bedotte, entitled, "Mr. Crane Walks Out," by Miss Millie Strong and Master Geller Dougherty. John Caduc then recited "The Silver Plate." Miss Olive Terry, recitation "If We Would." The Band sang "Dash it Down." "The Train to Mauro," a dialogue by Miss Gildea, Henry Overshiner and John Simpson convulsed the audience with laughter. Harry Overshiner read "The Collection Piece." Miss Annie Mickle recited a pathetic piece, and the Band closed the delightful entertainment with the song, "Temperance Boys and Girls are We.

At the close a collection was taken up to defray the expenses of the hall, and to aid the Band in purchasing a flag, which resulted in a snug little contribution of $12.60.

STORM THE FORT FOR PROHIBITION.

BY C. W. WESTERVELT

Ho! my comrads, see our signal,
See it wave on high;
Whisky's battlements are falling;
Hear the leaders cry.

CHORUS—
Storm the fort for Prohibition
Duty shows you how;
Shout the signal down the line:
I am ready now!

Hark! hear ye the bugle-call,
Sounding o'er the plain;
Hear the rolling battle-cry
For the many slain.

See the mighty strongholds frowning,
Held thru Satan's power;
See the mighty host appearing,
Now's the storming hour.

Haste to the conflict, haste away,
For the fort must fall;
Reinforcements are appearing—
Forward, comrades, all!

On, my brother, to the conquest,
For the end is near;
Forward leads our brave commander,
Cheer, my comrades, cheer!

By our homes our fathers bought us,
Thru their precious blood;
By our God in Heaven above us,
Check the rising flood!

Shout! the battlements are falling;
See! the whisky run!
Shout again, for we have conquered,
Lo! the work is done!

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

Benjamin Franklin, the great American statesman, was the son of a Boston soap boiler. He had sixteen brothers and sisters, who had the start of him in life simply because they were all older than he was. It does not appear that he was petted and praised as younger children sometimes are, but it is known that he had plenty of hard work to do in his father's soap-making business. It was work, too, that he did not like at all, but that did not prevent his doing it very faithfully. He ran errands, stirred soap, and cut candle wicks until he was twelve years old, as diligently as if he expected to do such work all his life, a time when the boys of the present day are in school, and some of them thinking it quite a hardship to get their lessons.

Ben, as they called him, loved study so well that he would gladly have spent his holidays, if he had any, over his books, and you can imagine his delight when he got his father's consent at the age of twelve to let him become a printer. He had an older brother in that business, and he learned the trade of him. But if he fancied he was going to have an easy time he was mistaken, for this brother proved to be a hard master. However, the little fellow stuck to his task until his trade was learned, and he found time to study besides. There were no night-schools in those days, but Ben and some young friends used to spend their evenings reading instructive books, and talking about them, which was much better than spending their evenings in the bar-rooms, or lounging around the street corners.

He did not care half so much about having a "good time," or sowing wild oats" as he did about knowing something that would help him be a better man by and by. He was well paid for his trouble, for the name of Benjamin Franklin will go down to posterity, as the first philosopher of America.

When he was nineteen years old, he had his trade well learned, and he took a trip to London, where he immediately sought for work at a printing-office. The foreman looked at him as curiously as if he had been a savage just out of the woods, and expressed some doubt as to whether a printer from America could know much about type-setting.

Young Franklin did not stop to argue the matter, but quietly stepped up to a case and correctly set up the following sentence:

"And Nathanael said unto him, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see." And the young American was then permitted to practice his skill at the printers case.

He also pulled at the printing-press by way of variety, for there were no steam-power presses in those days, and he thot it would be better exercise than "sticking type" all the time. He knew that he needed exercise, and he thot this would pay better and do him quite as much good as wrestling, running, or pitching quoits. His fellow-workmen soon began to notice that he was much stronger than they were. He could easily pick up two heavy forms of type, one in each hand, and carry them up or down stairs, while it was all they could do to carry one such form in both hands. By this time, too, they had learned that he did not drink beer, and they could not understand it. They drank beer to make them strong; they thot they could not get along without it, and here was this young American, hardly yet a grown man, who drank no beer, and yet he was stronger and could lift more than any of them.

The young philosopher explained it. He said there was more nourishment in bread, and there was a larger portion of flour in a penny loaf, and that if he ate this loaf and drank a pint of water with it he would get more strength from it than from a pint of beer. But they did not like this reasoning. They liked their beer and were determined to have it. A few, however, of the more intelligent gave up their "abominable diet of bread and cheese and beer for breakfast," and, like Franklin, procured a basin of good warm gruel (oatmeal mush), "which was a much better breakfast,and did not cost so much,while it kept the head clearer." The other men kept on with their beer, and ridiculed the water-drinker, calling him "The American Aquatic."

Did he care for this? Apparently not a particle. Young people who are troubled by ridicule may well learn a lesson from this. Franklin went on in spite of it, right on up to success, to usefulness, and even to greatness. He has handed down a noble name to history, while those who laughed at him would never have been heard of but for the fact that for a little while they worked in the same shop with Franklin and ridiculed him. He had his reward while living also, for he led an honored, a happy, and a useful life down to a good old age, while they were just content with what beer could give them. Surely "he that refuseth instruction despiseth his own soul."—The Banner

COMMUNION WINE.

The undersigned takes this method to inform the churches that he has undertaken the manufacture of Unfermented Wine for Sacramental use. The article he offers for sale is Pure, Unadulterated Juice of the Grape, and is furnished to order in pint or quart cans, sealed and packed in boxes. Price $3 per gallon. Samuel Winter,
Yountville, Napa county, Cal.

Keep in a cool place, When used, open and let stand a while; then pour off carefully.

David C. Cook has recently opened, at 148 Madison St. Chicago, a Revolution Temperance House, and we are amazed at the amount he offers for a little money. He furnishes excellent and unique material for educating the children. It is a grand work. We advise all to send for samples and buy what they can afford. A little money expended in this way will hardly be missed, and will do you and others much good.—Prohibitionist, Lewiston, Me.

The Temperance Almanac is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages; list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade Street, New York.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

THE WOMEN'S MOVEMENT.

Nothing has ever occurred in the history of the world, that has contributed so much to the emancipation of women, and their restoration to all their natural rights and privileges as the temperance reform. Nothing else has ever so enlisted their sympathies; so called into activity their energies; so awakened them to a sense of their own powers, or given them such facilities and opportunities of educating, training and exercising their capabilities.

And on the other hand, no agency has ever taken hold of this reform, with such fidelity and earnestness and courage, and with such real effective, ability and masterly generalship as the women of the crusade of 1873 to 1882. No other temperance society ever had such a leader as Miss Willard or such a staff of generals as her field officers. Neal Dow was a grand leader in his state, generaled the Maine law there from its inception to its victory over its enemies but the temperance hosts never had sense enough to make him to the nation what he was to his own state. Governor St. John has been a leader of the temperance hosts of Kansas and has won not only the applause, but the warmest love and admiration of all good people. But the temperance societies and Orders dont adopt him to be the nations general as he has been of his state. No; it might might have some dangerous result in the parceling out of the spoils of office among the ravenous party office seekers, to propose a grand good, Christian temperance patriot to be the nation's leader and standard bearer.

It never seems to have occurred to our men societies, that any but paper generalship was needed in the temperance warfare, until the example of the women has forced some new ideas upon them. Fifty years of such generalship and tactics as we have had, have only made us an aimless and utterly disorganized, undrilled, undisciplined, incoherent force, divided into a thousand squads, each with a different opinion as to the proper modes of carrying out the objects which we are all unanimous in desiring to attain.

The women thot at first they had discovered the philosopher's stone in prayer; they believed they could destroy the liquor business by that means; and so they would, only that as fast as they prayed the saloons out of a place, the men voted and helped them in again. They failed there, but in place of "going back to Holland for a new departure," or lying dormant ten years and then beginning again at the old tactics, they went right along and having discovered that the uneducated ballot of Christian and temperance men and other well-meaning citizens of the U. S. was at the bottom of all the mischief of the grogshop, they went right to work at that ballot, to cleanse the blood stains from it, to purify and educate and to give it an intelligent and righteous direction.

After they found that praying East and voting West would accomplish nothing, they tried no more single partial remedies and they deserve credit for that. They were touched with none of the infantile epidemics of high licence, light wines, Gothenburg system, inebriate homes, or bell punches as remedial agents for the diseases and disasters engendered by the grog shop. They never centered on any one little side show as a pet patent agency of compassing their reform. With a broad comprehensive vision they searched out every agency and tendency, that helped to shape the ballot and went to work upon it.

The Rescue has often published a list of the numerous committees of the W. C. T. U. whose duty it has been to represent the interests of our reform under every conceivable circumstance and on all possible occasions. Miss Willard displayed a generalship of the very highest order, in turning the influence of the example of President and Mrs. Hayes to such account, giving it such publicity, following it up with a perpetual memento in the White House, securing the endorsement of General Garfield, and then in the grandly executed raid which captured President Arthur and enlisted his sympathies in favor of a sober example in the Executive Mansion.

Then the best talent of women that the world has ever seen, dedicated to the welfare of humanity, has been directed to every phase of the work, educating the home, the public school teachers and superintendents, the pulpit, the medical profession, the press, the temperance leaders, the public gatherings and camp meetings and always the great, main, shining object has been kept in view—how to succeed in fashioning an honest and patriotic, christian temperance ballot that will rid this country of the great curse which shuts out prosperity and revels in sin and blood and misery and tears.

And they have got away beyond the hopeless and helpless idea that wolves will ever make or execute laws to protect lambs, or that any one of a dozen whisky-voted, whisky-bot, whisky-blinded parties or legislatures will ever enact or execute prohibitory laws, or can ever be depended on for any beneficent acts of any kind.

There is one point on which our sisters' generalship has been deficient, only because they have copied in that respect the tactics of the older societies. Their financial system has not at once become a success. They have not yet made ample provision or yet adopted adequate financial measures, but will soon be right there, too. The Lincoln Tribune feared sometime ago that the Editor of the Rescue "had a weakness" for the W. C. T. U.; that is a mistake; the success that follows every step of their heroic and masterly warfare against our great enemy should inspire us all with an admiration and exultation that "weakness" is no name for.

THE WINE QUESTION.

The N. T. Advocate quotes from the Presbyterian Journal of Philadelphia, a recent editorial speaking of the Bible wine question:

"Some years ago we sat down to the patient and thoro investigation of the Bible on this whole subject, and with prejudice against the different-wines theory. We were compelled to abandon our preconceived view, and to adopt the doctrine that the wines which the Bible sanctions as a drink were non-intoxicating, and that it discountenances all use as a beverage of intoxicating liquor. We then carried our investigation very far. We have watched the discussion since. We have read the recent attacks which have been made upon this position. Philologically, exegetically, historically, and from our own observation and experience, we stand firmly upon it. The ungracious insinuations against the scholarship of all who maintain it have no effect upon us, though it causes keen regret that on this one question we are antagonized by venerable brethren and fathers at whose feet on the doctrines and government of our church we have humbly sat. But we must abide by our decided intellectual and moral conviction. The fact is as clear to us as noon-day that the juice of the grape in any and every condition in which it exists has always been called and used as wine."

That is evidently the utterance of a Christian who has sincerely sought for light and truth. He could very easily have pinned his faith to the shadow of some mythical Hebrew scholar, who is reported at some mythical time, to have formed some mythical ideas to the contrary, and who made the mythical discovery, that the bible on the question of wine is self-contradictory, unscientific and self-evidently false, in its calling the self same thing a blessing of God and a cup of devils.

There has been no argument on the alcoholic communion side of this question, for many years, worth a straw or entitled to the least respect or consideration, nor was there ever. Meantime, the experience of the journal as above, has been that of thousands of earnest, conscientious enquiring Christians, while many other Christians have completely satisfied or opiated their consciences and have helped to mislead others by accepting and repeating the disgraceful and dishonest charge made and repeated time and again by the Boston Congregationalist and two or three other false teachers—that the scholarship is deficient, which asserts the unfermented communion wine theory, and the doctrine that natural, unfermented wholesome wine is the fruit of the vine, rather than the cup of sin and death wickedly evolved from the rotten offal of the perished, prostituted grape. The intelligent thousands who have enquired into the scholarship of both parties, know that the charge as made by its originators, is utterly false and so intended to be.

But it is by no means intended to convey an impression of falsehood against others who hold to the old fashioned beliefs and prejudices. It is no easy matter to give up what we have been taught thru life to believe. It would no doubt be wrong to decide either way because the Rescue takes either side, and it may be wrong and a serious wrong, to decide upon a matter of such moment without a patient enquiry and examination of the authorities and experts who have given this question a thoro study. There will be no hesitation, when one has done so impartially, in deciding that all the respectable and competent scholarship which has examined—not which has believed—but which has studied this question, is entirely unanimous in the most unhesitating and positive verdict of the pure natural, communion wine, and that all the wines, or things translated wine in the Scriptures, and referred to as good things or blessings, were either fruit or the natural juice of the grape or other wholesome fruit food.

STALWART.

Ex-Senator Sargent has been proposed for a seat in the cabinet of President Arthur. There is no man in the country so well deserving of it, if the Conkling stalwart policy is the correct thing. He has been faithful to his political friends in providing them with princely landed estates at 25 cents an acre, and good chances of mineral lands at the expense of the nation; and he has consistently portioned out federal office, federal patronage and federal employment to the Sargent voters (or those who promised to be), at the expense of honest, virtuous, capable, faithful employees who filled their positions efficiently and patriotically, but who had some aspirations for honorable manhood, and independent citizenship.

His record as a foe to civil service reform is stainless. He aided Coghlan to drive out of the Mare Island Navy Yard, and out of their homes in Vallejo, the most respectable, upright, sober, efficient and thoroly capable and worthy set of foremen, and mechanics and workers that were ever employed on the Navy Yard; not for the crime of voting against Coghlan, the nominee of Kaiser Sargent, but for having previously belonged to a Republican club which favored the nomination of another candidate, but all voted for Coghlan at the election. A large number of these men had served faithfully thru the war, and the Sargent and Coghlan proscription drove out of Vallejo something like three-fourths of its Good Templars and temperance people, and of the members and attendants of the Protestant churches, and a large proportion of the best, sober, respectable patrons and customers of the honest business, trade and industry of that city.

He was faithful to the political machine as long as he could, in striving to dictate the nomination and commanding the election of stalwart Sargent men for the small and large county offices of Solano County. And now when the Stalwarts are hurrying up the last funeral of the Republican party why should he be denied the sad pleasure of assisting as a pall bearer in a ceremony which his political record has largely contributed to bring about.

It would be unfair to mention or criticise the public acts of Mr. Sargent without giving him the fullest credit for a private life and habit and example of a manly morality and good citizenship. His political enemies can find no weak or doubtful point in his social and moral record. In congress he was a most energetic, industrious and persevering worker.

But for the fatal mistake of believing and acting upon the belief that the country was made for the congressman and its people were created to be his henchmen and bond servants, his record might have been vastly different. To have understood at the first that the politician should be a patriot and a servant, not a despotic irresponsible autocratic slave driver, of the people, might have led in his case with his abilities, to the gratification of a higher ambition than a seat in the Cabinet.

HUMBOLDT COUNTY.

All honor to the Eureka Democratic Standard for taking a manly stand in favor of law and order, and the decent observance of the day of rest. A Mr. Johnson, of Bear River, for that reason sends an order for it and a year's subscription in advance, and there ought to be 500 or 1,000 more people up in that direction doing the same thing for the same reason. A county or local paper's first claim to support or patronage should be founded on its advocacy of the best interests, moral and financial, of the people of its section, and they always coincide with the best interests of the whole nation. A newspaper which joins the ranks of the grogshop and law-breaking and law-defying leagues has no claim whatever to the support of honest people. A newspaper that joins in a war against all the women and children of America deserves neither support nor decent respect.

It appears that a rumseller was tried in Eureka last month for violating the Sunday law; case clearly proved, but the Police Judge declared him not guilty, and now he turns round and sues the complainant for $5,000 damages. If the same judge could try the case, we might guess at the result.

The Good Templar lodge of Lake Bluff is reported to number 120, and to be capturing the whole community and acquiring general respect.

Arcata is enforcing the Sunday law. The Times has complained that the people are indignant at the Good Templars for their action in the matter. H. W. G., who says he is not a Good Templar, answers in the Standard that there are not four women in town who do not rejoice at the restraint of the public enemy on one day in the week, and that the indignation is confined to the saloon-keepers and others as directly interested in the subversion of law and morality.

GUITEAU.

It is a pity indeed, that so much lionizing and so much license have been granted to this meanest, lowest, vilest and most loathsome murderer that has ever made the criminal annals of any country hideous. The plea of insanity and inspiration is so transparently frivolous that the whole process of its discussion in the trial has been a lamentable burlesque upon justice. It would seem that under a perfect criminal law and a perfect administration of it, the trial and execution of the self-confessed, unregretful and unrepentant murderer, should have been concluded at latest on the day following the firing of the shot. There could be, nor was no doubt of his guilt and his intention to kill, and if he had known beforehand that he would have been hanged at once after the commission of the crime, he would never have molested the president, and murder would be extremely rare.

Better ten guilty should escape than one innocent be put to death," is a fine old principle of law, but we have transmuted it into, "Better one hundred innocents should be murdered than one guilty murderer be punished," if he has money or friends to pay for his defense. If Guiteau should by any chance escape the halter, we need never expect another president to live out his term, for no viler or more guilty assassination will ever be perpetrated. Pity there is no punishment for those who get the brute's autograph and photograph, and laugh at his impudent sayings in court.

EX-PRESIDENT HAYES.

Some of the papers which have a little spite at the temperance record of ex-President Hayes are now horrified at his refusal to contribute to the Garfield monument. Without the least dissent from the national feeling of kindness or the disposition to honor the memory of Gen. Garfield, it is fair to say that the nation owes a much larger debt of grateful honor to President Hayes, than it did to the former. The nation had an actual four years experience of most excellent and beneficent moral results from the presidency of Mr. Hayes, whose official and administrative record has been also eminently respectable and has done the highest honor to himself and the nation. The people expected a larger ability and more potent statesmanship from President Garfield, and their sympathies were thoroly aroused, and their highest admiration of the man excited by his untimely martyrdom. Had President Hayes been the victim of a miscreant assassin, under similar circumstances, he would have equally been the subject of an outpouring of national sympathy. If General Hayes did not feel obliged to contribute to the Garfield Monument, that did not prevent at all its erection; it is quite proper that its expense should be borne by those who owe so much more to their country, and have paid much less than Mr. Hayes.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

Mr. Marcus D. Boruck, editor of the horse race paper and candidate for governor of this state, offers to the public his anti-sunday law profession as a test of his fitness for that office. There is no doubt but the sole qualification of being a pronounced enemy of Sunday sobriety and Sunday observance and American civilization will, more than any and all other things, secure him the unflinching and unchangeable adherence of a certain number of voters in this state. But it surely indicates a very great moral blindness and a sad lack of that commonsense which should be one qualification of a governor, when a man of his experience believes that the unanimous vote of the slums and rowdies and jailbirds at large, is sufficient in this state to override the honest, patriotic vote of its decent, upright moral citizenship. The temperance people, and all who reverence a day of rest, and the better and higher belongings of a Christian civilization, will welcome Mr. Boruck as their opposition candidate. They will not object to the whisky party having a fair opportunity to test the strength of its principles, nor to their having in Mr. Boruck perhaps the very best and strongest and most respectable of all the men in this state that would run for governor on an anti-sunday and a grogshop platform.

OPENING THE LIQUOR VALVES.

The San Francisco Spirit of the Times, edited by M. D. Boruck, opens the spirit valves, and champions the cause of the enemies of the Sunday law. We are sorry to see this, because Boruck is a Republican. He asserts that there must be no ambiguity in taking positions for or against the Sunday law. He also asserts that the opponents of the Sunday law hold the balance of power. He was never more mistaken in his life. The fact is, the temperance people hold the balance of power, and they have determined to use their power without regard to party. This only shows that we were right when we stated, a few weeks ago, that the next campaign would be fought on the principles of the Sunday law—not so much on a temperance platform as on that of law and order.

We dislike to believe that politics is about to invade the realms of domestic tranquility, but it has pushed itself in thru the greed of men who are not deeply concerned in the good morals of the country, and the people are beginning to see the foot prints of the monster in its struggle in our courts of justice to trample upon the peace and tranquility of the families of the land. The gage of battle laid down by this organ of the foreign league, who has, no doubt, received assurance of support, will be taken up.

From the fact that the Spirit of the Times is edited by Mr. Boruck, and that he is a strong Republican—in fact, a recognized leader—they make him a mouthpiece on the side of that party, not being successful in securing a more powerful organ. Our candidates for the Legislature will have to be watched, for the aim of this class, four-fifths of whom are men of foreign birth, is to secure the Legislature in order to repeal the law. The strength of the opposition to repeal is greater than most people imagine, and it is determined. It is not alone the Good Templars who are aroused. There are thousands and tens of thousands of voters, not members of any temperance society, who have determined in their own minds that one day of rest in seven shall be preserved by law, and that that day shall be the one known as Sunday, improperly called the Sabbath. It is a religion which must be acknowledged. A Christianity which has existed since A. D. 1, and there is not enough power in the world to destroy the sacredness with which so many cherish it.—Modesto Herald.

DOWNEY, Jan. 2, 1382.

ED. RESCUE:—At a meeting of the District Lodge of this county held in the Good Templars' hall in Los Angeles Dec. 31, 1881, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

I. Resolved, That this District Lodge earnestly recommends each subordinate Lodge, where there is no Band of Hope, to form one without delay, and see that David C. Cook's marvelously cheap books and papers and the National Temperance Banner be well circulated among them.

II. Resolved, That every member of the order in this county be urged to subscribe for the RESCUE, our official organ.

III. Resolved, That our Lodges be urged to use their best endeavors to induce ministers of the Gospel, and heads of families to take membership with them.

IV. Resolved, That all Lodges in this District be urged to take immediate and persistent action in the enforcement of the Sunday law.

Bro. Webb was present, and he has been doing a noble work thru this part of the State. Good progress was reported from all the Lodges represented except Artesia, which is weak, but Bro. Webb hopes she will pull thru even if we do have a dry season.

The District Lodge adjourned at 3 o'clock to give room for the Band of Hope which held a meeting at that time. The next District Lodge will be held at El Monte, on Feb 22, 1882, when Mrs. Richardson and Mrs. Stevens are expected to be present and to take a part.

TULARE CITY, Jan. 3, 1882.

ED RESCUE:—The Tulare Lodge 195 I. O. G. T., gave a New Year's reception yesterday, Jan. 2, between the hours of 11 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M. They had a great many callers and all passed off nicely. In the evening they gave an entertainment, consisting of songs, tableaux, declamations, and select reading, which was for the benefit of the lodge. The receipts of the evening were $37.70, admission 25 cts. Our lodge is in a prosperous condition now, for which we must thank Rev. Will C. King.

We remove to our new lodge room to-night, Tuesday, where we hope many may be induced to join us. The RESCUE has a good circulation among us owing to the diligent work of Bro. W. C. King. Yours in F. H. and C.—CLARA GARRISON, W. V. T.

LEAGUE OF FREE CRIME.—In Calaveras County, four enthusiastic birds of the "Freedom" persuasion had a nice time the other day. They of course got patriotically drunk. Whether the drunk was Republican or Democratic is not reported; but the drunkest of the party found himself in the morning in a barn, entirely stripped of all his clothes, and had to scud under bare poles two miles to his home. It was a sublimely pleasant, playful joke, but the stupid fellow could not comprehend it properly on a cold morning, so he has had his three boon companions arrested and they are on trial. It is hoped the San Francisco league of free outlaws will see to their defense.

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

It was proposed to issue a 20,000 edition of the RESCUE about Christmas, but as every body was preparing extra Christmas agony for the people, it was deemed best to defer this paper's extra edition till the returns of the present quarter come in. So on the 10th, or possibly the 17th, of February it may be expected, some of the correspondents of the paper, it is hoped will give their aid to make it a creditable issue, by preparing a ½ or ¾ column article. And honest advertisers can have a good show off.

DAVID C. COOK.

Be sure to read with care David C. Cook's list of excellent publications in another page. Now is the time to secure good and interesting reading for the family, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, and to fill up every bodys library. Never before was such a chance to get proper books, papers and music for the young folks. They can be had too, for about half the price that old, battered, second hand books used to cost. Every body who dont spend money for tobacco and beer, can well afford to reap the benefit of these publications: exery one who does spend for tobacco and beer ought to use twice as much money for good literature to enable him to keep his conscience from becoming too persistently troublesome.

David C. Cook has recently opened, at 148 Madison St. Chicago, a Revolution Temperance House, and we are amazed at the amount he offers for a little money. He furnishes excellent and unique material for educating the children. It is a grand work. We advise all to send for samples and buy what they can afford. A little money expended in this way will hardly be missed, and will do you and others much good.—Prohibitionist, Lewiston, Me.

TOO RADICAL.

In a certain city there is an association called The Union Temperance Brotherhood." At the meeting speeches are generally limited to two minutes. On one occasion the following was unanimously adopted by the brotherhood:

Resolved: That the rum seller is the greatest sinner of the age.

A prohibitionist who was present being invited to give his opinion of the resolution said, "I oppose it. If chances for heaven were in the market for sale, and I were in the market to purchase, I would give a thousand times more for the rumseller's chance than for that man's who never tasted strong drink, who talks temperance, sings "Hold the Fort," and "Rescue the Perishing;" who prays for temperance, and preaches temperance three hundred and sixty four days in the year and on the three hundred and sixty fifth goes to the polls and votes the ticket of a liquor license party. The rum seller is that man's agent; in selling rum he is only doing what that man provided he should do: and in paying his tax and license fee, he shares his profits with that man."

Greatly to the relief of the brotherhood the two minute rule squelched the plain speaking prohibitionist. He sat down, and it is not at all probable that he will ever again be invited to ventilate his opinion on future resolutions of the brotherhood.—The Tap Root.

That Tap Root is too radical altogether. Why dont some one ask it to let up,and not hurt the grand cause of temperance by blating the whole truth right out at once that way. Why dont people stick to moral suasion on the drunkard, same as they used to, and let us get along peaceably and say nothing to hurt the feelings of the poor dear innocent rum seller and whisky license "Hold the Fort" voter? Why cant they pray for temperance, stay home and keep quiet?

ROCHDALE, Mass. Dec. 19, 1881.

ED. RESCUE:—In looking over some old books belonging to my uncle, I came across a book of bound tracts, published in 1812. I copy a portion of a temperance tract, for the "RESCUE" if you consider it worth republishing. "MRS. CALIFORNIA."

FATAL EFFECTS OF ARDENT SPIRITS.

"Wo unto them that rise up early in the morning, that they may follow strong drink." This passage of the sacred volume calls our attention to a subject which is but rarely the theme of the pulpit. The sin which the prophet here condemns, was not peculiar to any period or to any people. However this may be, no one can doubt, that the reprehension and warning contained in the passage are eminently applicable to our times. Open your eyes and the proof is before you, proof that is furnished in every district and village of our country, proof that can hardly fail to produce in your minds both conviction and alarm. Shall I call your attention to the decline of public morals which in too many instances, is manifested in direct contempt of God, his name, his Sabbath, and his sacred word? Such things are deeply lamented by every man who fears God, or loves his country, and such things are boldly condemned, at least by every minister, who is worthy of his office. I wish to call your attention from every other subject and fix it upon the single sin of intemperance. Like every other sinful practice which has many friends, this is often excused under fair and smooth names. But its proper "name is legion." It deserves no apology, but reprobation. It may be safely affirmed, that in this country if in no other, it has proved a greater foe to human life and happiness, than war, pestilence and famine.

How many that were born with reason, has it transformed into idiots! How many men of property and usefulness has it turned into contemptible drones! How many families has it driven from their dwellings to the streets; from affluence to indigence and woe! Still like an inundation it rises and swells around us. It breaks all restraints of authority and decency. It sweeps away our young men into infamy and the grave. It defies our laws. Now and then you see it condemned in some corner of a newspaper, or hear some solitary voice raised against it; while the mass of our citizens, our civil tribunals, our churches and many of our pulpits slumber over the horrible iniquity.

There are many whose fondness for drink is for a long time kept under restraint as scarcely to be perceived by even their intimate acquaintances. Occasionally, the appetite is indulged, with so much caution, however, and so much under the veil of circumstances, that, perhaps for years, no injury is sustained by themselves; no suspicion is excited in others; but by degrees the lurking propensity grows in strength; with slow but steady progress the habit becomes inwrot into the constitution; the man reels in the street, so callous to shame and remorse; loses the use of his limbs, his tongue, his reason; in one word, he is ruined;—health, character, body and soul ruined. Some fall under the influence of strong drink, by using it as a medicine. To remove some pain of the stomach or restore exhausted strength, is their apology for the first stages of intemperance. With others it begins by drinking at set times, and others become followers of strong drink by frequenting places of resort where they are exposed to temptation.

There by degrees, the warnings of conscience are stopped, and the fear of God extinguished. To shun the reproach of fools or to be reputed social and liberal, they sacrifice their sober judgment; resign themselves as victims, to worse than iron bondage. Strong drink impairs reason. An intoxicated man is for the time, in a complete delirium. He is as really bereft of reason as any lunatic on earth, his understanding gradually becomes torpid, the memory and all other faculties of the mind sink into mopish inactivity, till at last he becomes a sot. Would it be a sin for one to destroy his own limbs? How much more to destroy his reason. He that was born an idiot, or deprived of his senses by sickness or disaster, is to be pitied. But he that makes himself a madman or an idiot, can never be sufficiently censured. Strong drink leads to many other vices, drinking leads to gaming, to lying, perjury, profane swearing, tale-bearing, slander and contention. It extinguishes the best sensibilities of the human heart. How often does the hand of the intoxicated man—"in one rash hour—perform a deed that haunts him to the grave."

Brethren I have done. Should the sin of intemperance increase among us, I stand acquitted before God and you in having made an honest effort to arrest its progress. The discourse is committed to the faithful application of your conscience and to the blessing of God."

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED—At Oregon city, Oregon, of typhoid fever, on the 24th December 1881 Harriet Lucy, eldest daughter of Bro. Levi Leland, aged 12 years. The funeral was on Christmas day.

Very many friends will sympathize with Bro. Leland. Christmas has come to him and his, pall-laden with a pungent sorrow that no one can appreciate save those who have passed under the rod of a similar affliction. His two other dauters were also very low with the same disease. We trust the winter's sorrow may be succeeded by a budding spring, a flowering summer and a ripening autumn of happier and kindlier incidents to our bereaved brother.

The Prohibitionist (Lewiston, Me,) in a notice of our Home for Orphans, says:

"The Good Templars of California are large and powerful. They maintain a general secretary in active service all the time, who has collected about $13,000 during the year for the Home. They also sustain as their official organ the RESCUE, a weekly sixteen page paper, published at San Francisco, which is a faithful and efficient advocate of prohibition by a national and state prohibition party.

All honor to the earnestness, consistency and consecration of the Good Templars of California."

WANTED.

FOR THE YEAR 1882.

An assortment of 2,820 Coffins, mostly of cheap quality, to store away the worn-out and used-up customers and patrons of the wholesale and retail whisky, wine and beer dealers of this state.

The Coffins will be called for as required. Also,

WANTED.

2820 YOUNG FOLKS

Of both sexes, recruits to take their first steps and lessons in drinking, gambling, smoking and other bar-room accomplishments, to fill up the vacancies made by the 2,820 funerals above provided for.

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

It was proposed to issue a 20,000 edition of the RESCUE about Christmas, but as every body was preparing extra Christmas agony for the people, it was deemed best to defer this paper's extra edition till the returns of the present quarter come in. So on the 10th, or possibly the 17th, of February it may be expected, some of the correspondents of the paper, it is hoped will give their aid to make it a creditable issue, by preparing a ½ or ¾ column article. And honest advertisers can have a good show off.

DAVID C. COOK.

Be sure to read with care David C. Cook's list of excellent publications in another page. Now is the time to secure good and interesting reading for the family, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, and to fill up every bodys library. Never before was such a chance to get proper books, papers and music for the young folks. They can be had too, for about half the price that old, battered, second hand books used to cost. Every body who dont spend money for tobacco and beer, can well afford to reap the benefit of these publications: exery one who does spend for tobacco and beer ought to use twice as much money for good literature to enable him to keep his conscience from becoming too persistently troublesome.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

FARM FOR SALE.

Nine miles from Los Angeles Court House between Florence and Downey, bounded by Anaheim Railroad and Old San Gabriel river. 270 acres with 270 shares of water in San Antonio Irrigating Company. Orchard of over 2,000 apple and pear trees. House of four rooms, barn, etc., Splendid opening for large dairy business; 100 cows could be milked at a gross profit of five thousand dollars per annum.

Lands specially suitable for alfalfa—10 tons per acre per annum. A large portion of the land particularly adapted for the plum, prune, apricot, chestnut, etc., also for Muscat grapes for raisin making which would be very profitable. The whole Farm is fenced and cross fenced, and being well supplied with water, it is one of the very best Stock Ranches in Southern California. There are a few acres in Willows, Forest Grove Station is at corner and School adjoins.

$12,000 was refused for this property by late owner, who valued it at $18,000. It was sold under foreclosure mortgage and is now offered for $10,000 cash. Date of redemption is past; and an absolute and perfect title will be given.

PREMIUMS FOR CLUBS.

There were certain parties entitled during the year past to receive premiums for clubs secured for the RESCUE. It is believed they have all been ordered and paid for; but it is possible that some one or more may have been overlooked. If any one entitled to such has not received it, please drop a postal card. The Mrs. Hayes picture was to have been ready for delivery November 1st; have not heard whether it has been sent out or not.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

THE Temperance Revolution is about to issue a book to be sold at their popular price, and which will reveal the general lawlessness of the liquor traffic. The book will cover these general topics among others: The Ostracising and Abuse of Temperance Workers; Personal Abuse and Injury; Intimidation by Threats of Lawless Proceedings; Actual Destruction of Property, etc.; Bribery in Elections and Legislatures. Those possessing definite information upon any of these points which will be of value in a book of this character, are invited to communicate with The Temperanr Revolution, David C. Cook, Manager, Chicago, Ill.

A young man of strict habits and good education, and having every endorsement required, desires a situation in a mercantile establishment as assistant book-keeper, accountant or salesman. Apply to C., RESCUE Office.

David C. Cook's Sunday-School Supplies.

ENORMOUS SAVING TO SCHOOLS.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1.00, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36 besides 133 Library books, 8 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty six million copies. There is not one of our publications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c. to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1¼c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2c. a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with little lesson pictures; also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c. per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words); also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45.

Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. For better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection; books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5½ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5½ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

7½c. Packages of S. S. Reward Cards. 25c. packages of reward cards for 7½c. New designs. No. 1. Poems for children, with pictures, glazed cards, assorted tints, 24 cards, size 3x1¼. No. 2. Scripture text, with picture and verse of hymn, glazed cards, assorted tints, 48 cards, size 2½x3. No. 3. Beautiful chromatic card, floral design, short Scripture text 64 cards, size 1¾x1¾. No. 4. Scripture text, chromatic card, 96 cards, size 1¾x1⅞. No. 5 Miniature Scripture text, colored designs, 192 cards, size 7⅞x1½. No. 6. Precept, promise and verse of hymn, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 4¼x2⅝. No 7. Illuminated Scripture text and verse, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 3½x1¾. No. 8. The Lord's Prayer, floral border, glazed tinted board, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 9. Ten Commandments, floral border, glazed and tinted, 12 double cards, size 4¼x6. No. 10. Band of Hope, triple pledge, beautiful chromatic card appropriately designed, 12 cards, size 3½x1½. Prices, sample package, 10c.; three or more packages, 8½c. each; ten or more packages, 8c. each; twenty five or more packages, 7½c each. Prices include postage.

Revolution Bibles. From "Oxford" plates. Teachers' Bibles, with concordance, encyclopedia, dictionary, tables, maps, etc.—most complete teachers' Bible extant, as low as $1.30, postpaid. Gilt edge, brass bound gift Bible, with clasp and tasseled book mark for 60c. postpaid. Magnificent gift Bible, new pattern, round corners, etc., for $1.25, equal to any $4.50 gift Bible.

Lesson Commentary. On the International Lessons for 1882. Covering not only the lessons for the whole year, but the entire book of Mark, and accompanied by the "Revised Version Text," a revised reprint of the "Cambridge Scholars' Commentary." Prepared by G. F. Maclear, D. D., and J. J. S. Perowne, D. D. Price, 10c., postpaid. 5 or more, 9c. each; 25 or more, 8c. each. Book is put up in strong postal card covers. No similar work for less than $1. We also publish at same rates a complete Bible Dictionary of two thousand complete articles, 512 columns, and nearly 100 illustrations. The "Teacher's Compendium," nine books on teaching, in one; The "Ideal Sunday-school;" "Sunday-school Management" (a choice book for teachers); "Word Pictures," and "Normal Half-Hours."

Holiday Lesson Calendar. For scholars and teachers. 12 beautiful chromatic cards, 5x8 inches, one for each month, containing the International Lessons for the whole year, the Home Readings, Memory Verses, lesson pictures, verses and maxims tending to promote nobler living, etc. The whole making a beautiful and inexpensive present for the whole school, or for a class. Punched for hanging up, sold at the following marvelously cheap prices: Single calendar (the 12 cards), 10c. 5 or more calendars, 8c. each; 25 or more calendars 6½c. each. 100 or more, 5½c. each. Ready in December.

Alphabets. FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S DECORATIONS, etc., etc., on good paper. Style 1 are printed in red. Style 2 in blue. Style 1 are eight inches long and proportionate width. Style 2 are six inches long and proportionate width. We send five alphabets of Style 2 for 25c., or five alphabets of Style 1 for 30c., 10 alphabets, five of each, for 50c.

Holiday Reward Books. Reprints of choicest $1 to $1.50 story books in holiday binding, 12 kinds from one to twenty-five copies at 12c each postpaid—25 to 50, 11½c. each postpaid—50 to 100 copies, 11c. each postpaid—100 copies or more, 10½c. each postpaid. Imported Holiday reward books from 5c. up to $1. Send cash for samples, stating prices.

35c. Sunday-School Record Book. THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL ENGINEER. Space for 50 classes, reports for each Sunday in the year, cabinet of printing press helps, containing 96 blanks—all for 35c. by mail, postpaid.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:
Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

Anaheim.—Rev. Mr. Robinson kindly drove me over. Presbyterian church occupied for prayer meeting, which I led by request. Some earnest prayers for temperance were offered. Next night, lectured to small but very attentive audience. As no one here that I know of, subscribes for the Rescue, and I am sure no one who reads it will ever want to live in such a wine-cursed town, it is not worth while to write more, except to say that any accredited temperance laborer will find Messrs J. B. Saxton, Guy Smith and a few others, earnest Christian and temperance people,

Artesia.—Bro. Wm. Miller, formerly of Lompoc, came for me with his buggy. Will is an earnest and fearless temperance worker, and his speech at District Lodge was one of the best made there. Sorry I cant say anything promising of the lodge here. As in so many places, the older and more influential members of society stand back and so a majority of the lodge are not full of the deeply earnest spirit of true Good Templars. But with the Millers, Gillettes and others in the lodge, and Bro. and Sister Olmstead and daughter, once of Carpenteria, ready to join, there may be a new move made. Started a good Band of Hope, Bro. Olmstead Supt. Did not lecture at Norwalk because it seemed more needful to meet with the lodge—very pleasant meeting. Wm. Miller, agent for Rescue.

Los Nietos.—A large school district; Bro. James of Downey Lodge had taken pains to go over and secure a place to speak in, and Mr. Geo. K. Miller attended to lighting up &c. Very good audience and fine attention. Next time I come, with two or three days work we may institute a lodge. Am under many obligations to the Good Templar family of Venables, for good entertainment, taking me round in their new wagon, and other favors.

Downey:—Ever since I lectured here before, lodge has been gaining in numbers; its influence has been felt on the Sunday law and the saloons nominally closed, but some would keep open the back doors and another arrest has just been made. We have good enough laws if citizens would only see them enforced. Christmas holidays prevented obtaining anything but meagre audiences, especially as the committee on advertising forgot it. Had a very pleasant Lodge meeting and initiated my friend Mr. E. B. Higgins who is going to prove a valuable help to the Order. Lodge has a new organ and is getting up a Dramatic Entertainment "Ten nights in a Bar Room."

Los Angeles.—District Lodge met and discussed details of work. Sorry that so few delegates attend; Los Angeles ought to imitate some of the District Lodges further north in attendance, zeal and plans. Next one is to meet at El Monte on 22d, Feb. and a great effort will be made to have Sisters Stevens and Richardson present. Let every lodge in the counties of Los Angeles and San Bernardino be fully represented. At noon, the Sisters furnished a splendid semi-tropical lunch.

I lectured on Saturday, Sunday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights but, with my usual Los Angeles ill fortune, secured but moderate audiences and little enthusiasm, owing to the holidays engrossing public attention; but the brethren think some good was done. Had the pleasure of addressing the students and friends of the University of Southern Cal. under the able Presidency of Rev. M. M. Bovard, and I think a lodge will eventually be formed in that part of the city. Dr. Mc Curdy and wife have started an excellent Band of Hope. Secured several subscribers to Rescue, and David C. Cook's books and papers. This Banner Lodge numbers 270 and we obtained a number of new names for membership. If Sisters Stevens and Richardson (the Moody and Sanky of our Order) come down for District Lodge, they ought to open a campaign in this city, there is much need for it and they only can draw full houses and arouse enthusiasm to the pitch of securing 100 subscribers to the Rescue and 100 new members and I hope to hear that they have done so.

Santa Barbara Lodge.—Glad to hear good news from this lodge. Bro. C. W. Farr, pastor M. E. church, is a faithful member: now Bro. Dunbar, pastor of M. E. Church South, and wife have joined; other heads of families I trust will join and help those young people who are manifesting zeal and activity. They have invited the different pastors to hold union meetings and preach temperance sermons once a month. A great need in this county is fraternal visits. Santa Ana lodge got up a good Christmas supper and invited neighboring lodges and had a very pleasant time. If Sister E. P. Stevens go to District Lodge at El Monte, 22d Feb., delegates from all lodges should be there, and then get her to spend several days at Santa Ana as a central rallying point for all lodges in that part of the county. She wont have time to visit each lodge, but perhaps will El Monte, Los Angeles and Santa Ana.

Castroville, Jan. 6, 1881.

Ed. Rescue:—Two nights of meeting in Castroville, fog did not deter the people from filling the church; after second meeting, repaired to lodge room, and eight were initiated into Good Templary. Enclosed find subscribers for the Rescue. Castroville Lodge has been vigilant and has compelled the saloons to abide by the Sunday closing law; Bro. J. F. Burkholder Pastor M. E. Church was the brave man who dared enter a complaint against the League of Freedom saloons, who violated the law; four cases have been tried and each time a conviction has resulted. The last case, a Swede, who had openly rebelled against Sunday closing and appealed for Jury trial, has been decided against him; all these cases have been tried at the County Seat, Salinas. In this last, the Swedish law breaker threatened dire vengeance on Bro. Burkholder, and Good Templars generally, and after the decision of the case, attacked Constable Cassidy with a dirk knife; to use the words of the constable, "When he saw the muzzle of my pistol he subsided." This Swede saloonist is a fair specimen of the graduates of the League of Freedom School. These Guiteaus of liberty, may find to their cost that there are some rights which even rebel saloonists are forced to respect. The Castroville Good Templars are a vigilante committee and do not propose to give quarter to Sunday law breakers.

The Band of Hope will become a feature here; Miss Annie Burland and Mrs. Parker are devoted to the childen's interests, and are thoro converts to education for the children. The Good Templars lodges that do not support our official Organ, the Rescue, and scatter temperance seed, in temperance literature are of but little benefit to their communities, and generally end by quarreling or dancing themselves out of existence. The survival of the fittest holds good and the fittest are the working lodges.

H. R. HUGHES.

Since my last letter was written, I have been to six mile house, Shingle Springs, Latrobe, Folsom, Forest Home, Buena Vista and Lancha Plana; at the latter place, organized Mazeppa Lodge with 20 Charter members, Mrs. Kate Adams L. D. In the other places, rain and holidays hindered my accomplishing much.

Several names were given and some interest manifested in having lodges in the places mentioned. Rain and mud count nothing in the lecturer's reports, but they count something in his experience. It the "Good Man" from Bodie is not satisfied with his experience in the Arctic regions, I hope the Executive will give him 60 days through the old mining regions in an open buggy that he may be baptized and be able to repeat his creed.

But the best experience is the consciousness that we are educating the young of California, and bringing light and joy into so many homes cursed by strong drink.

Lancha Plana, Jan. 9, 1882.

San Francisco, Jan. 10, 1882.

Several addresses before S. S. and lodges in this city, have been given during the last two weeks, we hope with good results. Three days we worked in the state teachers' convention, distributing Rescues and Band of Hope rituals. Every teacher in the convention was supplied with one or more copies of the latter, and many promised to help in this children's work. Quite a number was found who believed that the teacher must aid in the moral as well as the intellectual welfare of our youth. The Rescue was highly commended for its appearance, matter and improved spelling. Its editor was considered as having passed out of the ranks of old-fogyism, or as never having entered them.

Rev. Geo Beatty gave on Sunday one of his eminently practical sermons, calling attention to the fact that the Christian cannot ignore the world in which he lives, and the fact that he must work in that world, if he would enjoy life and would see the condition of his fellowmen improved—it is his duty to work and not to stand by lazy and become a chronic grumbler. Let every man so work and live as to paint for himself such a picture as that upon which he shall never be ashamed to look.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

Ed. Rescue:—The next session of Amador Co. D. Lodge will be held at Oleta, Friday, Feb. 3d, at 10 o'clock, A. M. Jno. W. Perry,
Dist. Deputy.

Calaveras District lodge will meet with Charity Lodge, No. 212 at Copperopolis, Sat. Feb. 4, 1882. There are now 17 lodges in the county in good working order and a large attendance is expected.
C. Duffy. D. S.

Ed. Rescue;—I spent my holiday week in work for our Order. Left Oakland on Monday the 26th of December. Spent that evening with Santa Clara Lodge: found them in their new quarters. It is a large commodious hall, and will compare favorably with any in the state. The lodge too is one of your working lodges, tho the members are mostly young they are training the heart and head in preference to the feet. On New Years eve they had their holiday tree; we got our portion of the goodies before hand.

Tuesday lectured at Saratoga, Wednesday at Los Gatos. After lecture met with lodge, found them doing good work. Bro. Moody, Presbyterian minister and Bro. Hancock, Methodist, with their families are members of the lodge. It is the literary society of the town. Miss James, a talented young lady is the W. C. T. They are planning for free meetings. Bro. Hulson, L. D. is a good balance wheel.

Thursday and Friday I spent in Saratoga organizing a lodge on the latter evening. It was hard work owing to an attempt at organization last spring. But we shall look for a good work from this one, as both the ministers of the place, Bros. Palmer and Pollard with other staunch and leading men and women in the community have taken the work in hand.

Saturday returned to Santa Clara, where I met Bro. Alexander L. D. of Bay View lodge who took me to his home in the country. In the evening met with the lodge, conferred the 3d degree.

Sunday night lectured. This is a country lodge, no saloon near, but they feel they have a work to do to train the young men and women as well as the boys and girls in the principles of temperance and virtue, so that when they go forth from their homes to mingle with the world they will be armed against the wily inducements of the whisky dealer as well as found in the ranks of the trained soldiers of the temperance cause that are marching against this deadliest foe of the human race.

Monday eve. the 2d of Jan. found me at home with a hope that the week had been spent with profit to the cause. F. J. Culver.

The Temperance Almanac is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages; list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade Street, New York.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

CORRECTION.—On page 186. The 20,000 edition should read, 17th February and not January.

MRS. M. E. RICHARDSON has been busy sending off supplies to meet the many orders which had accumulated in her hands while waiting for the completion of the new ritual. As the first edition of 5,000 has been thus early exhausted, it is presumed all who ordered them have been supplied. The new ones will not be so long in the preparation, as the forms are stereotyped.

THE North American Review will present in its February number, to be published on the 15th of the present month, Part III. of its series of articles on "The Christian Religion." It will be from the pen of Geo. P. Fisher, the eminent professor of ecclesiastical history in the Yale Divinity School,—as thorough a scholar and as able a defender of the Christian faith as this country affords. A powerful presentation of the claims of Christianity is expected.

NEW VERSION.—The Chronicle has some quotations which object to the new version as teaching "fatal doctrinal errors" in changing the expression. "All scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable," to "every scripture inspired of God is also profitable. There can be no doubt that the translators who have given the new version, ought to be and must be more competent that those of King James and have better and more light and ancient authority to guide them. The only question now can be of their integrity. In the instance alluded to, the old version made the bible say something which appears self-evidently false; all scripture (all written matter) includes all the profane and heathen legends and false systems of religion; and the seeming assertion as rendered in the old version, that Mahomedanism and Buddism and Homers Iliad were inspired of God, is a stumbling block that is better removed from the bible if has no right there.

LEAGUE OF FREEDOM:—On Saturday evening last a vagrant known as Jonathan Wilde was arrested for drunkenness and died same evening of several years slavery to the League of Freedom. A manuscript in a most beautiful penmanship which he had about him stated that he was born in the county of Cork, in 1826, enlisted in the Enniskillen Dragoons when 16 years of age, was an active participant in the charge of the light brigade at Balaklava, and at the battle of Inkerman. A companion stated that he had been clerk in a bank at New York etc., and wrote a very beautiful hand. The story in the Chronicle, a full column long, bears a suspicion of a little of the sensational in some of its particulars, but the fact remains undoubted that the society which calls itself the League of Freedon has sent one more of its wretched ensnared dupes to a miserable death.

THE League of Free —— is actively at work in Oakland, and so is the League of Decency and Honesty. The latter had a spirited meeting on Monday evening; addresses by Judge Nye, Col. Babcock and others. The proprietors of the Oakland Opera Garden, or Hoodlum Garden, have been arrested for violation of the Sunday law. The outlaw league numbers 300 in Alameda county, and as they blacguarded, and spit, and pushed the women off the local option field in 1874, they doubtless expect to triumph again. In Wheatland, the League of outlaws has been hiring notorious scoundrels to burn mill, houses and property of various kinds belonging to a Mr. Chick, the foremost citizen of the place, because he favors the Sunday law. These ruffians are doing not a whit worse in burning mills, and barns and houses, and assassinating good men, than they do every day in the act of selling their infernal murderous poisons.

The Temperance Banner, Little Rock, Ark., and the RESCUE, agree as to the latter's notice of Zions Day Star. The students of the problem how to rid this world of the present dominion of Satan, can and do feel interested in the study of the law and the prophets and the ancient history of both, but the RESCUE has little respect for a religion or a religious organ, which has no stock or interest in the present tremendous struggle in which the christianity of to-day is engaged for existence;—which has nothing to do with the temperance reform or has not heard of it. A religious newspaper silent on the temperance question or at war with the modes and principles of temperance reform, is actually in arms against christianity and all the best interests of humanity.

IN the allusion recently made in this journal, to the Signs of the Times combining with the League of Freedom to defy the law and sell rum on Sunday, mention was made that it was the "organ of the Seventh Day Adventists;" that was done to distinguish it from a very excellent religious paper of the same name, which comes to this office; not to implicate that sect in a sympathy with the League of Freedom or with their organ in this particular. It is presumed that as a general thing, Adventists of all kinds are not sympathisers with leagues of debauchery and outlawry, and only a blind bigotry can make a few individuals of them so. To find them in such a role, makes them conspicuous.

BRO. JOS. W. BEATTY of Carrollton, Illinois, writes that he was once W. C. T. of Ark Lodge No. 386, in California, and hearing of the present status of the RESCUE, he desires "if that is so," to become a subscriber, and hopes the progress of the good old cause in the good old state may continue ever upward as it used to be when he was here. Every now and then we hear of some good fruit growing somewhere East, North or South, of which the seed was planted in California. Bro. Beatty's good wishes are returned with interest and we hope as he writes with the letter head of Carrollton Lodge No. 393, he is aiding, with California vim, the extermination of the great enemy of mankind.

THERE is some trouble brewing in the camp of the enemy. Judging from the tone of the whisky press, there is a deep laid plot, which portends evil in some unexplained manner. They affect to make light of the coming struggle, and think thereby to deceive us. We warn the people that they must be on their guard. They will spend untold amounts to defeat the amendment in Iowa. Remember that in this fight we are battling the entire whisky ring of the United States. It is a death grip which prompts them to hold on to their interest here, and, rather than lose, they will make the hardest fight that we have yet had.

Success of prohibition in Iowa is death to the liquor traffic interest in Illinois, Indiana and Ohio. Let us not disappoint those who, tremblingly, watch our progress. Hard work and united action are imperatively necessary, if we want to win. Stir up your amendment clubs; circulate temperance literature; attend your meetings; give your money freely. Our cause is the cause of God and humanity.—N. Western News.

THE REV. C. C. BURNETT, of Iowa, has a mission. He is lecturing against prohibition in Illinois, working in the interests of satan to keep open the mills which turn out a daily grist of murderers, thieves, suicides, maniacs, which would, if unresisted, reduce the American people below the level of the Chinese. No doubt there is large money in the job. Probably there is no other employment in which a minister of talent could make so much money as he could right now, by lecturing for the whisky legion and the devil. No doubt they would pay enormous salaries, and furnish a brass band. So after all, in place of this man disgracing the profession, it is exceedingly honorable to them, that the Burnetts and Crosbys and Freeman Clarkes are all told only about half a dozen or less. Lawyers and editors can be had almost any time, in any quantity, to fight for whisky against country, if paid for it.

COLORED LODGE OF GOOD TEMPLARS.—At the Baptist church in this city, on Monday evening, a colored lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars was organized, with forty charter members. Rev. Peter Powers of Chico, a colored State Deputy, was the organizing officer. He was assisted in the work by members of Marysville Lodge, No. 25. Rev. C. A. Bateman, District Lecturer of the Order, made an eloquent appeal, and excellent music was dispensed by the church choir. The name of Cornelia Lodge was chosen. An invitation was extended to the members of the new lodge to visit other lodges of the Order in this vicinity. Cornelia Lodge is the third colored lodge of Good Templars in the state.—Appeal.

WHAT WAS IT

And I saw a spirit seated
Upon judgment throne divine
(How it got there, let those answer
That delight in phrases fine)
Upon earth perditions legions,
Snared and murdered innocence.
Quoth this spirit, whining piteous,
Inscrutable Providence!

Iniquity served its dishes!
Pious fraud prepared its food,
Self-assurance gave it garment,
Stolen feom the naked truth.
And it feasted like a raven,
Upon dead. With great pretense
Quoth this spirit, lifting eyelid,
"Inscrutable providence!"

Heaven heard, and sent an angel—
Zadkiel came the Lord to serve,
Touched with lance (which ousted Laban
Oft before) its pocket nerve.
Anathema! curse forever
Be on him that touched my pence!
Cried this spirit, quoting never,
"Inscrutable Providence."

And it fled before a vision,
Rising in the morning sky,
Of discernment true of duty,
Unto all that love a lie—
Favor evil—mock religion—
With lofty prate devoid of sense;
Never more did quote this spirit,
"Inscrutable Providence!"

What was it? Go, search the scriptures;
Everything is found therein,
From the image of salvation,
Unto viper race of sin.
But to guide thee, child, to knowledge,
Eye of faith alone may see;
It was image of the spirit—
Leaven of the Pharisee.

Never trust to outward vesture,
Outward varnish—outward faith,
For the chief of all the devils,
Masketh visage for parade
Of his piety, and election
Unto state and rule divine,
While those there be that worship
Idols draped in outward sign.

LIGHT ON THE SUGAR QUESTION.

The Chronicle has been trying of late to create a disturbance about what it calls the Sugar Monopoly. It made out a very good case and showed very conclusively that the Hawaiian treaty was made an indirect instrument for the oppression of the laborer on the Island plantations, for gross imposition upon the Island sugar planters who do or who dont wear the Spreckles collar; also that it is a means of fleecing the U. S. Government of over two millions annually and giving no return, and after all that, making the people of this coast pay about 1¼ cents a pound more for their sugar than it would cost them if imported duty paid from New York and there was no Claus-monopoly.

People really thot we had a grievance till the News Letter turned on the electric light and showed the follies and fallacies of the Chronicle. No matter how capable and intelligent they may consider themselves, people should always wipe their spectacles nicely and put them on, before they sit down to think over any grave subject. The News Letter shows that it is a profound advantage to the people of this coast to have a sugar king here, that can show dollar for dollar with any of the Eastern sugarpotentiaries, and the easiest and cheapest way to do it is to let him have an extra profit of four or five cents a pound on the sugar we use; who cares for that trifle when beer can be had in San Francisco at five cents a glass?

It shows that Mr. Spreckels spends most of his time in studying out philanthropic problems; increasing the export trade of the whole United States at his own expense: paying the railroad company $100,000 a year bonus, to induce them to put a prohibitory freight tarif on eastern sugar, and discourage eastern encroachment on California rights. The Spreckelsonian philosophy demands of its author the sacrifice of purchasing all the sugar raised on the islands, whether he can dispose of it or not; because if he did not buy it, who would? Then having supplied this coast and his export market by sea, he has a surplus which he sends to Utah and Idaho etc. to circumvent the attrocious avarice of the eastern sugar monsters who oppress the people there. He pays railroad freight on his sugar to those isolated countries and then undersells the New York tyrant there; selling his sugar about three cents less a pound to those poor fellows than he does to pampered Californians—thus incurring a personal charity loss of about four cents a pound, provided his sales here are at cost.

When you come to read the News Letter's explanation you are forced to the conviction that the sugar kings here in place of being an incubus of selfish tyranny, really wear sackcloth undershirts and hard, uncooked peas in their boots, and every day they practice a couple of hours at the stake of self-martyrdom. It is pleasant to have one's uncomfortable prejudices removed, but how much more pleasant it must be to hear and feel and see and count over the sweet influences that have been potent in enlightening the various defenders of the sugar power and bringing them out to see and confess the truth as it has been made manifest to the seat of their intellects.

THE PILOTS.

By J. R.

The pilots of the total abstinence cause do more sound, saving work, than is generally seen or heard of, or than they get credit for. These are they who go out from the lodges of the several abstinence societies and bring the falling and the fallen to safe and pleasant moorings within the cheering circles. They also go to those who have not yet entered the abstinence harbor and stimulate them to do so for their lasting comfort and profit in the troublous voyage of life. Have the readers of this, ever made an ocean voyage? If so, they will realize the anxiety with which the pilot is expected especially when the ship is off a strange coast or the weather foggy, flags and lights go up to signal that a pilot is wanted and every eye is keenly searching for the answering response and when seen "the pilot is coming" passes from lip to lip in joyful tones. There are many steadfast pilots, cruizing amidst the raging billows of intoxicating drink.

One signal comes from a mother who wanted her son and daughter moored in the safe harbor of sobriety; another from a terror stricken wife whose husband is foundering in the trough of the poisonous sea; another from a wayward brother or sister who have parted from their anchor of faith, and storm tossed and rapidly sinking, seek to regain the protecting harbor. Such signals are promptly answered by the watchful pilots. They are soon by the side of the weak and fainting strugglers in the intoxicating depths, and giving them strength and resolution, guide them to the pure waters of peace and plenty.

But they dont do this without unceasing patience and persuasion. The pilots have not always plain sailing. The liquor sea has many bars, all treacherous and deceptive; and until these are clearly passed, the pilot oftentimes slowly, and always cautiously works his devoted course.

The savage exultingly counts his scalps; the general his victories, and the statesman his triumphs; but the noblest count of them all, both here and hereafter, is that of the pilot who numbers the drunkards and families that he has saved from the horrors of the demon sea.

P. T. Barnum estimates that every grogshop in Bridgeport Conn. depreciates adjoining property on an average $5.000. They have done more than that in Vallejo. There have been for the past 11 years there an average of about 80 grogshops and they have not only arrested all the improvements that should have accrued from a yearly expenditure of half a million to a million a year by the U. S. Government, but have made all the property there really worth about one fifth to one tenth the value it had 11 years ago. At least 25 millions of cash have been disbursed in Vallejo in the last 25 years and the grogshops have so utterly cursed every enterprise and beggared every honest business, that there is not in that town one dollar's worth of property of any kind, for which some outsider who earned his money elsewere did not invest a dollar there and sink it. The grogshop has done far more damage than to destroy and neutralize all the advantages derived from the Navy Yard; it has killed every good interest there. The drunkeries of Vallejo have cost and cursed the town and prevented its growth and progress more than 25 millions would now recover. They have rendered the grandly enriching advantages of the Navy Yard of less value to the town and the state than one small shoe factory is to a community in the State of Maine. And altho every man engaged in honest business or trade there, sees and owns the utter ruin the rumsellers are making, not one of them dares to open his head or grumble at the few crumbs the drunkard making outlaw permits him to pick up under his table. Great is king rum when he can plunder a community of 25 millions and then sit down on it and establish his throne more securely than ever, and no one dares whisper a complaint.

CALIFORNIA BIBLE SOCIETY.

The Trustees of this society at a meeting held on the 6th inst. determined to make a thoro exploration of this city thru Rev. Gilbert T. Holcomb and and Robert Cooke, Esq. for the purpose of supplying with the holy Scriptures all families and individuals who may be found destitute of them. The colporters will be distributing agents only, and will not solicit funds. This society has no paid agent raising money; the trustees therefore hope that collections will be taken in all the churches to aid the work. Wm. Abbott Sec.

John Thompson, Dist. Supt.

"The two following items will be found interesting; they are from the Etna Post January 7, which is published away up in Siskiyou Co. and appears to have a very level head at work upon it:

FACTS AND FIGURES. THE SUM EXPENDED ANNUALLY FOR CARDS AND WHISKY BY ETNAITES.

It is with no degree of pride that we place the following facts and figures before the public, but do so merely to show the outside world that Etna persistently clings to the customs of '49. Last Thursday we interviewed our merchants and ascertained that their combined sales of cards in the year past amounted to 63 gross, which at wholesale prices brot them $1,764. Most of the cards were sold to saloon men, who retailed them to their customers at 50 cents per deck, at which figure they received $4,536. This is an enormous sum, but it is correct in every particular. Now for the whisky. Allowing only eight barrels to each separate dealer in that article (which is a very low estimate, altho three dealers said their sales were about that,) gives us 40 barrels, which were consumed in the past year, and the wholesale price is about $7,000. At retail it probably brot $20,000. The amount of wine, beer and gin that is drank in a year, would be hard to estimate, altho we believe it would exceed the amount expended annually for whisky. We have but a population of 400 people, men, women and children, and the amount of money expended in Etna in one year for cards and drinks of all kinds, if divided equally, would allow one hundred and five dollars for each of these 400 people. This is not a temperance harangue, but merely some facts and figures.

A few more such years as the present has been and we shall see woman in congress. It has been a year in which woman suffragists have gained more victories than in the whole decade that has preceded it. In several states legislation in their interest has been secured that they have hardly dared to hope for so soon, and in one state a great political party has admitted a woman as delegate to its state convention. In several states, as for instance Colorado, Rhode Island, Iowa and Connecticut, bills have passed one branch of the legislature, giving to woman full rights of suffrage with the "brutes of creation," but defeated in the other branches by insignificant majorities. This is a long step in advance of any previous accomplishment. Maine has made woman qualified to serve on school boards, and Vermont has made them eligible to the high and honorable office of town clerk. Indiana has passed a constitutional amendment giving woman full suffrage, but the subject has got to be acted upon by the state legislature to be in full force. Iowa has made woman eligible to the office of county recorder. Nebraska has granted school suffrage and submitted a constitutional amendment to the people giving her full rights with men. Oregon has done the same. It is evident that all the agitation during the past ten years has not been in vain, altho when it was commenced the advocates of the measure were regarded as little better than lunatics."

It was scarcely necessary to state that the former was not a temperance harangue; but a few temperance harangues would be of much service in Etna.

The Independent.—A good many temperance and other papers contain flourishing advertisements of the N. Y. Sun and the Independent. The Sun is an able secular paper, $1 a year for the weekly, and is well worth the money. The Independent professes to be a religious paper; claims credit for fighting slavery in the past, and is going to fight mormonism, for civil service reform and pure politics. It has 22 distinct departments edited by 22 specialists, and has not room for a word favorable to temperance; it is $3 a year, and for that money you can get three good family papers. The best one to let alone is the religious paper which ignores temperance, pats Dr. Crosby on the back, proves the Maine law a failure and declares the Savior was a patron and friend of the drink traffic. This ad is free.

THE MRS. HAYES PICTURE.

The engraving which was promised in November has been delayed by circumstances which could not be controlled, and for which no one can be held responsible. While the committee greatly regret this, yet it is very grateful to the subscribers who have waited so patiently what may appear a long time; yet in reality the work has been pressed with great rapidity, considering the style of it.

The committee take great pleasure in announcing that the plate has been completed and is very satisfactory, and has received the highest encomiums from art critics and connoisseurs, as Mr. Huntington, President of the National Academy; Mr. Claghorn, President of the Pennsylvania Academy, and others.

The impressions will be printed and sent out as fast as possible. But we must even here beg somewhat of patience, for only twelve can be finished in a day, but each will receive in turn, as their subscriptions came in.

We trust there will now be a new enthusiasm and much interest for this beautiful testimonial to a noble and heroic stand for principle. We shall need more money to complete the payment for the engraving, and we are very desirous to lay the foundation for a literary fund which shall be a benefaction to the total abstinence cause the country over.

In subscribing for this picture every one will receive full value; indeed, judges are finding fault with us for giving so fine a work for so small a sum, far less than such could be purchased from the regular dealer. But the small profit on many sales will make a grand endowment for a permanent fund to be used in the distribution of temperance literature.

THE HOME PROTECTIONISTS.

BY FRANCES E. WILLARD OF CHICAGO, PRES. OF LAKE BLUFF CONVOCATION.

The poison habits of a nation can only be cured by an appeal to the intellect thru science, to the heart thru sympathy, and to the conscience thru religion. The manufacture and traffic in those poisons which foster and produce these habits can only be suppressed by law. But law, without an intelligent, energetic and well organized political party, which shall place in power men committed by character and influence to its enforcement, is at first impotent and at last ridiculous. To build up such a party in the interest of constitutional and statutory prohibition has long been the purpose and the work of a few temperance pioneers in almost every state. But the rank and file of the army have not seconded this brave attempt, because while equally sincere they have not been equally clear sighted.

Seven years ago the great crusade brought a mighty reinforcement to the field, and as a result of the organization which followed, the womanhood of Christ's church is being slowly marshalled into line for systematic temperance work. Six years ago, as a result of their awakened thot, aroused purpose and bitter experience of defeat, the Home Protection movement was started by temperance women in the West, and has been in some form endorsed by almost every state and by the National Women's Christian Temperance Union. This movement was based on the conviction that the utmost influence of woman, as the helpmate of man, would be essential to the success of prohibition, and that to this end the influence must be condensed in the electric battery of the ballot box, since thus only could it be brot to bear on the tingling wires of law.

Last August at the Lake Bluff Convocation, temperance workers from twelve states, some of them representing the Home Protection movement, and others the prohibition party, sought to unify these two-fold enterprises, and to bring these confluent streams into one channel. The Home Protectionists declared for an independent party, and avowed the same principles as the Prohibitionists with this modification in their practical workings, viz.: That woman's ballot as a means was to be not only welcomed, but worked for, since by its help alone in their opinion can the independent party ever achieve success. Their watchword is, "recruit your soldiers before you go into the battle." Indiana, Nebraska and Oregon have already secured preliminary legislation on this line. Massachusetts, Ohio, Minnesota and Illinois are working in the same direction and with less opposition than if prohibition were the direct and immediate goal.

The overtures of the Lake Bluff Convocation to the Prohibition Party, while most respectful and appreciative, in view of its greater age and earlier perception of "the heavenly vision" did not come from new recruits nor dress-parade soldiers; but rather from earnest and experienced campaigners who yield to none in loyalty and practical devotion to the great common cause. Moreover they were conscious that in proffering the services of their own great active camp, they had strong claims to consideration in the one request they made, viz.: That the resultant force of this new combination should bear a name their powers had made honorable, and which had proved to the womanhood of America the most persuasive battle cry that has ever yet sounded in their ears. This is evinced by the fact that already the W. C. T. Unions of Illinois, Maine and New Hampshire have formally avowed their allegiance to the Lake Bluff platform, while Pennsylvania, Vermont, Delaware and Maryland have sent resolutions of cordial sympathy with the undertaking, and every state (unless we except Michigan and New York) would; to an absolute certainty, have done this if there had been opportunity to bring it before them.

The proposed methods of building up this party until, not long hence, it shall hold the balance of power in many localities, and later on in state and nation are easily explained. Its central purpose is to pledge the individual voter. In this work our local W. C. T. Unions will be of great service, and can combine their efforts with any and all other societies. First; Pledge such of the best as we can secure, to attend an independent primary meeting, held not in a saloon but in the schoolhouse, or reading room, or home. There temperance men will be chosen as candidates. Then thoroly canvass the community and secure the largest possible number of pledges to support these candidates. Accompany the work by the circulation of temperance lit erature and holding prayer mass meetings. No person of intelligence will deny that this is womanly work to strive thus for the protection of home and tempted loved ones by seeking to enlist the sympa and help of our individual voters.

The issues for which this party will labor will vary with varying localities and sentiments. Here it will be the question of license or no license; there of delegates to county, district, state or national conventions; in another place the officers to whom is committed the execution of the law. In many cases, especially at the West, the pledge will be to vote for legislators who will place in woman's hands the weapon of power to protect her home from the tyranny of political parties, which are committed to fasten the dram shop like a leech upon our Christian civilization.

To this party we can belong as consistent elements. In all its deliberations we can share, and in its nominations bear our part; but its candidates and voters must be men, except in those states where women are admitted to the partial or complete ballot.

Women of my country! will you not welcome the advent of a party to which your relation can be so helpful, so vital and inspiring? Is there any reason in the nature of things, why we should not be active in the building up of a great political power in this land which shall help to answer the unanswered prayer.

To-day the Brewer's Congress forecasts at every session, the decisions to be ratified at the next United States Congress in all legislation that affects the brewers' interests. Today the Republican governor of the Crusade state is a man publicly endorsed by the liquor dealers as their friend and favorite candidate. To-day America stands in the arena of politics, and around her reel and struggle the hordes of ignorance and sensuality which, by their blurred and muddled ballots, bring dishonor to her bright escutcheon and shame upon her flag. With imploring look she turns to us, patriots as we are, and daughters of her glorious heroes. On some of us, at least she shall not cast that look in vain.

The Genius of the Home implores us by its sacred cause that lacks assistance, and its wrong that needs resistance, by its crumbling defences, and the awful cruelty and terror which the liquor traffic introduces into its sweet fair sanctuary—and that tender voice of pleading we cannot disregard.

The Master whom we love, against whose church Satan fights with an army recruited from every one of the 200,000 dram shops that curse our land, looks toward us with the tenderness that beamed on Mary's eyes when she cried out Rabboni—and waits to see if, even to the taking up of this last cross, we will attest our loyalty and love. "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," will ere long be the answer of Christian womanhood—Come and lead us on to victory.

Supreme is the success of that reformer who dies a martyr to the cause for which he lived. Henceforth the hallow of his crown lights up the world. The Home Protection Party will not triumph until it has not only heroes but martyrs on its shining scroll, but its ultimate victory is as sure as Christ is true.

Then tarry not in all the plain, but speak unto the children of Israel that they go forward.

IT CAN BE DONE.

But how can a woman, already overburdened with care and domestic duties, take up, in addition to all the rest, this temperance work? The answer is, what has been done can be done, and thousands of hard-working wives and mothers have compassed the matter.

First, then, is the determination to devote one hour each week to the regular meeting. Here, by prayer and mingling of hearts, desire is kindled, faith is strengthened, and you go home to do a great deal of praying during the coming week, which doesn't interfere in the least with the housework or care of the children. Then, somehow, a little time will be found to "read up" on the subject, while the washing, and ironing, and baking and sweeping, and the thousand and one things that occupy a housekeeper's hands and feet, but not necessarily much of her head, will progress just as satisfactorily, and with much less weariness, as you think over what has been read.

By and by these prayers and efforts of yours and your co-workers will begin to tell for good upon the community. You will notice perhaps that your pastor prays more fervently for the drunkard and the drur kard-maker.

You'll be surprised, tho it is just the thing you have been praying and working for, when some poor fellow, who has long been looked upon as a "hopeless case," is found, sitting clothed and in his right mind, at the Master's feet. How your heart will leap for joy as you see the young men, among whom, perhaps, is your son, for whose safety you have trembled, coming out squarely on the side of total abstinence. And more than a thousand-fold will you feel repaid for all it has cost you when you thus hear the tread of the on-marching temperance hosts, and feel that you have helped to swell the ranks of this grand army.—Our Women.

THE MOTHER'S PLACE IN THE GREAT REFORM.

There is one abiding consolation growing out of the present phase of the temperance reform, and that is, that with the women of the land rallying for the cause, the next generation must inevitably be more sober than those which have preceded it.

The writer of this can conceive of no worse horror on this earth than that of the shrinking and heart-broken wife, waiting with her little ones in trembling horror after night-fall, the mad shout and drunken entrance of one, crazed perhaps to blows and murder—or attempted murder—no one near to protect them from the assault.

Some writer says that "If there could be one generation of English mothers to take the place of the Turkish, there would be no more Turks," so great is the power that woman exerts in the training and education of her children.

Acting upon this hint, let every woman in the land who sees the curse that drunkenness brings home to families, so train those entrusted to her that they shall not only be free from the curse of the vice of intemperance themselves, but that for all time a widening influence shall be exerted, such as shall at length save the nation, and ultimately, the world from the woes of intemperance.—The Signal.

SHOW us the man who provides himself and family a temperance newspaper, and we will show you a man who never gets confused with his facts, and never confounded with the deceptive logic of license advocates.—Exchange.

VOTE ON CHANGE OF REGALIA.—The following lodges have during the past week, filed with the G. W. S., the returns of the vote had in their lodge on the question of changing the initiatory regalia of the order as required by the G. L. viz:

Nos. 115, 146, 151, 153, 238, 267, 269, 323, 367, 372, 411, 428, 441, 445 and 448.

The delinquent lodges on this account have been responding to the second notice of their delinquency quite promptly (?) There are still nearly one hundred lodges to hear from, all of whom have doubtless voted on the question of the change of regalia, as they were required to do by the Grand and R. W. Grand lodges, and it is hoped all reports will be filed before the close of the current month, as the record must be transmitted immediately thereafter to the R. W. G. S.

Up to date 269 lodges have filed reports, showing an attendance of 5,597 or an average of nearly 21 of those present, 318 voted in favor of the change of the white regalia to a metal badge. Those voting against any change numbered 4,875, while 404 did not vote at all upon the question. So far as this jurisdiction is concerned, it is almost "solid" against any partial change, innovation or tinkering of the paraphernalia of the Order.

The following lodges still remain upon the delinquent list, by reason of the non-receipt of their quarterly returns report for the term ending Oct. 31. Nos. 7, 101, 105, 106, 118, 126, 135, 142, 158, 159, 162, 173, 205, 226, 227, 240, 282, 287, 306, 346, 380, 383, 386, 394, 407, 408, 420, 426, 436, 437, 439, 447, 449, 453, 454 and 466.

In a number of instances, the lodges are known to be meeting regularly, and in others, the per capita tax has been properly forwarded or an amount to represent it presumably, but no returns have been filed; indicating carelessness upon the part of the Lodge Deputy or installing officer.

QUARTERLY CIRCULARS.—During the past week the quarterly circulars have been addressed to the Lodge Deputies of each lodge, and should now be in their possession. The distribution was made in two envelopes, one sealed and one unsealed. The password was forwarded as usual to all entitled to receive it, and those not entitled to receive the password by reason of their failure to forward the quarterly returns report of their lodge for the past or previous quarter ending Oct. 31st, will find the password coupon detached from the circular. A compliance with the law, by immediately forwarding the delinquent returns, will secure the password to these delinquents.

BOUND CONSTITUTIONS.—A limited number of the new edition of the constitutions, digest of decisions, etc., have been handsomely bound in cloth, and will be furnished by the G. W. S. to persons ordering, with their name stamped upon the cover in gilt, at fifty cents per copy. Cash must accompany all orders or no attention will be paid thereto.

BANDS OF HOPE.—Notwithstanding it has been repeatedly announced that the G. W. S. does not and cannot fill orders for badges nor rituals of the Band of Hope, frequent orders are received therefor, and sometimes with an urgent request that the articles ordered be forwarded by "return of mail," or by "next Sunday," etc., and invariably the order is returned to the party sending it, with a request that it be addressed to Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras County Cal., who has full charge of the Juvenile Work, and who alone is authorized to furnish the rituals and badges. Will correspondents take heed and save themselves delay and annoyance by addressing headquarters direct for Juvenile supplies.

BONDS.—A new edition of blank W. T. bonds have been prepared especially for incorporated lodges. When these are desired, parties ordering will be particular so to state, as the ordinary bonds for unincorporated lodges are furnished for general use.

SUBORDINATE ODE CARDS.—Lodges in ordering Subordinate Ode Cards will do well to state distinctly the kind of card desired, as there are now two descriptions, one being the "music ode cards" with the music or notes arranged upon the card, the other being the ordinary ode card with the words of the odes only.

ALAS, POOR YORICK:—One J. L. York with the handle of Hon. prefixed to his name, and who represented Santa Clara County in the last legislature, lectured in the Metropolitan Theatre, Sacramento, on Monday evening of last week, under the auspices of the licensed-liquor-dealers-protective-association. Of course his theme was "The Sunday law and the Temperance question." He earned his fee and labored hard for two hours addressing an audience of about two hundred persons and double that number of empty seats. Among other things he said "He had been a member of a temperance organization since he was 17 years of age, and that he was a strong total abstinence man" all of which must have been very gratifying to his auditors and especially the Vice Presidents of his meeting, twelve in number; every one of whom was a wholesale whisky dealer or beer brewer. Men are generally known by the company they keep and this man's profession of his strong love for the temperance cause, supported and paid as he was by the whisky ring, will of course be believed. He claimed "not to justify drunkenness" (though he was supported solely by the drunkard makers," but to fight an enemy to liberty." He was alarmed at the indication of sectarian aggression and related pathetically how a party has arisen demanding that God shall be put in the constitution, that Sunday shall be observed, and that all this meant subversion of American liberty !!! That the churches were using the temperance organizations to establish an ecclesiastical Sabbath! He uttered a truth however when he declared that tobacco was as great a curse to men physically as whisky (and as he is a confirmed tobacco user he should know), and referred to the opium habits, declaring there was as much need of prohibiting the use of tobacco and opium as whisky. In conclusion he constituted himself the Supreme Court and "declared" the Sunday law "unconstitutional" and this really was about all the solid comfort the tumbler washing, and drunkard making fraternity received. As the Evening Bee put it, in merely noticing his meeting as a local incident, in a few lines: "The speaker took a wide range and dealt with the question in his erratic and verbose vein." Presumably he will regale the citizens of his home, San Jose with a repetition of his masterly effort, and immediately thereafter all temperance effort and moral reform will cease, because according to York it is subversive of American liberty (?)

"Alas, poor Yorick! I knew him, Horatio; a fellow of infinite jest, of most excellent fancy."

R. THOMPSON, G. W. C. T.

BELFAST, Maine, Nov. 5, 1881.

BRO. THOMPSON:—Yours at hand, and I assure you I am much pleased to receive it, not only as a

G. T., but also because of your having been a Waldoboro boy. In behalf of the 20,000 Good Templars of Maine, I greet you, and our co-workers and brothers in California. The Atlantic sends fraternal regards to the Pacific. Our noble Order is indeed "world wide."

I am gratified to learn of your success during the past year, as I do from your letter, and from the report of your G. W. S. May success continue with you. There is no doubt but with your magnificent working fund, you will be the largest Grand Lodge in the world by time of next R. W. G. L. session. You can easily add 200 lodges, and 10,000 members.

If we had your fund in Maine just one year, I would guarantee a least a total of 500 lodges, and 35,000 members. We average only about 80 lodges a year, as most of our work is voluntary. Your per capita of 25 c. could not be carried out here. Ours now is 5 cts.; if we were to change even to 10 cts., we should lose 150 lodges in a year. As you are aware a 5 cent piece here is of about the same relative value of 10 cents in the Western States and 20 cents in California and on Pacific coast. Therein you have the advantage. Again, our membership is largely among the common people, to whom a tax of a dollar a year for each member of a family who belong to the lodge, would be onerous. We think it better to obtain twenty members or signers to total abstinence, than only five, even if the cash in the treasury is small in amount.

Excuse this hasty, rambling note. Give my regards to all, and tell Bro. Katzenstein I hope to meet him at next R. W. G. L.

Would be pleased to see you in the old Pine tree State. Fraternally,

GEO. E. BRACKETT.

THE PACIFIC BANK.

A BRILLIANT SHOWING.—The Pacific Bank, located on the corner of Pine and Sansome streets, San Francisco, has just entered upon the eighteenth year of its existence. Among all the banks of the city there is none to-day with a better record or more brilliant prospects. With a million of paid-up capital and a surplus of $460,000, it naturally commends itself to the public as one of the safest possible depositories of money. At the same time its continuance under the sound and conservative management which has built it up, and entrenched it in well-earned public confidence, is of more business value than any amount of capital. Having agencies and correspondents in all of the principal cities, not only of this continent, but thruout Europe, it is prepared to issue Letters of credit at all times. It offers unsurpassed facilities for dealing in exchange, and is, in short, a complete, reliable bank. Marked and steady as have been its past success and growth, its managers are to be congratulated on the promising auspices under which they enter upon their new year.—Exchange.

FIRE AND POISON.

THE MEANS SAID TO HAVE BEEN USED TO FRIGHTEN AND PUNISH A TROUBLESOME TEMPERANCE REFORMER

Two Wheatland saloon-keepers have, it appears, got into a bad scrape. The trouble is stated to have grown out of the attempts to enforce the Sunday law at Sheridan. A Wheatland press despatch of the 19th instant gives the following particulars:

"There is great excitement at our neighboring town of Sheridan over the arrest of five persons for arson, committed at Sheridan. The parties under arrest are Jack Robinson and Charles Maxwell, both saloon keepers of this place; Archy McCauly, a shoemaker; ——Woods and A Curbinson, laborers. The cause of the trouble is that considerable feeling has been existing for some time past against D. Click, the owner of the flour mill and the most prominent citizen of the town, for his action in trying to have the Sunday law enforced in the place. Some four months ago the carpenter shop adjoining the mill was set on fire, and only for the prompt action of the night watchman it would have been burnt; also the mill, which had some thousands of dollars worth of grain on hand. Then about a month or so after a large barn situated near the mill was fired, totally destroying it; also a fine span of carriage horses, spring wagon, hay, etc., which loss was estimated at about $2,000. The parties not being satisfied, they again sought to do more damage, and two weeks ago set fire to a large hay barn of Click's, destroying both barn and hay, causing a loss of about $3,000. It might also be said that there was no insurance on any of the property, the local agents notifying their companies of the state of affairs, and the several companies withdrawing their risks on all property owned by Click. The citizens being aroused, they offered a large reward which induced a detective to come up and work at the case. From the start the detective worked his points well, and soon had sufficient evidence to warrant the arrest of McCauly and Woods, taking the precaution to have them kept separated, and when confronted by the local officers they made a confession, which in the main agrees. They stated that they were hired by Robinson, Maxwell and other parties to fire the property of Click, and for the first fire they received $75 but for the last one only $10; Woods says that McCauly received the money, and McCauly says that Woods got it. From what can be learned they had plans laid to poison a large lot of cattle which Click was feeding: also to burn the town. Robinson, Maxwell and Curbinson will not talk on the subject at all.

The excitement at Sheridan was so great on Monday that the officers thot it prudent to take the prisoners out of town. The prisoners were at last accounts housed in the country under a strong guard. There was even talk of hemp at Sheridan. The examination of the prisoners was set for to-day.—Appeal

THE LIQUOR CRIME IS A VIOLATION OF ALL THE COMMANDMENTS.

If this business (1) defies and denies the living God and (2) sets up its temples of idolatry and debauchery at every corner or station where half a dozen men may be enticed to congregate; if (3) every liquor den is a school and theatre of blasphemy: if this business (4) systematically violates every Sabbath day, and carries on a persistent, determined war for the extinction of the sacred Sabbath and for its conversion into a day of especial debauchery; if (5) it teaches its votaries and victims to dishonor father and mother and family and home, and frequently incites them to the murder of father or mother; if (6) it annually hunts to a horrible death hundreds of thousands of victims, and keeps the hands of the murderer and the assassin and the hangman ever red with their brother's blood; if (7) it fills the land with harlotry and (8) theft and (9) perjury and (10) covetousness, injustice, wrong and violence—and it is as self-evident as the sunlight that the rum maker's and rum seller's business does all these things and more, and does no good whatever in the world—then it is undeniably a violation of every command of the Decalogue. Being thus a promoter of strife, hate, lust, and all vice, being a foe to virtue, peace, to the love of God and the love of man, and to everything decent and of good repute, it is a violation of every precept of the gospel and the most powerful weapon wielded by Satan and his angels for the frustration of all God's gracious purposes toward mankind.—N. T. S. Tract, No. 156.

The above appeared lately in the Delaware Signal credited to the Spirit of the Age, and it has been in other papers credited to other sources. It seems to be entirely true, and the writer is glad to see it circulated under any conditions. But the first time it ever appeared in print was in 1876 in the N. T. Society's tract, No. 156, "Some Comfort for Drinkers," by the present editor of the RESCUE. This fact is not mentioned as a complaint by any means; but lest any one who finds it now or in the future in that tract should suppose it was not original there. Same time it may be stated, that is a 12 page tract, price $12 a thousand at 58 Reade St. N. Y.

THE ingenuity of whisky judges has developed a new legal discovery in New Brunswick. A rum-selling outlaw having been convicted of violating the Canada Temperance Act the fourth time, was sentenced to two month's imprisonment. The judicial acrobat has granted a rule nisi to bring the case before the Supreme court to quash the conviction, claiming that the law does not provide for a fourth offence; but that after a third conviction, the next violation must be proceeded against as a first offence. That is splendid law; for the same judge would instantly dismiss a fourth offence so treated, on the ground that the indictment calling it a first offence was a manifest falsehood. That Solomon is one of the Supreme judges who decided that a local option law passed by their province (or state) was unconstitutional, because only the Dominion government (Federal) had jurisdiction over trade, and a very few years after, when the Dominion parliament passed the same act, or one precisely similar, to confirm the action of the provinces, the same judges decided it unconstitutional on the ground that it had nothing whatever to do with trade, but was a matter of police and license, over which the Dominion government had no power, and only the provincial legislature could deal with it. They swallowed in that decision a large dish of crow, but as it was in favor of whisky, it washed down till reversed by the Dominion Supreme court. It was a little singular that five of the judges were unanimous on that decision against the local option law; but in their written separate opinions, each made certain admissions on different points, which, if strung together, completely established the validity of the law which they condemned.

Hence, it is quite possible the same judges will decide that a fourth offence, prosecuted as such, is a first offence, and if it comes before them as a first offence, that it is no offence at all. Great is Bacchus of the Canadians as well as of all the other Americans!!

SANTA CRUZ.—A petition to the Pacific Coast Steamship Company for the removal of Capt. Sagar is in circulation among the liquor men. Capt. Sagar's offence is that Mrs. Sagar circulated that petition for the increase of license-fees, and that the Captain signed it. The Company owes a great deal to the liquor interests of Santa Cruz. Capt. Sagar's predecessor frequented the saloons until he became a heavy embezzler. Purser McWatty, who ran on the Ancon two years ago, when the excursions to Santa Cruz were so popular, is in San Quentin for embezzlement, as a result of his drinking and gambling. John Hanna, a purser on the Monterey, thru his saloon experience, went to San Quentin for six years. Another Purser got into a fight while gambling in a Monterey saloon and was murdered by the saloonists; coming over to Santa Cruz and dying o his wounds. These are only a few of many instances we might name. Altogether, the liquor dealers have done so much for the company, that Capt. Sagar, who doesn't spend any money in saloons, ought to be forced to walk the plank forthwith as a proof of the gratitude of the company toward the saloon men.—Transcript.

That is refreshing; the impudence of the gang of licensod murderers of men, is astounding. Because the Steamship Company employs a captain who is a gentleman, and he and his wife sign or favor a petition which raises the city price for killing and destroying its people and pauperizing all the trade and business of Santa Cruz, the league of libertines have the impudence to demand his removal.

Now there is another thing for these jail-birds to do, and they will do it no doubt. The First Congregational Church of San Francisco have engaged a new minister, who quite lately preached a sermon or gave a lecture for the W. C. T. U. down in Maine. The rumsellers and thief teachers of Santa Cruz should send up orders at once to that church to discharge its pastor, because they dont like such a man.

And as the editor of the RESCUE would be in favor of putting their license up to $1,000 a minute, and of putting them under a cast iron law that not one of them would ever dare to violate one corner of it, they might as well order a change there.

The saloon keepers of Santa Cruz have enough of their friends and patrons in the penitentiary to fill lots of such positions as those named.

LAW.—A friend reports having been present last autum, at a trial for violation of the Sunday Law at Maxwell Station in Colusa County. In the selection of the jury, every Good Templar was summarily rejected; every one who believed in temperance or Sunday observance; one also who said he was not a Good Templar, but believed that as long as the Sunday Law is law, it should be observed. Only those were permitted on the jury who asserted their creed to be free whisky and the grogshop open every day in the week. That being the case, of course a verdict was promptly assured, "no cause of action."

It may be called extreme or fanatical, but the assertion is ventured, that this is exactly equivalent to excluding from the jury box on a murder trial, every one who dont believe that murder is innocent and justifiable, or demanding that no juryman shall try a case of theft or arson or forgery or perjury, unless he believes that the laws against them ought to be abolished. The liquor business is virtually above the law in many places, and it is time it were known which we must look to and obey as master.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

THE CHINCHA ISLANDS.

These are three small islands in about fourteen degrees South latitude, distant twelve miles from the shore at Pisco, a little town and fertile garden spot on the coast of Peru. A small river from the mountainous interior runs into the sea at Pisco, and makes it a green spot in a rainless desert coast of 1,000 miles of dry, bare sand and rock. Cotton and and sugar are cultivated at Pisco and lots of wine and fiery grape brandy (the latter called Pisco) are made there.

The islands are each from one-third to a mile in length and breadth, and have been for many ages the home of vast armies of various kinds of sea-birds, including the great awkward looking pelican, the eminently solemn penguin (called by sailors the parson bird), numerous species of gulls and ducks and divers and hawks, down to tiny little webfeet that burrow a nest in the sand. Fish of several kinds were exceedingly abundant, especially three tribes of Mackerel, or three degrees of them, one of ordinary size, one larger, and another about two feet in length. The larger fish and all the birds employed their time in chasing and eating the little fish; the seals and sea lions by thousands lived on the larger fish. It was a case of constant slay and eat, every day of the year; business was very actively and evenly conducted all round, and there seemed to be always a great abundance for all concerned.

The birds all came home to pass the night on the islands. From about 4 P. M. till sunset, there was in old times, a constant succession of clouds and swarms and flocks of various kinds of birds, arriving from North, West and South, where they had been spending the day in business or pleasure.

They had their nests there, hatched their eggs, carried and ate their fish there, slept there, lived and died there and added their bones and their fish bones and their own feathers, to the great funeral heap of the remains of their ancestors. The seals and sea lions in enormous numbers made their homes and took their siestas and held their political and religious assemblies on these islands, and it appeared they were always very particular to crawl up on the top, inland, away from the shore to be sick and die. When a large sea lion died there, his body and bones and oil made quite an addition to he pile.

The result of these accumulations for many thousand years was the covering of the island with a depth of 10 to 150 feet of guano, a snuff colored dust, very strong in ammonia and phosphates, and worth over three dollars per 100 pounds, as a fertilizer for the land. Where the rocky islets were high, the guano was perhaps but a few feet thick, but in the flat and depressed places it was 80 to 150 feet or more in depth. So the surface was about level. On the top, before the surface had been disturbed, there were dead seals, sealions and birds of every description covering the island, in all stages of dried up decay, from those which had been dead but a few days to the stripped and whitened bones of many years exposure to the sun. A few inches down, more bones and wings and dried skin and feathers and egg-shells and a mixture of guano of a poor quality; deeper, less bones and feathers and more guano, and so till at a depth of 24 to 30 inches, when the pure guano was reached and continued a hand-packed mass right down to the bedrock.

Had it rained here, this would never have accumulated, but it is an entirely rainless region, and must have been so ever since the mountains of South America were lifted up to extract all the moisture from the winds which have to pass their icy summits to blow over Peru.

When the Spaniards first came to South America, the Peruvians were very industrious farmers and used to bring guano from these islands to fertilize their lands, and they have always continued to do so. In 1838, the agents of Anthony Gibbs & Son, of London, sent to England about 20 or 30 tons of this guano as an experiment for sale. It laid there for five or six months untouched, and the senders got a reprimand from headquarters for their folly; but when some trials had been made of its fertalizing qualities, it was soon in demand, and a large fleet of ships were employed transporting it to Europe and America, and other places. That fleet increased every year till the guano on the Chinchas was all removed about the year 1870. In the year 1858 England alone received 353,000 tons, worth 23 million dollars there, or about 17 millions in Peru when put on board ship. Besides this, immense quantities were shipped to Europe and elsewhere.

DUTIES AND PRIVILEGES.

Our Bands of Hope are to be a source of mighty influence for good in the future of this country, and a very great responsibility rests upon their leaders and officers. There are some bands and temples in this state which assuredly will make a lasting, lifelong impression for good upon their members, no doubt upon all their members, young and old. They will be solidly grounded in the knowledge of what all alcoholic liquors and tobacco and opium and cigarets are, and what their uses and effects are; and, as for the lack of that information among the children, hitherto millions after millions of fine noble boys and girls, have been betrayed and ruined and destroyed, the fact should be broadly promulgated, that this information and training which the children are getting, is all important and invaluable beyond all other things.

People have in many instances in the past given their children a magnificent secular and religious education; given them every advantage but one; carefully warned them against every evil snare but one, and that the most dangerous of all, and for lack of that one precaution have wondered to see them devote their splendid abilities and accomplishments to garnish the records of dissipation and crime; ensnared and entrapped, poor, ignorant and unsuspecting innocents; entrapped and slain by the all-devouring monster.

It seems strange that a society of people who come together weekly under the purifying and ennobling influences of a Good Templar lodge, should neglect or postpone the extension of our work among the juveniles. It is so much easier, cheaper and more pleasant to prevent wrong doing than to correct and reform it, that it ought to be clear to all that our work should be largely if not mostly in the proper education of the young.

And where a Band of Hope does exist, how important that the teachings should be appropriate and effective as well as interesting. The ritual and Miss Colman's catechism and manual and David C Cook's instructive books and lessons contain a large amount of instruction; and then come Dr. Richardson's and other lesson books, so that no one can frame any respectable excuse or apology for not having a band of hope in his community and having it active and effective in good results.

A RACE TO THE POOR HOUSE.

One of David C. Cook's excellent papers "Our Young Men" has a picture of a "fast young man" seated in a trotting wagon with a cigar in his mouth and looking very smart, while the devil acts horse and is trotting him full speed on the race track to the saloon, the prison and the poor house. He carries him pell mell to perdition over heaps of Friendly Warnings, Father's Counsels, Mothers' Prayers and Tears and Wife's Entreaties.

And how many of these fast young men and boys are to be seen to-day, frequenting saloons and sigaret boy-traps, smoking, drinking, swearing, gambling and embarked fairly on the road to perdition. The devil cannot be seen in the harness but he is there sure, and it is a sad thing indeed to see so many of the young going astray who if they set out aright would make the smartest and best and most useful men of the future.

It is a pity boys cannot see the traps that are set for their feet and also the true characters of the men who stand by those traps and personate the master of all evil. What an admirable business to be engaged in to be Satans trapsetter and trap tender, and bar keeper to trap the boys and send them to ruin and degradation. Our young folks should take warning and be sure when they see these traps to see also that they have invariably the poor house and the prison and misery at the end in store for all their victims. Remember the first station on the road to the poor house is the sigaret shop and the same conductor bosses all the other stations and the whole road.

"I HEARN HIM GROWL."

Ed. Rescue:—By the Oregonian of 30 Dec. I am reminded of boyish days and sports, when a leading amusement was the hunting of the many "varmints" that inhabit the woods of the west. Guns were thot unsafe for boys, and so the dog and pole were the chief weapons in use. The dog, trained to the sport, would "tree" the game in a hollow log, or hole in the ground, and the boys following the enlivening canine music, would soon arrive in force, introduce the pole and "punch" the enemy, or by turning and drawing the pole, "twist him out." In proportion to the ferocity of the beast, and the danger in the struggle was the exultation over his capture. The pursuit of the hedgehog was peculiarly exhilarating, as by his hoarse, resolute growl, as the unerring pole reached him in his dark retreat, the boys were keyed up to the highest possible tension of excitement, which, as the pole man announced "We're a punchin him—I hearn him growl," found vent in such a perfect whirlgust of triumphant clamor as, being put in type would exhaust the exclamation points of a first class show-bill-printing house.

By the hoarse growl thru the Oregonian, (mouthpiece of the whiskey hedgehog of Oregon) we boys are assured that "we're a punchin' him." We are not—cannot be mistaken as to the growl of the varmint, we have hearn him before, and this growl is just the same—failure in Maine, failure in Kansas, no wine for sacramental and medicinal purposes, more liquor used and more drunkenness than before.

All these familiar links in the beautiful chain of whisky hedgehog consistency follow in near succession in his late growl, and therefore we know that our amendment pole is even now felt about his ribs. But unlike the old time hedgehog, our whisky varmint is vociferous in his call for quarter, by which he reminds me of another little incident in which a boy played a part.

This boy was of so dissatisfied and complaining a disposition as to render him very unpleasant and often tax the patience of his parents. One morning at breakfast table, on being helped to a piece of meat, he growled, "Oh, that's fat; I dont want that. The father exchanged it for a lean piece, which was objected to similarly. The gathering storm upon the paternal brow was stayed for one more trial, and a careful selection put upon the plate of the urchin, a piece nicely "streaked" with alternating lean and fat, but with a bit of rind on the side.

The boy inspected the meat; the father inspected the boy; and just, as the latter finished the whine, "Well, that's all skin; I cant eat skin," the father responded, "Johnny, I think I know what you want," and the ever ready beach limb applied to the thinly clad back, brot young dainty dancing upon the floor with the loud penitent cry, "Wah! Daddy, I'll eat fat, lean, skin or anything!"

In view of the energy with which the amendment petition is being circulated and signed, the Oregonian man appears ready to accept local option, civil damage, high license, or anything, if the rising storm of constitutional amendment will only let up.

He talks mellowly about the "great evil of intemperance," and strongly urges the "temperance people" to "vote for high license" as the best thing for the cause, and the probability is, that we'll accept the "high license" plan—blow 'em up.

ANYTHING, RATHER THAN WINE OR BRANDY.

I have traveled not a little in my life-time, and I have averaged nearly twenty thousand miles a year for twenty years at a time; I have been thru the length and breadth of our land from Maine to California, and from Minnesota to Florida, I have journeyed also in Europe and Asia and Africa. Yet I have never found the place where it was necessary for me to drink wine or brandy, nor yet where I deemed a native wine as safe as the native water, judging from the apparent effects on those who used the one or the other.

I have found some pretty poor water in my day—limestone water, brackish water, muddy water, sulphurous water, water well-nigh putrid with decaying vegetation. I have drank water thru a little pocket filter, from the prints of my horse's hoofs in the traveled road after a rain storm, as the only mode of quenching my thirst with water. I have drank water from the tangled swamps in the sea islands of the South Carolina coast, where I had to hold my breath as I drank because of the water's stench. But I was sure in all these cases that the water was safer, as I drank, than wine would be, and that if I added anything to it to render it innocuous there was less reason for my trying whisky or brandy than ginger or mustard. Among all the personal risks that I have been called to take in my life of varied experiences, I really count water-drinking the very least; and of all the personal risks I have had occasion to note in others, from my earliest recollection to the present hour, I put wine-drinking among the greater.

Several years after our civil war I was at the Surgeon-General's office in Washington, making a call on Dr. Otis, with whom I had been a comrade in army life, and who was now compiling and tabulating the medical records of the entire army. In the course of our conversation he asked me how it was that my health endured thru all the exposures to which I had been liable in army service and in prison life. My answer was, "Well, Doctor, I suppose you will hardly agree with me on that point. I think that my keeping up so well was due to my letting whisky alone. The water we had was bad enough; but I thought it was better than the whisky, and I stuck to it thru the war. I think my total abstinence was my safety. I never borrowed tomorrow's income to pay to-day's expenses with, but I lived on the day's strength every day of the war." The Doctor's prompt response was: "A few years ago I shouldn't have agreed with you on that point, but now I do. Since I have compared, in this office, the health-rolls of regiments where the surgeon refused to give whisky, with those regiments where whisky was given freely, I am so impressed with the proof of gain from total abstinence that I wonder how so many of our soldiers lived thru our whisky-treatment of them.—H. Clay Trumbull, in Sunday-School Times.

WHO PAYS THE BILLS?

The traffic in strong drink is a fearful source of expense and loss. We know who makes the money out of it; the distiller, the rumseller, and they alone. But a question which more intimately concerns us is this: Who pays the bills? The question is not whether the rumseller shall grow rich, the rum drinker shall grow poor. It is not whether the rum drinker shall keep his money, or the rum seller shall win it from him; but there is a vast amount of loss and expense in which neither of them directly participate. We may be silent while the rum drinker wastes and spends that which belongs to him, which is but little, and which daily grows less and less; but an avalanche of wreck and ruin results from this traffic, which neither the rumseller nor the rum drinker endures, and yet the bills must be paid, those expenses met. Who pays the bills?

Who pays for the fires kindled by drunken men? Who pays for the ships wrecked by tipsy pilots, or lost thru drunken captain or drunken crews? Who defends the city from riots incited by men who are maddened by alcohol? Who pays for the feasting and junketing of wine-bibbing public officials? Who feeds the drunkard's hungry children? Who provides for the drunkard's broken hearted wife? Who supports the beggarly tramps who, having wasted their money in drink, wander about the country? Who repairs the losses caused by the failure of intemperate merchants and reckless and half-intoxicated business men? Who makes good the damage done by drunken workmen, and the hindrance to business caused by the sprees of intemperate employees? Who pays for the railroad wrecks caused by drunken conductors and engineers? Who repays the money that the drunkards borrow that they may obtain strong drink? Who builds the asylums where crazy drunkards are kept? Who supports the idiot children of drunken men? Who pays the bills of officers for watching drunken rowdies? Who pays constables and sheriffs for catching drunken murderers? Who pays the attorneys and juries and judges who try drunken criminals? Whose money supports jailors, turnkeys and prison keepers to take care of men convicted of crimes committed when drunk? Who pays the expenses of trials and commitments and executions occasioned by the crimes of intoxicated men? Who pays for the property destroyed and burned by drunken mobs? Who builds and supports almshouses, which, but for drink might remain unoccupied? Who endures the sufferings and losses and brutalities which are due to the recklessness and insanity of drunken husbands and fathers? Who pays for the inquests held on drunkards found dead by the wayside? Who pays for a pauper's coffin and for digging a drunkard's grave in the potter's field, when the last glass has been drank?

Who pays the bills? The drunkard cannot pay them, for he has wasted his substance in the cup. Will the rumseller pay them? He has neither the disposition nor the ability to do it. Whoever would attempt to hold a rumseller responsible for the ruin he has wrot would "sue a beggar and catch a louse."

The fact is, you and I, and the sober, industrious, toiling portion of the community must meet all these bills. The drunken rowdy whose head is punched in the street fight is cured in the city hospital at our expense; the drunken beggar is fed from our table; his hungry children come to our doors for bread, and we cannot refuse assistance to his broken hearted wife; and when, at last, having wasted his substance in riotous living, he comes to the almshouse, the asylum, the hospital or the prison, honest, sober, temperate men pay the bills for supporting him there. There is no escaping it. We may protest and object: we may growl at taxes and find fault with beggars, but ultimately and inevitably we must foot the bills. We cannot have the privilege of spending our own money, nor can we even enjoy the comfort of saying how it will be spent.

Probably one dollar in every ten of the hard earnings of honest, toiling laborers thruout the nation is in some way devoured by this rum devil which haunts the land, and howls about our homes to waste and ravage and destroy. For every ten dollars which the laboring man earns, he may count on being robbed of from a dollar to a dollar and a half to meet the expenses of this infernal traffic.

So, gentlemen, taxpayers, business men, farmers, capitalists, stockholders and gentlemen of leisure, walk up and draw out your pocket books and pay your rum-bills; one cent out of every dime, one dime out of every dollar, one dollar out of every ten, ten dollars out of every hundred, one hundred dollars out of every thousand that you earn or gain. You say that you do not use the article. That makes no difference; it is used; the nation permits it, and you pay for it; so walk up and settle.—Delaware Signal.

A WARNING EXAMPLE.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

As I sit here writing to you, a little way off—not many miles—lies an old man dying of a lingering disease—and he suffers terribly. He has been a large, robust man. He must have been a perfect Hercules in his youth, and no doubt was destined for a ripe old age. But he began to drink moderately when a boy; he began, I have no doubt, with sweet cider, for he was brot up in an apple growing and cider making country. When older he took stronger drinks. Ever since I was a little girl, I have known of him as a constant drinker. Yet he seemed hale and hearty, and would often boast to people, "I am an example of a constant drinker! look at me! I am well, strong and well-to-do! I have a fine house, lands and stock, yet I drink all I please." But what has been the result of that constant drinking? Why, both his sons came up to follow his example, until one died, and now the other is a common sot—a half simple drunkard. The old man now lies in horrible agony, with the lining of his stomach actually eaten up with alcoholic liquors. You can imagin what his suffering must be! Does it pay to form the habit of drinking liquor? Even if you escape its many evils thru a long life, they will overtake you at the end, and make you pay heavy interest. This is but one of many dreadful cases I have known.—N. T. Tract.

Ella Wheeler is a young lady in Wisconsin who is quite a poet. The above is not a story some one has made up, it is a truth.

THE BOY, DOG AND BUZZARD.

The following is from a speech by Gov. St. John, and aimed at the men who are always prating about sumptuary laws:

"Now, we are told that no law can be enforced to regulate what we eat, drink and wear, and I reply that we have been living under laws ever since our government was founded, that have regulated what we eat, drink and wear. Let one of your citizens come in here dressed in the old fig-leaf fashion, to-night, and you will find a law upon our statute books regulating what you shall wear. It compels you to come in here dressed in accordance with the demands of common decency. It tells the grocery man that he shall not adulterate his tea or coffee, and he cannot get a license for doing so. It tells the miller that he shall not adulterate his flour; the milkman that he may live near the creek, but that he shall not visit its shores too often.

"A statute of the United States says you shall not sell intoxicating liquors to Indians. Remember that the white man is as good as an Indian, and is there any reason why we should give the protection of prohibition to the wild savages of the plains and withhold it from the civilized white man? If it is good for the one it is good for the other.

"You cannot, under our laws cruelly kick your own dog; because we have a statute prohibiting cruelty to animals. You cannot get license to kick dogs. It makes no difference how great a petition you present; It makes no difference how much money you may offer, you cannot get a license for any such purpose. Just a little further over in this statute book it tells you that at all seasons of the year you are prohibited from killing turkey buzzards. Is it not high time we were giving as great protection to the boys of Kansas as we give to the dogs and turkey buzzards of the state? We protect the buzzards—we protect the dogs—but we have been licensing the destruction of the boys. In this triangular fight between the buzzard, the dog and the boy I am for the boy all the time."—American Farmer.

BESSBROOK—Mr. John G. Richardson, the great manufacturer and proprietor of Bessbrook, said in a public meeting recently that peace and contentment are undisturbed there during all the troubles in Ireland. After 33 years trial of no public houses in Bessbrook, nine-tenths of the people there would be sorry to change. The population is about equally divided between Catholics and Protestants, and altho there are 4,000 workingmen there, there is seldom a case of immorality, or a case that comes before the magistrates. The renewal of the Sunday closing act is demanded in Ireland with the valuable argument in its favor that the closing of the crime nests on one day of the week lessened Ireland's drink bill 15 million dollars last year, and made a reduction of 22,000 in the drunk arrests.

NATURE cures our diseases if we only let her have her way, There were no physicians in Rome for the first five centuries. The people were too healthy to need them. Then came luxury, disease, doctors and death.—Sel.

BAILED OUT.—As a gentleman was telling a friend that a mutual friend had been locked up for intemperance, he was asked why he did not bail him out. "Bale him out!" he replied, "why, you could not pump him out."—Am. Farmer.

NEW TEMPERANCE TALES.

ONLY TEN CENTS EACH.

"FIFE AND DRUM" SERIES.

The National Temperance Society has commenced the publication of a series of cheap and thrilling Temperance Tales, from the pens of some of the best writers on temperance in the world, giving a greater amount of valuable and interesting matter than ever before, for the small sum of ten cents. The object is to supply a great amount of matter calculated to aid the advancement of the cause of temperance, for a very small sum of money. These stories will be adapted to home and fireside reading, the railroad train, and for the young in every class of the community. Four of these are now ready, and others will soon be added to the list. The following have already been published:

"Fife and Drum," by Mary Dwinell Chellis. "A Tragedy of the Sea," by Mrs. J. McNear Wright. "The Quaker's Rule," by Earnest Gilmore. "Drinking Jack," and other stories, by Mary Dwinell Chellis. Send along the dimes. Address,

DAVID C. COOK.

Be sure to read with care David C. Cook's list of excellent publications in another page. Now is the time to secure good and interesting reading for the family, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, and to fill up every bodys library. Never before was such a chance to get proper books, papers and music for the young folks. They can be had too, for about half the price that old, battered, second hand books used to cost. Every body who dont spend money for tobacco and beer, can well afford to reap the benefit of these publications: exery one who does spend for tobacco and beer ought to use twice as much money for good literature to enable him to keep his conscience from becoming too persistently troublesome.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

TOUCHING MAINE AND OTHER STATES.

There appears in this number a letter from the G. W. S. of Maine to our G. W. C. T. While the greeting and kindly wishes of our brethren in Maine are warmly and sincerely reciprocated, it is desired to confirm the sincerity of our good wishes and good intents on this side by a few comments on our good brother's letter.

"If they had in Maine our working fund for one year, they could guarantee 500 lodges and 35,000 members." But to change their per capita tax from its present 5 cts to 10 would cause them a loss of 150 lodges in a year." That surely is somewhat inconsistent. And again, they believe 20 signers to total abstinence are better than five. Our brother has not given this matter a deliberate study.

Because we believe that twenty members are better to gain and have, than five, our per capita tax has always been maintained at 25 cts. We could reduce it to 15, 10 or 5 cts and the first year our members might not decrease very much, but our progress and numbers and influence would for the future decline just in proportion to the extent of the reduction of our working fund. That is the way we look at it, and our view is taken from a comparison between our own state and Maine or a great many other states that have tried to run a great Order without a revenue.

In California our organization had to be commenced at bedrock and built up with hostile surroundings of every conceivable nature; new country; mining camps taken possession of by whisky sellers and gamblers; the grogshop was church, school, library and prayer meeting; scarcity of temperance lecturers and workers; swarms of intemperate foreigners: an early planted and strongly fortified wine and whisky and beer interest. And no capital to oppose all this power of evil but a few Maine and other Eastern men and women, some work already done by the Sons of Temperance, and the per capita tax of the Good Templars carefully, faithfully and judiciously guarded and administered all these years.

That per capita tax was not the soul and intent and object of the Order; neither are the wheels of a train of cars the object, aim and soul of a railway system, but without those wheels neither train nor traffic can progress a step. And without a consistent finance no temperance organization has ever achieved anything like a consistent permanent record, no matter how much may have been accomplished by the generous unpaid labor of selfsacrificing volunteers.

With our per capita tax and the system which could be constructed upon it, the Order in California has always been going forward. The Good Templars have kept up a weekly temperance paper for 18 years; have circulated and used a large amount of other temperance literature for many years; have put in the Home for Orphans a sum nearing now $200,000 and have grown in numbers every year but one, a year when we had no lecture force in the state but what was against us. We can conceive of no possible reason for the difference between our experience and that of the losing and downhill states, but in the difference of per capita tax and financial policy.

On the other hand Maine had its prohibitory law established before it ever heard of a Good Templar Lodge; Neal Dow says that before then the state was sowed with temperance literature. If there could be a favorite garden spot in which Good Templary could rapidly attain a giant growth and hold it against all odds, Maine was the place. The people of Maine would have paid a 25 ct tax quite as readily as 5 cts, if they knew the larger was to bring proportional results; no people on this globe would make greater sacrifices for the destruction of rum than the Maine men; they have been taut to value one cent and not waste it; they well learned the motto on the old cents, "not one cent for tribute, millions for defence." And while they would shut up their purses and refuse to contribute 5 cts to any useless fund, they would be willing to give 25 cts or $2,00 to some effective mode of dealing with their ancient and bitter enemy rum.

But what has Good Templary done for Maine? and what has a five cent treasury done for the Order there? Ten and twelve years ago Maine used to report 25000 members and has it been down to 19000 and 16000 since. Of course it never could maintain a journal or keep a lecture force of any amount in the field, nor circulate a scrap of temperance literature. Maine delegates to R. W. G. L. in old times were ardent advocates for the abolition of the degrees and probably would have helped to abolish a good deal more of the Order, had that plot of the cheapening and disintegrating conspiracy succeeded.

Now to sum up, considering the abundant temperance sentiment of the people of Maine, the large number of temperance homes, the thousands of noble mothers, wives, sisters devotedly attached to the cause, the facilities always afforded by a friendly press and friendly churches, the large majority of the native population, the ability and earnestness and faithful service of so many gifted workers in the temperance field, one is almost forced to the conclusion that whatever the order may have accomplished of reform in Maine, even if it has saved many from ruin, yet it has been a failure in approaching to anything like the measure of success it might have attained.

And the only reason that can be assigned, is the utter insufficiency and insignificance of their financial system. Any Good Templar will deserve a million dollar monument, who will discover a patent machinery which will enable either a commercial or a benevolent society to do a $20,000 work every year with a $1,000 income.

It is always a difficult and delicate undertaking to increase a tax or a price upon anything, but Maine Good Templars are not up to the Maine standard of intelligence if they would not contribute the few paltry nickels per head, which would increase their muster roll in a year to 500 lodges of 35,000 members, even if that amounted to $1 a year. Not a particle of danger of their readiness, if they believe in the result.

It is due to the G. W. C. T. and R. W. G. T. to say, that neither of them will know anything of this article till they see it in the Rescue; and they are not responsible for it, tho it is presumed they will not dissent from anything herein, not even from this prophesy, that no Grand Lodge of the I. O. G. T. will ever permanently thrive or grow or get out of its chronic consumptive decline, that tries to work with a less per capita tax than one dollar a year, the smallest that is at all competent to success and wholesome growth, either East or West.

Those who love the cause and would love to see our grand order restored to life and vigor, and leading the temperance hosts all over the Union, are invited to consider these matters well. If there is anything but solid truth in this article, let us hear of it.

THE WINE INTEREST.

It has been heretofore stated in these articles, that the vine growers have been purposely misled by parties interested in deceiving them. Some of these have had grape lands to sell, and have clothed a ruinous, pauperizing, despicable, drunkard breeding interest in a stolen garment of gold and purple, to defraud ignorant men into paying fabulous prices for the lands they wished to get off their hands or to sell for others at a round commission. Others have had grape cuttings in great variety to sell and have sought to induce innocent cultivators to plant the worthless kinds that are suitable only for wine, and will not make raisins. Then winery owners desire that large crops of grapes shall be at their mercy at $8 or $10 a ton, as they soon will be, when of no use but for wine. And then the wine and brandy merchants want to buy their wine at 15 or 20 cents and sell it for 50 cents or a dollar. All who advise the pushing of the wine business, are going to sell something, or make something out of the vine growers, and have a private money making reason of their own for urging the falsehood that it is a profitable business, whereas, they know it has debauched and pauperized and unmanned every people that have ever engaged in it since the time of Noah.

And now let us listen to the admissions of a wine expert who has a very strong interest in promoting the manufacture of wine for him to sell. Mr. A. Harazsthy compares the extravagant results paraded by the owners of large tracts of grape lands before the eyes of cultivators, with the practice of salting mines to help their sale. He says any one planting a vineyard and expecting more than $30 or $40 an acre from it, will be disappointed and anything over $40 ought to be considered a golden harvest. The Rescue has often declared that grapes for wine would be sold at $10 or $12 a ton at soon as the furor of 1880 has subsided. Mr. Harazsthy says that in five years they will go down to $7 or $8 a ton, and the cask may cost more than the wine is worth, as it has been in France owing to the large production. But he still says we can always find a market for wines in Bordeaux at 35 cts a gallon delivered there. And he expects that in our southern states a splendid market will be always found for California wines.

The fact that France raises 1000 to 1500 million gallons of wine a year, and exports about 50 million gallons and drinks all the rest, and after that enormous waste of land and labor and capital, is now purchasing vineyards in Hungary, Germany and Italy, and buying up spirits made from potatoes, beets, turnips, glucose and sugar, in Germany, Belgium and Holland, and oceans of beer and gin from England, with which to fabricate wines and brandies and absinth, to supply the inordinate cravings of her many millions of insatiable drunkards during the few years of short grape harvests, and is ready to buy 100 million gallons of wine a year from California—ought to be a full and complete answer for ever, to the monstrously and manifestly absurd proposition that wine and brandy making could ever be profitable to the country or people that engage in it.

Mr. Harazsthy says very truly that Eastern dealers will only buy the cheapest wine from us, and will only buy cheap while they are selling dear. Therein lies an immensely important fact to the vine grower; any Eastern wine dealer who knows the business, can buy the very cheapest wines that are made in the state at the lowest price, and out of that same cask he can sell in three days after, the very finest quality of wine produced anywhere, that the producer cannot tell from his own. And without having added more than a cent or two a gallon to its cost, he sells it at the top fancy price. Those who do not know that fact are blind.

And there is one very imposing future obstacle to the wine interest, but it will be the greatest blessing which could come to the vinegrowers; in a very few years, altho now they pretend to ignore it, the sale of any of the poisons manufactured from the rotted, prostituted grape will be a serious criminal offence all over this Union and the civilized world.

This subject has been treated altogether from the financial or commercial standpoint. Nothing has been said at all of the hideous criminality of turning this beautiful state into a shambles of drunkenness, vice, violence and unlimited debauchery.

THORO EDUCATION.

Education, according to a great many well-meaning people, is to be relied upon to do away with intemperance. That is true in one sense if a certain kind of education is meant, not otherwise. Education in the classics, in philosophy, in theology, in law, in medicine, in oratory, in mechanics, never has done anything to prevent the most advanced and intelligent people of the world from becoming the most eminently drunken. Every learned profession has contributed and does to-day its full quota of drunkards, modified only where their education comprises some instruction on the evil effects of drink, aside from their mere intoxicating qualities.

An entirely conclusive answer to the fallacy that general education or the spread of general knowledge will arrest the tide of drunkenness, is given by the medical profession. Their education, more than that of any other class, must open their eyes to the destructive influences of alcoholic liquids upon health, morals and purse, but being generous fellows and given to kindly and pleasant associations with their fellow men and women, especially with the educated classes, they have afforded perhaps a larger proportion of wrecks on the quicksands of intemperance, than any other profession. Education of a high order has been universal with them; but social habits, the temptations of a moderate drinking society and the education of a dangerous, unnatural appetite, have had exactly the same effect upon them as upon the ignorant and rough classes. Alcohol has selected its quota of victims from their ranks as it has from all others, and has driven them to the same miserable degradation and death.

Again, lawyers and judges are learned men with rare exceptions. If education would cure intemperance, lawyers, judges, doctors and ministers would have been all proof against bibulous habits. In nearly every trial that comes before any of our courts, criminal or civil, alcohol is an important and prominent contestant or criminal and under its vilest and most revolting aspects; but the learned educated lawyers, many of them to-day, all of them used to, go right from the court to the grogshop, and set an evil example at the bar of crime which furnishes about all the criminals and human wrecks whose misfortunes so actively employ the legal bar.

In Edinburg, Scotland, which is sometimes called the modern Athens of learning, Sir Wilfrid Lawson said to the people there on the 12th Dec. last, that 2600 of their citizens were found lying drunk and incapable in their streets and more than 7000 people were arrested thru drink in 1880 in their city. In Glasgow 40,000 were arrested drunk or 1 in every 10½ of the population—in Greenock 1 in 16 and in Edinburg 1 in 20. And education is about as general in Scotland as any where.

When we come to examine the proposition that general education will do away with intemperance, it will not bear inspection at all. We might as well say the education of the masses would make people good poultry raisers, competent judges of horse pedigree, good plowmen, good sailors; whereas it would have no visible effect in any of these special instances unless the study of that special interest was a prominent part of the general education; most certainly not, if it was entirely omitted, as the temperance question has been.

But education in a special direction makes doctors, lawyers, musicians, writers, orators etc., and it is just what we need to convert the world to temperance. When the vital truths that are found in the Bible regarding temperance, and its warnings against the cup of devils are faithfully and impartially taut in the pulpit and in the Sabbath schools and the Home,—when the most important scientific truths given to the world by Dr. B. W. Richardson, Dr. F. R. Lees, Dr. Nott, Dr. Norman Kerr and by a numerous body of those most eminent scholars and christian philanthropists who are and have been the head lights of the temperance reform,—are faithfully taut in all our colleges and schools—then we shall find it true that a general education as to the effects moral, physical and financial of the drunkard making business will make our people temperance people, just as educatiug them in the alphabet and spelling book makes them readers.

FIRE INSURER'S RISKS.

About 15 years ago, when Vallejo was improving and had a grand opportunity to become in about ten years from that time, a rich, populous city of 50,000 people, two men came there from San Francisco and rented an old, vacant, lone building on a corner, where the Odd Fellows hall now stands. They said they had sold a mine, and were obliged to take $7,000 of its price in liquors from a wholesale liquor dealer in San Francisco, and they were going to establish a wholesale liquor store in Vallejo.

Every day the papers had a eulogy upon this new help to manufacture the citizens of Vallejo into drunkards, thieves and paupers, and every day the steamer landed some barrels of liquors, which made a busy job for the draymen to cart up to the old shanty on the corner and deposit there. At last a large stock had accumulated on the premises and the enterprising owners notified the public thru the press, that either on Monday or Tuesday of next week, the business of wholesale ruin would begin.

On Saturday evening, a few young folks met as usual, to rehearse for the choir of the Presbyterian church. They sang pretty late, and chatted later, and one of them going home about midnight, saw fire in the liquor emporium. There had been no one living there nor any fire on the premises for some time, but the building was burning. The alarm was given and the people assembled; but having then no water supply, they could only try to pull down a burning building and save some of its contents.

Many of the spectators were seriously alarmed lest when the barrels were burned, and that large quantity of alcohol should be blazing, it would run all over town and carry fire and ruin everywhere. While the terrible consequences were being discussed, the hoops of one cask gave out, it opened, its contents burst forth and—a tremendous explosion and a sheet of flame illuminating the sky?—not at all, not a bit of it; it put out the fire all around it; another cask burned open and another barrel of water helped to check the fire and then it was discovered that this extensive stock of fine, pure and hightoned whiskys, brandys etc., was nothing but water; the stock was insured for $7,000 and had the building and casks burned without the contents being discovered, the wholesale liquor dealers would have made a clear steal of that amount from the insurance companies and it would have served the latter rightly for insuring such an abominable and poisonous and murderous thing as whisky.

But still they kept on insuring liquor sellers stocks and buildings and have been paying tons of money all these years for property which they knew very well, but could not prove in court, was set on fire by its owners. And they kept on insuring rum and wine and doubled up the premiums which honest householders and traders ought to pay and would only be asked to pay, if it were not for the grogshop fires which destroy most of the property that is burned.

WONT FIGURES ERR?

The Reading Pa. Star has a timely article January 7th, on the appalling fact that in 1881, there were in the United States 500 persons murdered, 459 of the cases directly traceable to liquor. And it says there were 242 suicides.

The Star has been particularly tender and gentle toward California; the editor must be an old forty-niner, who cherishes a tender affection for his former home, or else he has a big rowdy California neighbor that he is afraid to affront. In parceling out the crimes to the various states, he charges to California only 9 murders and 5 suicides for the year; and of the suicides of the year, only one was a Chinaman and he did it for love. New Hampshire had 6 murders and 2 suicides; Connecticut 5 and 4; Delaware 5 and 1; wicked Arkansas 42 and 1; New Jersey 23 and 24; Kansas 4 and 0, and Maine 2 and 1.

It would be a comforting thing to know that this State has such a virtuous and peaceable record as compared with those terrible fields of carnage, Arkansas and New Jersey; but unfortunately, we have to confess to a slight injustice done us by our friend in the goodness of his heart, for which a debt of gratitude is due him. We find that last year the city of San Francisco alone had 26 homicides and 64 suicides. Of the latter 14 were Germans, 7 Irish and 5 Chinese. What is the long scarlet list for the state, we shall know later. Our friend has 3 murders for Arizona and 7 for New Mexico for the year 1881; probably there were often that many in less than a week, and sometimes two or three before breakfast in each of those two Eden spots. And the murders committed by rumsellers in San Francisco upon the poor suicides whom they led to slauter, would probably exceed one thousand in 1881.

The statistics, if properly collated, will give conclusive evidence of the fact that crime is something like fifty times more frequent in the average liquor selling community, than in the average town, village or county where the accursed traffic is suppressed. The law of Maine puts no hindrance in the way of any citizen who may import liquor direct to his own home and drink, not sell it, there. The law has been violated just enough, too, in several cities of Maine, to produce a large enough crop of crime for a whole state. Kansas had thousands of rum outlaws before the law went in force, and they will commit crime for years yet probably.

Therefore, neither Maine nor Kansas gives as yet a fair set of figures to rest upon. But there are in England, Ireland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, California, Colorado, Illinois, Massachusetts, Maine and some other states, various townships and counties that have for 20 years more or less enforced a prohibitory law and with the result of jail, poorhouse and criminal calendar all empty.

The attempts of the whisky papers to attribute the presence of crime in any state of the union today, to anything but the grogshop, is too confessedly mean and false, to draw the fire of the temperance press.

GOVERNOR FOSTER.

Of Ohio, elected by the Republican party and the solid beer and whisky vote, has the following on

"THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

All good citizens deplore the evils growing out of the intemperate use of intoxicating liquors. Our jails, penitentiary, work-houses, reform schools, infirmaries, insane asylums, and other institutions of like character, are largely made necessary because of this evil. The framers of the Constitution recognized this fact, and empowered the General assembly "to provide against the evils resulting from the sale of intoxicating liquors."

The subject has been discussed year after year, in and out of the General Assembly, and laws have been enacted which, if enforced, would largely mitigate the evils; but, for the want of a public sentiment sufficiently strong to secure their enforcement, they are practically inoperative. Public opinion to-day is divided mainly into two classes as to the character of further legislation upon the subject. One class insists upon the prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating and malt liquors, while the other proposes a tax upon the traffic, coupled with restrictions upon its sale, with severe penalties imposed for violations of the law."

Then, after alluding to the double meaning plank in the platform, and the various attempts to regulate crime, he continues:

"The duty of the General Assembly is thus marked out by the people, viz: The submission of Constitutional amendments to the people essentially embodying the substance of the resolution.

The propriety of submitting three amendments, one favoring local option, another the prohibition of the manufacture and sale, and a third the taxation of the traffic with well guarded restrictions, is earnestly recommended. This course will give the people, the source of all power, an opportunity to express themselves, and thus give the great value of popular approval to the successful proposition."

So there will be a vigorous amendment war in Ohio and there may be a chance for a victory of prohibition.

ANOTHER BRUTAL MURDER, and whisky or beer the cause, or something to that effect is a prominent heading in one or more places of almost every newspaper one takes up nowadays; and it is quite noticeable that during the past six months appalling murders and shocking crimes and cruelties have been more frequent and more devilish than common. Every year is making a record worse and worse wherever there is a grogshop; and still but a very few people dare say a word against the dens of crime and theft and misery that are deluging the land with blood.

AN INTENSELY interesting theological controversy is now occupying the English ritualistic press. The momentous question which confuses the modern apostolic brain and threatens another fork in the genuine succession is whether the name "chimere" or "cope" should be used to designate one of the flying kites of the circus costume worn by the Bishop of Manchester when engaged in the reverential gymnastics of his professional duties. The new version has made no sign on this question; and it almost tempts one to waver in a lifelong reverence for the completeness and all-sufficiency of the grand old Book of books, to find that it has entirely omitted to provide for a satisfactory solution of a doctrine of such infinite moment to the human race.

"LITTLE BLUE JACKET."—The National Temperance Society have recently published a book entitled "Little Blue-Jacket," written by Miss M. A. Paull, author of "Tim's Troubles." The story is of a little sailor lad, and of his quiet but effective work for temperance on shipboard, and is told in a most charming way. With this story is bound also five others equally well written and interesting. 12mo., 163 pages. Price, 75 cents. Address,

THE MISSION OF SABBATH SCHOOLS.

To ask more of Sunday Schools than elementary instruction in the word of life, is folly. To expect greater results from such than came of the giving of the law to Israel, or the promulgation of the gospel among the Gentiles, approaches idiocy. The way which leadeth to destruction remains wide, and many will follow it in spite of every possible form or system of moral and religious education.

All that we can justly hope for, is to weaken the forces of temptation and strengthen what good impulses we find in the little ones, by appeals to understanding and hearts. It is easy enough to teach the letter of eternal truths; God alone can infuse the spirit thereof. Thus we pray. Sunday Schools, like churches, cannot be expected to be proof against corruption. The poor Sunday school teacher, laboring for no earthly consideration to deliver the child soul from infection of the countless and nameless evil influences and associations--the normal inheritance of all born of woman—and who fails to ensure imaculate sanctification of the pupil, should certainly not be subjected to greater censure than those that make merchandise of the Word, and set a price upon their prayers and assurances of salvation of souls.

The glory of all veritable christian labor, is, and remains unselfishness. Greater he that giveth a mite of pure affection or zeal for regeneration of a soul, than he that converteth millions to embrace of a theological or sectarian shibboleth. What we most need is not empty (and as a rule unreliable) statistics of causes which lead astray. Devils are always legion. A book the size of a mountain could not contain the evil types and images of the bottomless pit. But were it not that God hath left himself a seed in the few that labor but for His name's sake, we would soon be altogether like unto Sodom and Gomorrah.

Our system of Sunday Schools certainly offers no hindrance to the most saintly and hallowed offerings and sacrifices to serve His cause. There may be no money in it. Let us hope there never will be. Where there is, it will crowd out the Lord—in fact every hope above money. As mills to grind out church members, the Sunday schools may also prove a failure—even as visible churches are unable to grind out christians after the type and spirit of Jesus of Nazareth. Cease teaching and preaching innovations and traditions of men, and return to illustration and advocacy of vital truths and both Sunday schools and churches will turn out less "unfortunates" J. C. K.

San Jose, Jan. 12, 1882.

Ed. Rescue:—The San Francisco Chronicle, lately quoted Chief Crowley, of the San Francisco police, as saying "the Sunday law could not be enforced in San Francisco." Now I may be mistaken as to the duties of Chief Crowley. If I am not it is his duty to ascertain the law and enforce it, with all the powers at his command, but instead of doing this, he, if he is correctly reported, presumes to say a law of the State cannot be enforced. Evidently the Legislature entertained the contrary opinion when it passed the law. That body, acting in its representative capacity, passed the law under the impression that it could be enforced. Chief Crowley says the legislature was mistaken, and that the Sunday law cannot be enforced, at least in San Francisco. Let us see where such reasoning leads to. The Sunday law is a law of the State, there is no more question of its validity thar there is of the validity of the law against murder, robbery, arson, or burglary—unless, indeed, it be unconstitutional, which question the courts and not the police, must determine—yet Chief Crowley presumes to say it cannot be enforced, and the executive forces of the city, and state for that matter, are made helpless by the dictum of this man, designed to be the mere instrument of the law's power; and the stupid press even quotes him as an authority."

To illustrate, let us suppose that Chief Crowley is friendly to the rum interests and that this Sunday law is more obnoxious to that interest than any other. If Chief Crowley may suspend the Sunday law in San Francisco, because he chances to be unfriendly to it, might not his successor be unfriendly to the law against arson or robbery, and so suspend that? Might not San Jose elect a mayor or chief of police who was unfriendly to the law against arson or theft? and might he not suspend that? Might not the state elect a governor unfriendly to criminal laws or legislation, and might he not greatly retard the execution of our criminal laws? Might not judges do the same thing?

I have known two sheriffs who were highwaymen, one judge a blackleg and perjuror. Sacramento has had a public administrator who was a cutthroat. Congressmen, United States Senators and governors of states have been criminals. So the possibility of official crime is not altogether suppositious, and the very things I have supposed could come to pass; and the probability of their coming to pass is in proportion to the toleration which such acts as Chief Crowley's receive from the public.

No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

On the 17th January it is proposed to issue an edition of 20,000 copies of the Rescue. An excellent opportunity of advertising will be afforded on that occasion. And it is hoped some of the correspondents of the paper will help make it an interesting and useful number.

FIRST-CLASS AGENTS WANTED.

The great reputation of JOHN B. GOUGH, the magnificent make-up of "Sunlight and Shadow," and the universal demand for it among all classes, makes this the best opportunity ever offered to energetic agents to make money. We want first-class agents in every township, to whom liberal terms will be given. Address, for territory and terms, J. Dewing & Co., 420 Bush St., San Francisco.

The Grand Worthy Chief Templar of the State of West Virginia, Dr. T. H. Buck, the gifted author of "John Rodman's Pledge," and other popular writings, has just completed a new temperance and Good Templar story. Its publication will begin in the West Virginia Good Templar—official organ for the state—at an early day, and every Good Templar in the country should read it. The paper containing the story and much other valuable matter will be sent on trial three months for 20 cents, or six copies for $1. Send for it. Address,

J. B. Morgan, Publisher,
Gerardstown, W. Va.

The Temperance Almanac is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages; list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade Street, New York.

REQUISITES FOR A TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.

The Temperance Schoool $0.05

However dark the way seems, if you love the children and wish to save them, and at the same time to train up workers for temperance send for the above and learn what can be done. Then if you wish to learn how to do it, send for the following list:

1 Catechism on Alcohol, 05.
1 Juvenile Temperance Manual, 25.
1 Ripples of Song, 15.
1 Manual Set (Illustrated Tracts), 08,
All sent for 50 cents.

When you have studied these, prepared the way and fixed upon the time for opening the school and decided how many scholars you will probably have, send for catechisms enough to supply one to each scholar, to whom they may be either given or sold, price per hundred, more or less, $5.00
Ripples of Song, per dozen, 1.60
For any number less than one dezen, each 15 cts.
The above are essential while the following are extremely desirable.
Children's Illustrated Tracts, one each for each scholar, per 100, 20 cts. Postage per 200, more or less, 05
Ladder tickets, per hundred, more or less, 1.00
1 manual for each teacher, each 25c.
Chromo Test-Cards, for rewards, per hundred, more or less, 1.00
Youth's Temperance Banner, four or more copies per year each .12.

The superintendent will find it desiradle to have the following.

1 Juvenile Temperance Manual, cloth, .60
1 Alcohol and Hygiene, .60
1 Temperance Lesson-Book, paper, 25 cents, cloth, .50.
1 Temperance Physiology, paper, .50.
1 Pathology of Drunkenness, .05
1 Bacchus Dethroned, paper 50 cents, cloth 1.00
1 Medical Temperance Journal (one year) 1.00
1 Brown's Physiology, 1.25.

While all the above are very useful, the more desirable have the higher place on the list.

If money is available, it will be wise to aim at having a Loan Library.

TEMPERANCE LOAN LIBRARY.

The following valuable temperance publications are cordially recommended for all Woman's Christian Temperance Unions, to own and keep at their headquarters, for the purpose of loaning to ministers, physicians, lawyers, women and all others in the community who will read them, with the view of producing individual conviction, and educating a sound public opinion upon every phase of this question.

ENORMOUS SAVING TO SCHOOLS.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1.00, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36 besides 134 Library books, 5 song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty six million copies. There is not one of our publications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The words of the series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1¼c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2c. a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with little lesson pictures; also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c. per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words); also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c. a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45. Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. For better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection: books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5⅝ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5⅜ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

7½c. Packages of S. S. Reward Cards. 2-c. packages of reward cards for 7½c. New designs. No. 1. Poems for children, with pictures, glazed cards, assorted tints, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 2. Scripture text, with picture and verse of hymn, glazed cards, assorted tints, 48 cards, size 2⅝x3. No. 3. Beautiful chromatic card, floral design, short Scripture text 64 cards, size 1⅝x1¾. No. 4. Scripture text, chromatic card, 96 cards, size 1¾x1⅞. No. 5 Miniature Scripture text, colored designs, 192 cards, size 7⅛x1½. No. 6. Precept, promise and verse of hymn, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 4¼x2⅜. No. 7. Illuminated Scripture text and verse, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 3½x1⅝. No 8. The Lord's Prayer, floral border, glazed tinted board, 21 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 9. Ten Commandments, floral border, glazed and tinted, 12 double cards, size 4¼x6. No. 10. Band of Hope, triple pledge, beautiful chromatic card appropriately designed, 12 cards, size 3½x1½. Prices, sample package, 10c.; three or more packages, 8½c. each; ten or more packages, 8c. each; twenty five or more packages, 7½c. each. Prices include postage.

Revolution Bibles. From "Oxford" plates. Teachers' Bibles, with concordance, encyclopedia, dictionary, tables, maps, etc.—most complete teachers' Bible extant, as low as $1.30, postpaid. Gilt edge, brass bound gift Bible, with clasp and tasseled book mark for 60c. postpaid. Magnificent gift Bible, new pattern, round corners, etc., for $1.25, equal to any $1.50 gift Bible.

Lesson Commentary. On the International Lessons for 1882. Covering not only the lessons for the whole year, but the entire book of Mark, and accompanied by the "Revised Version Text," a revised reprint of the "Cambridge Scholars' Commentary." Prepared by G. F. Maclear, D. D., and J. J. S. Perowne, D. D. Price, 10c., postpaid. 5 or more, 9c. each; 25 or more, 8c. each. Book is put up in strong postal card covers. No similar work for less than $1. We also publish at same rates a complete Bible Dictionary of two thousand complete articles, 512 columns, and nearly 100 illustrations. The "Teacher's Compendium," nine books on teaching, in one; The "Ideal Sunday-School;" "Sunday-School Management" (a choice book for teachers); "Word Pictures," and "Normal Half-Hours."

Holiday Lesson Calendar. For scholars and teachers. 12 beautiful chromatic cards, 5x8 inches, one for each month, containing the International Lessons for the whole year, the Home Readings, Memory Verses, lesson pictures, verses and maxims tending to promote nobler living, etc. The whole making a beautiful and inexpensive present for the whole school, or for a class. Punched for hanging up, sold at the following marvelously cheap prices: Single calendar (the 12 cards), 10c. 5 or more calendars, 8c. each; 25 or more calendars 6½c. each; 100 or more, 5½c. each. Ready in December.

Alphabets. FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S DECORATIONS, etc., etc., on good paper. Style 1 are printed in red. Style 2 in blue. Style 1 are eight inches long and proportionate width. Style 2 are six inches long and proportionate width. We send five alphabets of Style 2 for 25c., or five alphabets of Style 1 for 30c., 10 alphabets, five of each, for 50c.

Holiday Reward Books. Reprints of choicest $1 to $1.50 story books in holiday binding, 12 kinds from one to twenty-five copies at 12c each postpaid—25 to 50, 11½c. each postpaid—50 to 100 copies, 11c. each postpaid—100 copies or more, 10½c. each postpaid. Imported Holiday reward books from 5c. up to $1. Send cash for samples, stating prices.

35c. Sunday-School Record Book. THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL ENGINEER. Space for 50 classes, reports for each Sunday in the year, cabinet of printing press helps, containing 96 blanks—all for 35c. by mail, postpaid.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:
Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

FLORENCE.—This is a very pleasant community, no saloon, no bar, no liquor selling store. A good deal of sickness prevented large meetings at the two lectures, but had good attention. By request of Rev. A. M. Hough, pastor, I spoke to Sunday-school and preached; school not being in session, and having to hurry to Compton in hopes of starting a Band of hope there. am sorry to say I could not start a band here, but am trying to arrange to go back for that purpose. At a more favorable time I think a lodge can be started. Thanks to Post Master Webb and family for hospitality.

COMPTON is one of Southern California's temperance settlements. Had written to my friend, Rev. J. B. Green, whom I knew to be an old Good Templar, and asked his co-operation in getting audiences, forming Band of Hope and instituting lodge. On arrival found he had cheerfully done so. Owing to a misunderstanding there was no meeting of children and youth to form Band of Hope, and so we had to defer it. But Bro. Green had well advertised my meetings, and he assisted me on Sunday night in his church; good singing of appropriate hymns by the choir. Next day he took me round in his buggy to see the leading people who were persuaded by our advice and his example to give their names for a lodge. And the good meeting to the lecture in Odd Fellow's hall on Monday night. Many signed the application for lodge.

Tuesday night met in A. O. U. W. hall to organize, which we did with fifty charter members, and the charter is left open for reception of about twenty more who want to have the honor of there recording their names. Bro, Frank Caseres is W. C. T., and Bro. Green L. D. and I never saw a lodge start off with better prospects. Some fellow threatens to start a saloon, but if this does not freeze him out, who knows but those strong winds that toppled the last one over may do the same for this?. It is to be hoped he will respect the almost unanimous feeling of the people in so good a community, and not provoke them by putting up a deadfall to entice any few weak ones there, and attract loafers and rowdies from other places. Two physicians, the preacher, the merchant, the R. R. agent, farmers, mechanics, and last, tho not least, ladies, young and old have joined the lodge. Bro Dr. S. McCurdy, an able and zealous member of Merrill Lodge has promised me to go on the 31st inst. and give an address in the lodge, and Bro. Gould D. D. will shortly go and confer degrees. May Evergreen lodge ever be green and flourishing.

WILMINGTON is a very hard place, full of drinking shops; one to every 60 men, women and children. The P. M. had kindly distributed the cards of appointments and put up the posters; but the people with short memories for temperance, had forgotten all about it. I had written Rev. J. White, Presbyterian minister, for use of his church and a notice from his pulpit on the preceding Sunday; but he left a postal card for me, regretting he would be away; that he could get no one to light up the church and it was a mile and a quarter out of town, and I had better get a hall. This only a few hours before the lecture hour. Started distributing RESCUES about town, and enquiring about a hall. Bro. Kennedy, of the lodge they once had here, tendered the Fireman's hall, but it was minus seats. So I had to let it go for that night, intending to arrange for next night, and send round a boy with a bell. Accepted invitation of my friend General Banning, to pass the night with him and family. Next morning a genuine snow storm which lasted till noon. There, Bro. Goulding, you have your revenge; my meeting frustrated by snow falling upon the trees loaded with oranges! There was no help for it but to return to Los Angeles. There I find the lodge circulating large numbers of Sunday Law leaflets, RESCUES and Cook's 2c library—100 copies of the latter, just to hand.

At Downey, a saloon keeper has been fined $35 for keeping open on Sunday, notwithstanding the "Free Leaguers" paid a lawyer to go down and try and persuade the jury not to render a verdict in accordance with the plain facts. At El Monte, the saloons are closed according to law on Sunday. At Los Angeles, the Band of Hope goes bravely on, Dr. McCurdy and wife at the helm.

I dont wish the Good Templars may be sick, but if they should be, it is to be hoped they wont forget the Doctor, for whisky men will give no patronage to such a conscientious, outspoken, non-whisky prescribing physician. In the trades and professions, let temperance men and women imitate the liquor men and stand by their "own kind." Word from Downey reports that the lodge entertainment, "Ten Nights in a Bar Room," was a great success, and netted over $50 for their new organ. Several new members initiated since the lecture there.

H. R. HUGHES.

Angels Camp desired another lodge, so some of the young men got up a charter list with 23 names, and on Saturday, Jan. 15th, I organized Mountain Rose Lodge; charter open one week; night of meeting, Saturday. Thomas Laird, W. C. T., Henry Peachy, W. S.; Ira Lyon, L. D. With such men at the helm, a bright future should await the new lodge.

The most cordial relations exist between the members of the new and old lodge. Angels Camp has strictly observed the Sunday law, since the decision of Judge Morrison, and I am pleased to know that we have one town in Old Calaveras, whose business men are law-abiding citizens, and I hope in the near future their worthy example will be followed by all towns in the county.

Angels, Jan. 17, 1882.

SALINAS Jan. 11th, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—In Monterey, the meetings were a success, and resulted in thirty-nine names for the lodge, sixteen of whom were initiated into the Order on Monday evening. David Jack, who is so well known as a temperance man gave one hundred dollars for the Orphans Home; a generous contribution and shows how "Our Home" is appreciated by the good and true. The collection aside from this, from the people of Monterey was liberal. The members joining the lodge are of the best in that town. Enclosed please find subscribers for the "RESCUE." The work in Salinas just begun; "twenty-two names for lodge here. The saloons of Monterey are all closed on Sunday, proving that there are some saloonists who are not law breakers." The wretched saloonist at Castroville who met his death at the hands of Constable Cassidy shows how low some of these Leagues of Freedom fall. Not content with breathing out threats of vengeance on the Pastor of M. E. Church the swede wantonly assaulted the Constable and tried to shoot him and was shot himself. This proves that even officers of the law are not safe while doing their duty. Leagues of Freedom defy every thing that conflicts with their traffic. Strange that business men will submit to such slavery as these law breakers impose upon them. Only proves the cowardice of party-politics.

C. N. GOULDING.

My last letter was mailed from Redding where I lectured on the 1, 2 and 3 in the Congregational Church to large audiences. Bro. Bartly the M. E. Clergyman having very kindly given up his appointment Sunday evening for our lecture, the lodge here is in good condition and promises well for the future. Wednesday the 4th, I started for Copper City against the advice of the "Weather Prophets" and soon discovered that it would not be a successful trip, the streams and creeks were booming, found Pitt River impassible except by means of the primitive "Row Boat," once across the river two miles ahead of us lay Copper City; but a creek "Squaw Creek" remained to be crossed, we crossed it, how, it does not matter and in due course of time arrived at our destination, having been thoroughly "immersed," the morning of the 5th, the rain poured down in torrents and reluctantly concluded to return to Redding with out lecturing at all. Sunday morning went to Shasta, addressed the scholars of the Sunday school in the afternoon and to my surprise found the house crowded in the evening, again on Monday evening the 9th, here is the Home, the Cedidel of the Champions, numbering over 70 members, it was impossible and impracticable to attempt the organization of a lodge, and under many obligations for favors conferred, on the 10th, came here (Milville) found Bro. J. J. Kemm holding the Fort as best he could, discouraged but hopeful in doubt as to what could be done, in the way of temperance, but at 7-30 o'clock found over one hundred in waiting in the church, and again on the 11th, a largely increased audience, and the prospects so bright that I concluded to lecture again on the 12th, and with good results as we obtained 14 new names for membership; the extreme cold prevented a Lodge meeting at the close of my lecture and shall return here on the 20th, and initiate those who applied last evening; in the days past and gone Milville boasted of a large and flourishing lodge local causes and dissensions caused its downfall but the prospects are brightning and I confidently believe the lost ground will be regained I go from here to Shingletown, Klotz Mill and Balls Ferry will write as opportunity occurs.

Milville January 13, 1882.

DISTRICT LODGES TO MEET.

ED. RESCUE:—The next sessien of Amador Co. D. Lodge will be held at Oleta, Friday, Feb. 3d, at 10 o'clock, A. M. JNO. W. PERRY,
Dist. Deputy.

Calaveras District lodge will meet with Charity Lodge, No. 212 at Copperopolis, Sat. Feb. 4, 1882. There are now 17 lodges in the county in good working order and a large attendance is expected.
C. DUFFY, D. S.

SANTA BARBARA Co. Dist. Lodge, Wed., Feb. 15th, at 10 A. M. at Lompoc, in Rose of Lompoc Lodge room, and continues two days; all members of the Order welcomed. J. J. Steele, D. F. S.

SALINAS.—Mrs. Stevens reports a boom in Salinas; crowded houses every night for a week; ministers all co-operating. Monday night Mrs. Stevens initiated eighty-three members into Salinas Lodge; one hundred and twenty-five names obtained. Mrs. Stevens found hearty co-operation and regretted leaving Monterey County so soon.

SAN JOSE.—Bro. W. H. Gilmore reports Granger Lodge as numbering over 100. Had open lodge lately with an address by Dr. Snowden and propose an entertainment in aid of the O. H. He visited Los Gatos Lodge and reports good progress under the W. C. T, Sister James. They much desire a visit from Mrs. Stevens in that county, and will give her a grand opportunity to talk when she comes.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

EIGHT cities of Massachusetts voted lately against license, and 11 in favor of legalized robbery, harlotry and murder.

The National Temperance Society's tract No. 156, "Some Comfort for Drinkers" alluded to last week is the first document that society has issued, that was written in the vicinity of Cape Horn.

THE Reading Star, Pa. alluded to last week, credited Missouri, with 30 murders and three suicides in 1881. The St. Louis papers give the number of the former as 36 and the latter 82 in the city of St Louis alone. Faulty statistics, Bro. Maice.

THE Woman's Herald of Industry for January, edited by Mrs, Stowe, is a lively, interesting and very ably written paper. And it has adopted a partial amendment of the most barbarous method of spelling which still remains in common use.

THE CRUSADER says the retiring mayor of the city (London, Canada) disgraced his position by presenting a liquor bill of $46.50 incurred by him in treating his friends at the Provincial Exhibition and when a member of the finance committee opposed the payment, he assailed him in the filthy and profane language peculiar to the barroom. Consistent all thru.

THE Chronicle of the 18th, reporting the matter of the twenty arrests made on complaint of Marx P. Schetzel for violation of the Sunday Law in San Francisco, says the complainant is a Good Templar "and an ardent supporter of the RESCUE." The ardent supporters of a paper, are generally heard of at the office of its publication; but as neither Mr. Marx P. Schetzel or any other Schetzel has ever before been heard of here, and as it is extremely probable that Mr. Schetzel never heard of the RESCUE or the Good Templars, it is supposed that the reporter who furnished the item to the Chronicle, knew that part of it was a lie and that he was the author of it; a contemptible tho entirely consistent thing for the section of reporters to do, who bum around the groggeries for beer slops.

OPIUM is declared by the governor of Bengal to be no longer the most profitable crop in India for the cultivator. Railways and improved commerce have made potatoes and vegetables a much better paying crop; and in some instances sugar has paid the farmer more than three times the profit derived from opium.

SIXTY CENTS invested in whisky in Fannin county, Texas in 1879 made a young man named Dean shoot Dan Coulter. Then two men in revenge killed Dean; they were tried several times. and finally rescued by a mob who broke the jail open. Besides the lives of two men, that 60 cents made a bill of costs for the county of over $10,000. But still men vote for the old whisky parties. They have not had murder enough yet.

S. SIMPSON, in W. T., wants his paper stopped, says he did not order it and wont pay for it. If he gets it, somebody has paid for it; but as he gives no clue to where he is except that the postal card is stamped by an office in W. T., to which this paper is not sent from here, nothing can be done here to cheer up our illused friend. The rain and sunshine will proceed here as usual.

A BRILLIANT discovery in the interpretation of the prophecies of Daniel, has been recently made by the students of the hidden things of scripture. They find now, that whenever they can establish the starting point of the 2300 days and the 1290 days and the 1335 days spoken of by Daniel, it will be quite a simple thing to point out with tolerable accuracy, the year in which the other end of those days will occur. Meantime, since 1881 went out peaceably, they have postponed the next catastrophe to 1890.

THOSE effective and genuine workers in the cause of temperance who have helped in various ways to extend the circulation of the RESCUE for the past year, all combined, have at the end of this quarter, the result of seeing as near as possible, 2½ times the weekly number printed, that were issued 15 months ago; if we continue doubling up in the same time right along, we shall run up to 600,000 in seven years, and that will be eminently satisfactory to all concerned.

MISS WILLARD was elected to the Presidency of the Executive Committtee of the Home Protection Party, but has resigned, and Geo. W. Bain has been appointed in her place. Miss Willard has by no means withdrawn her sympathy and active cooperation, but thinks it would be manifestly inappropriate for her to be at the head of this party as well as of the W. C. T. U. Now Bro. Bain, study well the proverbs of Solomon and the military tactics of the only Napoleon; and with the inspiration of wisdom and energy derived from them and from the matchless administrative example of Miss Willard, aiding your own grand talents, let us hear you lead the chorus, "our cause is marching on."

WINE VS. WHEAT.—France raised probably last year, enough grapes to waste in making a thousand million gallons of useless crime and death producing drinks. But it lacks 58 million bushels of wheat to feed its people, which might have been raised on a portion of those wasted lands and it will take about 105 million dollars of French gold away from that country forever to pay for it. That is about double the amount of the French export of wines and brandies fabricated from glucose and turnips for English and American throats. The wheat crop of that country is 294 million bushels in a good harvest, and the consumption, 352 million.

OAKLAND.—The Home Protection Society in Oakland have entered complaint against the proprietors of the Opera gardens, for violation of the Sunday law on two occasions: also against several of the male actors and the door keeper. The League of outlaws however had over 40 arrests made on their own complaints; one of them was the informing witness of the Home Protectionists who paid his fine at once. One of the parties arrested by the League, pled guilty and was willing to pay his fine, but the outlaws forced him to retract his plea and plead a lie, agreeing to defend him. Their object is to block the courts and make law against the public robbers futile. The Law and Order people desire that the law which forbids the public practice of debauching vicious crime on Sunday, and compels a day of rest for the weary, and protects the laborer from the rapacity of his task master on one day of the week should be respected. They dont propose or desire to curtail in the slightest degree the liberty or happiness of a single being, but the rumselling redhanded revelers in human blood, the traders in women's tears and woes, the wholesale betrayers of female virtue, the robbers of the children's food, unanimously proclaim that if they are not permitted to prostitute the Sabbath as they prostitute everything else and use it as a day of special debauchery and unusual bloody crime, they will harass and dragoon and persecute every trader and dealer that pursues an honest vocation, until like a horse-whipped, coward cur, he begs in mercy at their feet and owns them as God and Master.

THE Call of the 23d has the following on the Sunday law Guiteau and his friends: "The League of Freedom, which originally was composed wholly of liquor dealers, has so changed its constitution as to permit dealers of every description to become members, and many persons are taking advantage of the opportunity. A number of storekeepers doing business on Market street, among them a few who were arrested on the warrants sworn out by Max P. Schetzel, have become dissatisfied with the management of the officers of the League, and it is said that they held a meeting yesterday at the Tivoli for the purpose of forming a new organization. They say that Schetzel was put up to cause the arrests by certain officers of the League, so as to scare a large number of storekeepers into applying for membership, and thereby swelling the revenues of the society. A saloonkeeper stated that officers and agents of the League were busy all day in obtaining names of proprietors of stores who kept their places open, and that in a few days a multitude of warrants would be issued. He also said that it was the intention to arrest car-drivers and conductors, steamboat and railroad men, and persons of every trade who transacted business upon the Sabbath. The only instance of compliance with the law which could be discovered in the saloon line was that of a place on Montgomery street, which displayed a placard on the door, notifying thirsty people that 'This saloon will close on Sundays, by request of the landlord.'" One of the saloon dive keepers arrested has tried to get Schetzel arrested for stealing 72 bottles of beer in May last. It makes no comment on the conduct of the officers of the League denying that Schetzel was their agent and envoy.

TEACHINC SCHOOL AND BOARDING ROUND.

My thots go back to the rosy prime
And memory paints anew the scenes
Afar in the bleak New England clime,
Tho half a century intervenes.
On a highway corner the schoolhouse stands,
Under an elm-tree, broad and tall,
And rollicking children in laughing bands
Come at the master's warning call.
They pile together their sleds and skates,
Hang hats and hoods in the entry way,
And gathering pencils, books and slates,
Diligent study succeeds to play.
A mountain stream turns a gray stone mill,
That runs with a low and slumberous sound;
And there in fancy I wander still,
Teaching school and boarding around.

Near by is a mansion large and square,
With doors and casements of faded red,
A stoop that shades from the summer glare,
And wood well piled in the sheltering shed.
There's an ancient barn with swallow holes
High in the gable, three in a line;
The lithe bay colt in the deep snow rolls;
From racks of hay feed the docile kine;
Closely are huddled the timorous sheep,
As the flails resound from the threshingfloor.
The pilfering poultry stealthily creep
And silently watch at the open door
For each stray kernel of shelling grain.
Full of content was the lot I found
Among the farm folk, honest and plain,
Teaching school and boarding around.

The farmer's table has lavish supplies,
Chicken and sausage of flavor rare,
Crullers and cookies and puddings and pies,
Are items rich in the bill of fare.
The teacher sleeps in a full soft bed,
Kept clean for guests in the great spare room,
With gay chintz curtains over his head
And blankets wove in the old hand loom.
The thrifty wife ere the break of day
Springs from her rest tho the morn is cool,
And breakfast ended, we haste away
O'er the shining crust to the district school.
Here morals are pure and manners sincere,
And men in the church and state renowned
Have made the first step in a high career,
Teaching school and boarding around.

In the moonlight evening long and still
The youth assemble from many a farm;
Tho the air without is crisp and chill,
There's a bright wood fire and a welcome warm
Nuts and apples are handed round,
The hands of the clock get a backward turn,
Innocent frolic and mirth abound
Till low in their sockets the candles burn.
Young men and maidens of artless ways
Are drawn together in groups like this
Their hands are joined in the rural plays,
And sweet lips meet in the guileless kiss;
Twin hearts are linked with a golden chain,
And love with marriage is early crowned.
How oft I dream I am there again,
Teaching school and boarding around.

ESSAY

On "The Twin Evils, Intemperance and Tobacco" winning the second R. H. Mc Donald prize medal and eight dollars in money.

Written by John Harper, age sixteen, a nephew of Harper Bros. of publishing fame of New York City. Mr. Harper is a pupil of the Boy's High School Classical Middle Class.

TWIN EVILS, INTEMPERANCE AND TOBACCO.

All wine and liquor contains some alcohol, even the very grape contains it. It it almost undisputed that alcohol is poisonous. Men of learning know it and the ignorant often learn it to their sorrow. Intoxication from alcoholic liquors has been known for many centuries. Cases are mentioned in the Bible.

Tobacco according to one analysis contains two absolute poisons, nicotine and nicotianine. These would be as effective as prussic acid if used in the same manner. Tobacco was first introduced into civilized countries about A. D. 1500; but was not extensively used till nearly a century afterwards. Since their introduction the use of alcohol and tobacco has steadily increased until now the trade in these two articles is immense. The United States revenue from distilled spirits in 1869 was $55,600,000; the revenue of England from the same source is about $30,000,000. The value of the United States tobacco crop in 1875 was $29,000,000. The effect of alcohol on the human system is marked. After receiving it into the stomach, it becomes mixed with the blood and so adulterates it as to affect the vital organs especially the brain. Tobacco likewise affects the vital organs, more especially the brain and heart. While the immediate effect of alcohol seems to be the exciting of the brain, that of tobacco is rather to stupify it.

A man with a diseased brain is not a perfect man. He loses his intellectual power, judgment and will, in short, all those faculties which place him above a beast.

Every one knows the value of health, yet why will man continue drinking and smoking? Some claim alcohol gives strength; but it is never used in training an athlete. Some claim it gives nourishment; but even physicians are undecided on this point, and prefer to use it as little as possible. Tobacco it is claimed calms the nerves. Yes, somewhat, but at the cost of wearing them out. Most people use alcohol and tobacco solely for pleasure; but how wicked to sacrifice health for the moment's pleasure. It should also be remembered that by diseasing our own body we may ruin that of our posterity.

The moral effect of these twin evils is also bad. Not only by weakening the higher faculties do they debase man, but also thru their associations. Compare the den where drinking and smoking are indulged in with the elegant parlor of the cultivated, where they are forbidden. In the former vile associations, evil companions, filthy conversation, and sometimes disgusting sights; in the latter, refined women, (the greatest test of civilization) intellectual and pleasant associations and improving conversation. Alcohol and tobacco are from their very nature enemies to health, cleanliness and good society.

We must all have seen some terrible example of the effects of these twin evils. The drunkard who often becomes an imbecile or maniac is daily seen in our streets. Spain to-day is a national example of the same. In the last three centuries Spain has lost her political importance, excellence in art and literature and national spirit. Tobacco is one of the chief causes of this, but not the only one.

One of the most striking phases of this question is the ruin of our youth. The youth are the nation's future men, and look at the youth of to-day. As a class they are slender, pale and weak; still the pride of many a boy is to stand at the bar drinking or smoking.

Why did the Creator place these poisons, for such they are, here? For the same great reason that he placed any poison here.

Is there then no remedy for the use of alcohol and tobacco? Temperance societies, temperance journalism and temperance legislation have fought them but yet they have still increased. Have these monsters overpowered us? No, but hitherto we have underrated our enemy's strength, and our force has been too weak. Let us now strengthen our forces, and then with new strength and God and right on our side we must conquer.

THERE is a fault in the above essay which needs attention; it innocently says, "there is alcohol in the grape;" a mistaken idea entertained by a great many people. In none of all the things which God has made for us, is there a particle of alcohol; and none can ever be produced except by one process; viz: the rotting of sugar by fermentation. Thus the grape and the grain and every fruit or vegetable that contains starch or sugar can be made to produce alcohol, by rendering it rotten, filthy and unfit for any good purpose; the starch can be converted into sugar, and the sugar into alcohol and carbonic acid gas, by decay and decomposition. It is well to remember that the alcohol which is produced in cider, beer, ale, currant wine, grape wine, and all wine and in whisky from potatoes, turnips, kitchen slops &c., is all one and the same thing exactly. It is only mixed with water and flavored with different materials to make the various drinks; but the alcohol is precisely the same in all, and if distilled and separated, no one could discover any difference in the least, between the alcohol from potato starch converted into sugar, and the alcohol from grape sugar.

TALK.

As a rule, fine talk about successfully circumventing satanic influences by home comforts, pictures, pianos, Chautauqua Circles and benign patronage of reformative institutions, comes from well-meaning and really charitable people. These view the normal aquisition of industry, cultivated taste, soul discipline and pure affection—inclusive of all the virtues and graces which abide or are supposed to govern, in these ideal home-circles, as the product of financial ability and loyalty to form, or outward phenomena; hope to initiate an era of moral rectitude and purity by milleniums of pecuniary competencies; hope to insure mental integrity and spirit culture by means of a kind of chromo-civilization where all the glory is on the outside, and the dirt within, but well hidden.

Now, the fact is, we have too much and too many of these ideas of unutterable wretchedness already. We are called to witness desertions of such for the lower levels of carnal indulgences and beastly gratifications every day in the year.

The most hardened and unsavory hoodlumism so often is developed under these very auspices. The unfortunates, which people our dens of vice and infamy, so often trace their first temptation and fall, to the mockery of outward gloss and inward corruption.

This is remindive of the hopeful endeavor of a certain class of benevolent philanthropists who affect to cure leprosy by daub of paints of imaculate print.

"But seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

Has any reader of this heard? Verily, he will bear witness to the fact that one grain of the substance of religion, is worth all the kingdoms of this world, with their beggarly elements of empty show and inward corruption of the heart.

Honest, undisguised, brazen vice with all its reproach, curse and wretchedness, is a lighter burden than the crushing load of appearing what we are not—to be forced to keep up a semblance of respectability and wealth (material or spiritual) where the bottom has dropped out of either.

Thus, also, shall the publicans and sinners enter the kingdom of heaven, before the whitened sepulchers of society.

Pictures, pianos and literature, are very nice and harmless things in their way, but they will never fill the bill in homes where the peace of God abideth not. How often we waste our time in pursuit and advocacy of shadows, while the substance is begging at our door. Were it not better to lay the hand upon our mouth, ere we have taken a second thot whether or not there is a lie in our right hand? J. C. K.

THE WHISKY SCHOOL.

Our liquor dealers' circular talks of educating the public in the interest of liquor to prevent prohibitory laws.

The idea of whisky being an educator is interesting. Whisky turned school master! That is good. Whisky is indeed an old professor, and has been engaged some centuries in the business of teaching. He has many colleges and universities all over the land. All the States have at all times granted him charters, and in many instances gave him magnificent endowments. Yes, whisky is a noted educator. Did you ever see his pupils? They all wear badges—red noses and bloated faces, for the one class, and pale faces and sunken cheeks for another. Whisky qualifies his graduates for business. He turns out thieves, murderers, wife beaters, and makes widows and orphans by thousands. Its a fine school—the pupils generally learn well and succeed in business. The tuition is pretty high. It costs everything one owns to graduate in the whisky school. We have known men to pay down all their money, land, fame, home—home comforts, wife and children down even to the hungry babe—yes, gave all in payment of his tuition in the whisky school. And then comes the degree, for whisky always confers on its graduates a doctorate—U. D. untimely death. This document is highly ornamented. It is written in the blood of wives and children by a pen of sorrow. A rattling skeleton, stands in fire and holding hissing serpents in each hand, which entwine the skeleton's neck and bite his heart, is the coat of arms inscribed on the terrible parchment. We prefer our children should be trained in the school of prohibition.—Banner, of Little Rock, Arkansas.

MR WHITWORTH, an M. P. of England, recently said at a public meeting that having been a total abstainer thru life, he could trace out five hundred persons who have become total abstainers by the effect of his example. A good many who read this might with safety and much certain profit try to equal his record. It would be a good plan for some of our young folks to have a little book to keep a private record of the converts they win over. When they get advanced in years they will find the list a very long one, if they have tried to make it so.

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

On the 17th February it is proposed to issue an edition of 20,000 copies of the RESCUE. An excellent opportunity of advertising will be afforded on that occasion. And it is hoped some of the correspondents of the paper will help make it an interesting and useful number.

COMPLAINTS.

MRS. WOODBRIDGE, the Recording Secretary of the National W. C. T. U., has issued a circular calling attention to the entire silence of the program of the week of prayer on the subject of the temperance reform. Mrs. H. C. McCabe, editor of the W. C. T. U. colum in the Delaware Signal, comments regretfully upon the attitude presented by the committee who devised that program, and concludes thus: "It seems to us that the business of Christian people in reform is chiefly with the government. It will bear a vast amount of rebuke, and needs a ceaseless tide of prayer. It is going to have both. For the government which was once the great slaveholder, is still the great saloon-keeper, the great polygamist, the great Indian robber."

It is pleasant to know that the department of the Christian Church which serves and worships God under the name of W. C. T. U. is faithful enough to protest even so mildly against the broad taunting insult to Almighty God and to the Christian people of America embodied in that program. Of course some people and some societies modified it and entirely changed it, and prayed for temperance in spite of the committee, and in the opening services of the New Year they worshiped God in sincerity and truth and let us hope with acceptance, but the evidences indicate that the framers of the program intended and directed that the prayers of this great nation should go up to God a mockery, utterly ignoring and omitting all mention of the great source of at least nine-tenths of all the sin and vice and satan worship which afflicts the world—offering no repentance or promise of amendment in the great overshadowing national sin—seeking no aid to remove it, asking no blessing on the efforts of those who are laboring in sincerity and truth to reclaim the world and bring it under the dominion of its rightful Sovereign. And in this thing the committee treated with purposely marked contempt the oft-repeated prayers and entreaties of the Christian what temperance people of the nation, refusing them they would have cheerfully accorded to any other decent interest. It was just such a program as the Scribes and Pharisees might have put up after the scene on Calvary, with a few technical changes; the greatest sin concealed, and the chiefest blessing unsought. Yet it seemed perfectly satisfactory to everybody who professes to consider the rum curse as only one insignificant unit of a thousand equal sins, rather than confess it to be what it always has been, at least in the Christian world, the great central sun and source of sin and misery and blasphemy, around which a group of minor satellites of evil revolve, and from which they derive the heat and life and energy which maintain them ever in active, vigorous force and growth. And no doubt many thousands who do little thinking of their own, joyously accepted that program without more ado than to suppose it an inspired work of saintly authorship.

And there are others, no doubt, who think it improper, irreverent and ill natured to criticise that program and its motives in this manner; very probably some of them may experience a good measure of what they consider (righteous?) indignation, because everybody does not keep still when he sees the sword coming, and "say peace when there is no peace."

Many years ago the advocates of temperance incurred an immense amount of hostility from those whose assistance they expected to have—because they went too far and denounced moderate drinking as a sin; but time has made them right. Then they made bitter enemies because they gave pledges, such a wicked thing to break, but the people who were offended were the first to tempt the pledged to commit the crime of faithlessness. Then more enmity against the radicalism of barring out cider and good wholesome wine, but time has approved their action. More enemies for assailing the respectability of the retail rumseller. Patience exhausted when infidel doubts were expressed as to the consistency and christian perfection of a deacon or a church member who was a wholesale drunkard maker a distiller or brewer. Charity dethroned when societies were formed with a password!! Propriety shocked when these societies dared invoke the name and help of God and invade the churches and meet in schoolhouses. Piety convulsed at the idea of examining bible texts and translations. The mystery and Latin shrouded domain of medicine assailed with profane inquiries brot us solemn, learned, profound rebuke; but time and science have always affixed the stamp of truth upon our ever enlarging platforms. Inquest has been made as to who, unknown to the public, sign petitions for license to kill men and betray female virtue and sell boy and girl to death; impertinent espionage and more disgust. Taking temperance into politics, local, state and national, into the church and school and Sunday school, into the week of prayer and prayer meeting and social circle and home, excites hostility. And the question of home protection which asks, shall the mother of the American home have an equal voice in framing the laws and controling the destiny of her children, with the foreign or other male jailbird and ignorant outlaw and tramp who comes to this country or lives in it only to prey upon the lives and souls of its people and votes for the wrong and the nasty every time?

All these steps and advances upon the works of the evil one have awakened and will awaken the master of the opposition to stir up enemies without and within the camp; but time and truth will in the end prevail, and to the master of truth and righteousness we shall all render our account.

Men have practiced political knavery so often and so long, it has become second nature to them. The entire administration of this whole government is, and always has been, a gigantic fraud. For men to proclaim to the listening world that taxation without representation is tyranny, and then disfranchise one half of the taxed people, is to proclaim themselves at once both tyrants and robbers. And when conscience and honor are so callous as to glory in the oppression and crime, nothing better than a bankruptcy in morals is to be expected.

No man ever wronged another without doing a greater wrong to himself. Curses come home to roost. The appalling corruption that has gangrened our entire political system, is the inevitable effect of the practical violation of the principle of justice upon which our government is theoretically based.—Tap Root.

WILL-POWER.

It is strange so few have any will-power; so few that have a granite wall, between them and temptation, built high and strong of facts and truths cemented by the trial and test of predecessors; instead all barriers are down and so many slide here and there as invitation offers. The great questions of right and wrong are never answered; the first allurements have them. They are forever objects for redemption. Lack-a-daisical persons whom the wine cup or any other form of the devil can tempt. Whose economy is not principle, but a matter of teaching and if once taught only holding while watched, or presented in an agreeable or easy form. The economy that makes persons honest at any self-denial; and workers, tho at ever so low a salary.

We need more clear force of mind that dont have to be reformed, that dont drink to idiocy and indulge in any way to imbecility. Will-power that is so easy to acquire and insures grand self-respect.

As the people stand to-day the government of good is in the hands of a few rulers—divine appointed kings, and queens, and emperors, but they can only control a few. We need a Republic of equal self-governing souls before earth can approximate the happiness we might enjoy. BETH.

TO FRIENDS OF TEMPERANCE REFORM.

All temperance people are coming to see that organic unity is necessary. The "Alliances" all over the country show this. In a little while, a few months, perhaps years, this desire for unity will accomplish itself in the state and nation; for what the temperance people of this country really want to do, they will do.

That is what makes it such a comfortable thing to fight on God's side. When God fights, some party gets whipped, and if we are on His side, we are not the party. And those who struggle for abused women and children, and to save weak, deluded men from themselves and their tempters, need have no fear but that they are on God's side.

Is there any better thing to do now than to unite all the reliable temperance voters in every town and ward into a "Home Protection Club," or some other name if preferred? The leading idea is unity; standing together in such action as the majority may favor. It does not mean neglecting the lodge or the council or the church or any existing work; but simply that members of all societies have one common ground, where they stand as a unit. One live man who realizes the importance of union can do this. Let him invite the tried friends of Reform to meet and organize a club, league or alliance in the usual way. The one thing they are to agree in, is to stand together in what they attempt. What they shall attempt they must decide for themselves, being guided by their own surroundings. They may decide to attend the "primaries" to select the best nominees of the other parties, to put up candidates of their own, to enforce existing laws, all appropriate things to do. But by all means counsel and act together, with a perfect understanding. And always be represented in County and District Conventions. This plan costs nothing. The town must be very near Sodom, that has not the material for such a club. Has any one a better plan? A. J. JUTKINS.

CHAUTAUQUA TRAINING SCHOOLS FOR TEMPERANCE WORKERS, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE W. N. C. T. U.

Rev. Dr. John H. Vincent, of Chautauqua, enters with heartiness into the plans laid before him as a basis for a Temperance Training School. The following is an outline:

1. The origin, history, aims and methods of the temperance reform is to be systematically taut in a series of studies to be determined, and lectures to be given by a faculty appointed by the W. N. C. T. U.; the studies to extend thru one year and be pursued at home; the lectures to be given in the summer at Chautauqua.

2. Written examinations to be held there, on the entire course, and certificates given in accordance with the results.

3. A model W. C. T. U., with young ladies' and children's branches, to be organized at Chautauqua, officered by officers of the Training School and made, so far as possible, to illustrate the methods taught.

4. The faculty of the school to be chosen by the Executive Committee of the W. N. C, T. U., and authorized to select and employ such specialties in physiology, hygiene, medicine and different branches of philanthropic and legal and political work, as will in their judgment conduce most to the success of the object in view; sending out into our local, State and National work, the largest possible number of women, specially trained in our system and methods.

For circulars descriptive of details in this plan, address Mrs. C. B. Buell, Cor. Sec'y, W. N. C. T. U., 53 Bible House, New York. All of which is submitted to the Executive Committee.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

THE SIGNAL.

With the first number of the new volume we shall "come out" still further in a new heading and with various improvements. Remember, our physiology lessons by Dr. Ridge are to be begun next week, and let Unions provide themselves with Signals for the temperance school and the Band of Hope. A department of Hygiene will also be opened under the charge of Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, National Superintendent of this division of the W. C. T. U. work and her accomplished secretary, Miss Minnie Kelly of the Chicago W. C. T. U. Mrs. Georgia Hulse McLeod, of Baltimore, will be responsible for a column devoted to "Our Southern Work" and "News from the field" will be more abundant, while the field itself will be enlarged. We mean to make the Signal indispensable to the W. C. T. U. of the West, and its weekly visits full of valuable communications to workers at large, both East and West. Help us with your dollars and dimes, and we will send great broad rays of light in impartial brilliancy all over the surrounding country,—Signal.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

D. G. W. C. T. s COMMISSIONED.—The following commissions have been issued and forwarded from the Grand Worthy Secretary's office during the past week:

LODGE DEPUTIES.

Mrs. Emma Bennett for No. 467. Pleasanton.
Rev. C. M. Palmer, for No. 474, Saratoga.
Mrs. Kate G. Adams, for No. 475, Lancha Plana.
Rev. J. B. Green, for No. 477, Compton.
Ira Lyon, for No. 478, Angels Camp.
J. A. Boyd, for No. 479, Visalia.
Mrs. Ellen Foster, for No. 150, Auburn.
T. R Chapin, for No. 228, Greenville.
J. T. Bloomer, for No. 315, Ripon.

TEXAS. Ho!—Bro. H. S. Graves, G. W. C. of West Butte, Sutter Co., called on Monday en route for Texas. He goes direct to El Paso on a short business trip. It is hoped he may avoid falling into the clutches of the gentle cow boys, as he is neither a jig dancer nor a comic singer. But as a temperance worker he rates A 1. and scatters seeds of temperance wherever he goes. Under his leadership the Sutter and Yuba District lodge has become one of the foremost in efficiency in the state. All will unite in the wish of a prosperous trip and speedy return to our good brother.

PARKER'S HISTORY.—The G. W. S. has received an invoice of 100 copies of Parker's history of the I. O. G. T. The book is all that was promised, making a volume of 311 pages, handsomely bound in cloth at $1.25, or half morocco at $1.75. To secure a copy, orders should be sent in at an early day, as it is expected the first edition will soon be sold. Address all orders to the G. W. S. accompanying the order with the coin.

STATEMENTS OF ACCOUNT.—During the past week each lodge indebted in any amount to the Grand Lodge was furnished a statement of account thru its Lodge Deputy. It is requested that these statements be carefully examined, and if errors or omissions be found, that they be reported promptly to the G. W. S. for correction. The amount thus reported due should be promptly forwarded, if not at once, at least no later than with the per capita tax for the current quarter. Prompt settlements are urged. All accounts should be balanced at least quarterly. The growth of the Order makes the book keeping alone of the G. W. S. office an onerous duty. No other state is so lenient with its subordinates in extending credit for supplies etc., thus requiring an open account to be kept with each subordinate lodge. This great labor may be materially facilitated by the prompt settlement of lodges.

PERSONALS.—During the past week the Grand Lodge office was visited by the following members of the Order: Bro. Wm. Crowhurst, Grand Lecturer, who was en route for Placer county; Bro. Geo. W. Arper of Mission Star Lodge No. 160, San Francisco who has become a delver for gold, and was en route toward his mines in Butte county; Bro. W.H. Chessall and A. D. Streeter, of Chapel Lodge, No. 191, Coleville, who were returning to their homes after an extended visit to the central portion of the state, and Bro. B. H. McNeil of Crystal Fount Lodge No 240 Gridley who was summoned as a witness in the great debris case now on trial at the Capital.

Lecturers' Reports.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

J. W. WEBB.

TUSTIN.—My report from several places seems to have miscarried and I make a brief resume, as best I can recollect. This is a beautiful place near Santa Ana. Many Eastern and temperance people coming to settle. Quiet and orderly, no saloons and the store is closed on Sundays. Started a good Band of Hope, but could only get 3 names for a lodge. If Santa Ana and Orange lodges, both handy, would take an interest and look the matter up before another lecturer's visit, a lodge could be instituted. The lodges of Los Angeles have not enough missionary spirit. Oranges and grapes for raisins, not so many for wine, thrive here.

ORANGE.—Hired a team to take me over, no provision having been made. Put up at Anderson's Hotel, kept by Christian people in an unexceptional manner. This place is growing fast; Eastern people coming and buying, attracted by its orange and lemon groves, and apricot, walnut and other deciduous fruits and grand raisins which are proved to pay far better than wine grapes. Two good churches, M. E. and Presbyterian; both pastors belong to lodge and have monthly Sunday temperance sermons alternately. Lodge is growing and contemplates building a hall, having offers of help. They hesitate because of a (groundless) fear that the Grand Lodge might take the property from them in some event. I tried to impress them with the fact that the Grand Lodge has no desire or use for any such property, except to hold it (in the event of the lodge dying) for temperance purposes and to hand over to a new lodge, should the old one die, and to keep it forever from falling into the rum power's hands. But this is a very unlikely contingency. I have asked Bros. Gould and Thompson as lawyers and executive officers, to give them in writing, an official opinion to that effect. Then I hope we may hear of the hall going up and the lodge continuing to grow. Bros. D. J. and W. A. Bartley, formerly of Lompoc Lodge, are recent valuable additions. Prof. Norton teaches a very successful school. He used to belong to the former lodge; hope he will to this one. Had good meetings; needed more time.

WESTMINSTER is another Temperance Colony, no saloon, no bar or liquor-selling. Lodge thrives. Started good Band of Hope; good meetings, especially the Union Gospel Temperance Meeting in the church. An effort was being made to send a lodge donation of the beautiful raisins they grow here and other things as a Christmas present for the Home. Efforts were being made to secure a visit and lecture from Dr. Allen, the great temperance worker who went round with a tent some time ago. I wrote the Dr. urging him to pay the visit and I hear he has been and lectured twice to large audiences, the people always greeting him with the greatest enthusiasm.

He recently married and keeps the Post Office Drug Store and practices in Los Angeles.

PASADENA.—To this, another very beautiful Temperance settlement where citrus and deciduous fruits do well Bro. W. H. Lloyd kindly accompanied and helped me. Dr. Congar has demonstrated that raisins pay better than wine grapes. After paying for labor etc., his netted him $115 per acre! We had fairly attended meetings. The lodge is not strong because the older folks give very little countenance and co-operation to the determined few who "hold the fort." It is too bad for they have money enough to buy a lot and have conditionally done so. Merrill Lodge has always helped them and will again, so will the new lodge I expect to start at Alhambra; and all it needs is the hearty support of the influential citizens of its own neighborhood to soon have a hall and a strong Lodge. I tried in vain to start a Band of Hope. The two preachers, Bro. Farnsworth of M. E. Church and Rev, Mr. Baker, Presbyterian, are offering to co-operate with the Lodge in holding monthly Sunday open meetings, a good move.

ALHAMBRA.—Bro. Bryant took me over where Bro. Farnsworth, Stuntz and Beardslee, of three different places, had consulted and each written me; good meeting the result and 23 names obtained for a lodge to be organized after another lecture next Tuesday

I write this under the hospitable roof of Bro. E. A. Beardslee, formerly of Maine Prairie and so well known as a zealous worker in Solano Co. I sent you ten names for RESCUE from Los Angeles, last week; have one from Pasadena, three only for all that prosperous, intelligent, temperance place! At District Lodge. Br. Beardslee promised to help the W. V. T. get up a Club and they succeeded in sending six names. Am distributing good many sample copies, and selling Cook's books and papers. Am sorry my long program this far South keeps me from both Ventura and Santa Barbara District Lodges.

H. R. HUGHES.

Lectured Sunday afternoon to a good house at Calaveritas. Population very scattering; people came from all parts of the surroundings.

In 1860 there were nearly 2000 people in the various camps around Calaveritas; now about 200 all told. Met many old friends among them. Mr. Walker and his good wife who have kept up a Sunday school for the young and old that is always well attended. At some future time we may have a lodge there. In the evening had but few out at Fourth Crossing.

Monday went to Lancha; found the new lodge doing well. The 17th and 18th at Jackson Valley resulted in Buena Vista Lodge with 20 charter members. Bro. Edward P. Fitzsimmons, Lodge Deputy.

The 19th and 20th at Carbondale, a large place; no store, no saloon, but a railroad station and school house, with a couple of dwelling houses in sight. Still the people came out from somewhere, and we organized Starlight Lodge; Sister Julia Sherfy, Lodge Deputy. I complete the organization tomorrow afternoon.

Michigan Bar, Jan. 21, 1882.

W. C. KING.

To the usual difficulties impeding the lecturer's work, I must at this time notice a few special ones. First, sickness of an epidemic form. From the time I entered this (Tulare) county, the first of the month, it has increassd; depleting audiences, breaking up meetings entirely, and now is so generally prevalent that further work is impossible. It is only the so-called innocent measles, but has here united with it pneumonia and whooping-cough, and has assumed so severe a form that fear is widespread.

Then the drought has induced a depression that no amount of enthusiasm will stimulate into healthy action. Everybody is seemingly looking skyward, and the first question on every lip, "when will it rain?" Thus far, but one-eighth of an inch has fallen, and plows are idle, men are planning to leave in search of work that shall furnish something to tide over a "dry year" on; the business marts are nearly or quite deserted. Indeed, I have heard the doleful response, "We would gladly have done thus and so, but now its a dry year——" until my heart is sickened with the general demoralization such a calamity works socially as well as financially. How great the calamity is, one must ride for days over wheat fields all sown, but now dry and bare as an ash heap, to realize. Add to these, two unavoidable obstacles to large collections or anything "brilliant" in the "gilt-edged" record line, a third, that I am traveling over a route traversed only six weeks ago, and the blue part of my letter is complete.

At Lakeside, on January 6th and 7th, I met royal souls and had several excellent meetings. On Sabbath, organized a fine Band of Hope, with Bro. J. M. Moore as Superintendent. The following Thursday I visited the new lodge at Townsend. They have made excellent—yes, remarkable progress. Have now a cozy hall, and are doing a noble work. Brother J. A. Hicks, the enterprising L. D., with Bro. Woodward, the W. C. T., deserve great credit for their zeal.

On Thursday evening I met an intelligent audience at Hokes Valley school-house; rallied on only five hour's notice, and left an appointment for the next evening. In spite of the extreme cold weather, a goodly number assembled, and at the close organized a lodge with 25 charter membership. Bro. J. A. Boyd is L. D.; the right man in the right place.

Sabbath evening, by invitation extended during the week, I occupied the M. E. church [at Visalia?] and presented the interests of our cause as best I could. When I looked over the audience, and noticed only two Good Templars present, after so long a notice of my coming, out of a lodge boasting nearly 100 membership, my spirits sank to zero. It is from such lodges that complaints as to the lecture field come up. Brothers Haines and Zumwalt, the old war horses of Good Templarism in Visalia, work nobly, and have much to discourage.

Yokohl Valley people want a lodge, but sickness caused failure. The latter is true of Frazier where we hoped to meet the lodge. The same cause makes the carrying out of our plans for the coming fortnight impossible, hence, they must be reconsidered.

GOLD RUN, Placer Co., Jan. 22, 1882.

A visit to Mission Star Lodge convinced us that they are endeavoring to fulfil their mission in earnest. A new hall has been engaged, and during that one meeting, $100 was obtained for the purpose of furnishing and making comfortable a room for the lodge and for a Band of Hope soon to be organized for the benefit of the children of the mission.

A grand ball at Elizabeth, and a great revival at Wheatland, drove us, at the request of the Grand Worthy Secretary, to Gold Run, Placer County. Here we found the lodge struggling for existence; but having a few thoroly determined members. These, however, are about to be divided by the departure of some to other places for existence. Slickens, Debris is driving every one away. On Friday night we were unable to have a meeting. On Saturday night, every seat was taken, and a number had to stand. On Sunday night, the hall was packed, and a number afterward initiated, and one received by G. L. certificate from Tuscarora, Nevada. Thus encouraged by the addition of permanent residents, the lodge will go ahead and continue as in the past to fight the demon of intemperance.

THE SUNDAY LAW ARRESTS.

The recent arrests made for violating the Sunday Law are believed by the more intelligent portion of the community to have been instigated if not actually caused by the so-called League of Freedom. At all events, it was not the work of any Temperance organization, or any Temperance man. The League of Freedom was originally organized by those interested in the Liquor traffic, and composed chiefly of Saloon-keepers. The pressure upon it for funds to defend their brethren in the country has recently become quite severe, and to meet this emergency a few prosecutions in this City, would materially assist in filling up their treasury. Two objects are evidently in view. First, an increase of membership, and a consequent increase of funds. Second, by arresting others engaged in selling harmless articles, a bitter feeling of opposition would be created which would be used next fall in the interest of the liquor traffic.

Immediately upon the arrests being made, the Secretary of the League intimated that it was the work of the Good Templars, and no man in this community knew better than he did the falsehood as well as the dastardly cowardice of such an intimation. When the Good Templars and the Home Protection Association get ready to speak, the League of Freedom will need all the funds they can get by any means, fair or foul. But let it be understood that the temperance people are at war only with the liquor traffic, and we advise those not interested in that business, to stand back and let us have a fair field, or they might get hit by a stray brick. As long as they stand back and keep hands off, they are in no danger. Against this anti-American, unpatriotic, law defying and criminal conspiracy, we expect to wage an unceasing war, till they are disbanded or destroyed. G. B.

THE HOME PROTECTION MEETING.

AT Y. M. C. A. Hall on Saturday evening last, was addressed by Dr. M. D. Merrick, subject the Sunday Law and the need of its enforcement. The league of foreign enemies to the government, institutions and civilization of this country, were handled with a mild and moderate sarcasm, and the remarks that indicated a determination to set those rebels to rights met with vigorous approval from the audience. The President stated that the arrests recently made were evidently the work of the conspirators against the law, and denied the statement made by some of the papers that any temperance man had anything whatever to do with the treacherous and nasty piece of espionage.

Judge Thompson spoke on the work and progress of the Good Templars and earnestly called for additions to the muster-roll of the association and signaturcs to the pledge. Mr. W. H. H. Tobey sang the "Marsellaise" and "The cause is marching on," with splendid effect. The Marsellaise, a rousing protest against the most cruel of all tyrannies, came in very appropriately after the allusions to the league of outlaws. There is always a rise of about 50 degrees in the enthusiometer when Mr. Tobey or the Tobey family sing on these occasions. Miss Colby at the organ very acceptably leads the audience with voice and accompaniment. Several other contributions of song and recitations were made while the pledge was being circulated to assist in the enforcement of the Sunday Law.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

A MAN WHO IS DOWN.

His name is James Landis; he might as well tell it first as last. At twenty-one he had been to an academy, and he had five thousand dollars, which his father left him.

"I shall set up a brewery," said he; "that always makes money."

"But how does it make money, James?" said his uncle. "By turning honest herbs and grain into poison, by making sober men sots, by desolating homes, by increasing taxes, poverty, crime. Take an honest business, even if gain is less.

"I'll be a brewer," insisted James; "money I must have soon and plenty. True, the business often does as you say; but if I give good measure and good strong beer, my responsibility ends there. Men can kill themselves eating cabbage."

"Well, James, the Scripture says that he who spreads nets for his neighbors' feet is taken therein himself. And if you deliberately set up a brewery in this quiet town, where none has ever been, I do not doubt but that you will lose rather than gain, and find poverty, rather than wealth. You will enlist the Lord to fight against you."

James opened his brewery and made money. He began to drink a deal of beer, and lost his character. Dulled by beer, he one day fell from a wagon loaded with beer barrels; it passed over his legs and he was a cripple. The town became noisy and drunken, and James' two boys were drunkenest of all. Stupid with his drinking, James began to make bad bargains. His tipsy son accidentally set the house on fire. James and the other son in a quarrel knocked over a lamp and burned up the brewery. James was ruined; his family was broken up; he was beggared, a cripple, a drunkard. Yes, he had been taken in the nets spread for his neighbor's feet. He was a man down, and all his evil companions turned against him. There he sits, drunk on the bar-room floor.

"He must out of this," says the bartender to Deacon Miller, who is passing.

"Only one home is open," says the Deacon, coming in to pick James up. "Come, my man, we must get you to the poor-house.—Mrs. M'Nair Wright in N. T. Tract.

A WINE-TASTER.

A gentleman who had once been a member of the legislature, came to New York to fill a place in the custom house. One part of his business was to taste of the samples of liquors which passed thru his hands. By degrees a taste for drink grew upon him and he drank largely and deeply. He soon lost his situation, and went rapidly down from bad to worse. If he could have gone down in his wretchedness alone, it would have been sad enough; but not half so sad as to take with him a lovely, talented wife who had once been an ornament in the circle in which she moved, and a little daughter he had once loved so fondly. But every drinking man is almost sure to bring misery on half a dozen others, at a low average.

This former Senator took with him to a single room of a wretched tenement house his poor wife and child, and then one day, in a frantic mood which rum had caused, he felled to the floor and left nearly lifeless, the wife who had clung to him thru all his degradation. He was seized by two policemen and dragged away to prison.

What a downfall for a man once talented, well educated and manly, and all thru tasting strong drink. When he began, he had no dream of how it would end. Neither has the lad who engages as errand boy in a liquor store. He thinks only of the wages he is to get, and the comfortable meals three times a day. He does not know how unsafe it is to handle poison.

If times are hard and work scarce, boys, better sell papers, black boots, sweep crossings, anything honest, rather than take a situation where you must deal out draughts of death to others. Yes, better starvation, with God's blessing on your course, than a full purse, and his curse on your employment. "Touch not, taste not, handle not," is the only safe motto.—N. T. Tract.

A BRAVE REPLY.

"Come on, boys, to the lower pond," said Tom Thompson, as he swept up in front of Frank, Charlie, and Fred. "They are having glorious fun down there. Bill Smith has built a large shed on the bank, and opened a saloon. They have a good fire, raffling, music, and warm spiced ale only ten cents a glass."

"Not for me," said Frank, the middle boy of the three.

"Why not?" said Fred.

"Because," answered Frank, "I do not wish to make myself a liar and a thief. I promised my mother that I would not go to the lower pond; and if I did go, I should not only lie, but rob her of the confidence she now has in me."

"But she would not know, so you would not take away her confidence," said Charlie.

Frank looked indignant.

"Do you think a big boy like myself could look a sick mother in the eyes after cheating her, without her seeing traitor written on my face. Why, she would know that I had been a mean boy as soon as she looked at me. Besides." said Frank, "why should we go? Here everything is pure; there nothing is pure. The glorious moon gives better light than Smith's lamps, without the smell of coal-oil. The steel on the ice, with our jolly song, is better music than is made by the asthmatic organ at the saloon, and without the accompaniment of oaths. We can get warmth with our skates, without the tobacco smoke. We have a better drink, without the ten cents a glass. Here all is pure; there all is mixed with sin; so I stay where I am."

"So will we all!" sang out the boys; and away they went across the pond, and even Carlo barked in approval of his young master's sentiments.

WHERE CONVICTS COME FROM.

A short time since, a young man, condemned to die for the awful crime of murder, lay in a prison-cell, waiting the day of execution. A kind lady who had heard of his condition, visited him several times, and sought to lead him to penitence and faith in Jesus as his only hope. On one occasion the lady was accompanied by her little son, who spoke kindly to the poor prisoner, and offered him some fruit. The man seemed much affected by the grace and gentleness of the child, and, drawing him towards him, said, as the tears ran freely down his cheeks:

"My dear child, let me tell you what brot me here. It was disobeying my parents, then breaking God's holy day, and, lastly, drinking and gambling, that grew out of the other two. Never forget this, if you would not be where I now am, and tell all your play-fellows to take warning by my sad fate. Always obey your parents, never drink a drop of anything that can intoxicate, keep holy the Sabbath-day, and turn, as from the evil one himself, from any who would persuade you to enter a gambling-house or engage in a game of chance. These are the things that fill the prisons of earth and crowd the gates of hell with victims."—Mrs. Fannie R. Feudge, in Young Reaper.

A TALK ABOUT MISTAKES.

I want to speak to you about strong drink, and point out the many mistakes some people make in regard to it. You must be thoroughly posted on this subject, and when you hear others praising it and advocating its use you can convince them in the following manner:

First, they may say, "It does me good." This is a decided mistake. Calculate honestly, by the month or the year, all the good and all the evil it has done you, and you will find that, instead of really doing you good, it has done you a great deal of harm.

Then they say, "That arises from the abuse and not the proper use of the article." Here again you are mistaken. The abuse arises out of the use, from its peculiar influence upon the human body. Its use always has led, and always will lead, to abuse. If thotless boys play with gunpowder, danger is always near; and if men drink liquids containing spirits, they get more thirsty, become highly stimulated, and are almost sure to get more or less intoxicated.

Again, they think they have a strong plea, and ask, "Why did God send these liquors, if they are not to be drunk?" On this point you are again mistaken. God never did send them, any more than he sent gunpowder, swords, canons, or cannon-balls. Neither barley nor barley-water, malt nor malt-water, the juice of the grape nor the juice of the sugar cane, will produce the least intoxication in their natural state. But wicked men take these substances, and by a chemical process manufacture them into intoxicating liquor, and in this state ignorant people have generally conceived that they were God's gifts.

Some believe that what a doctor orders must be right, and say. "If doctors recommend these drinks, they must be good." I reply, not necessarily; doctors are not always right. But if they recommend them for medicine, this is a pretty clear proof that they ought not to be taken as a beverage.

So you see, my little readers, that the only safe way is to abstain altogether, and not use any kind of liquor whatever, and be assured that the good opinion which many people hold about alcohol is a great error.

THE CHINCHA ISLANDS.

The Peruvians are in one respect the most industrious of people. They are indefatigable in dancing, visiting, drinking and gambling. They will industriously and uncomplainingly perspire at these arduous and exhausting labors from 20 to 30 hours at a single stretch, and then after a good sleep, get up and tackle a similar task. Their entertainments often last for days, and sometimes rich miners and sugar planters will run one for two or three weeks. On these occasions, a large industry is employed and an immense amount of physical labor performed on the guitar, on the dancing floor, and at the card table. But they do not take kindly to such labors as are performed with the shovel and plow, the hoe and axe and hammer. They rather consider those things degrading to gentlemen; they love much better to handle cards and dice and bottles.

Therefore, when the Guano Islands were found to be so valuable, it was necessary to find labor to dig the guano, and deliver it to the ships, boats and launches.

They sent a lot of their own convicts to work there; men of all the mixtures of race that are possible between Peruvian Indians, Africans, Spaniards and strangers in a course of 200 years. These fellows would work pretty well, and some few Indians and Peruvians would work a little, till they earned enough money to have a royal drunk. It soon became necessary to import foreign labor, and the Chinese labor supply was tapped. Old vessels, and vessels that were not old, were condemned in Callao by dozens, by the obliging insurance agents, purchased at auction for a trifle, and fitted out for China to bring coolies. Every one of the coolies was kidnapped in China; a burlesque form of contract for eight years labor, approved by the Peruvian Consul and a Chinese Mandarin, and the Chinamen were sold at auction on arrival for about $300. For many years it was affirmed that no Chinaman ever returned from Peru; and it is quite likely not more than 100 of the many thousands who were stolen and sold into virtual slavery, ever returned, tho many of them gained their liberty somehow, and worked and gambled on their own account thereafter.

To get these shiploads of coolies, there were American and other foreign agents established in Whampoa Canton, Amoy and Swatow who pretended to hire and contract for coolie labor; but they were pirates and kidnappers, every one: some of the most enterprising captains of ships belonging to respectable owners in New York used to make trips up the rivers in their own boats, with an armed crew, and wherever they saw a good opportunity, capture and steal a few Chinamen to hasten the completion of their cargoes. One captain of a clipper ship went insane from a fever contracted by frequent night excursions of this nature. Another American captain, a pleasant, jovial, hearty man, much esteemed for his wit and sprightly good nature, was an agent on shore for several years, "procuring" Chinese laborers. He made enough money to purchase a vessel of his own; before he was 12 hours at sea on his first voyage, everything above the deck was swept away in a typhoon, and from his second voyage no tidings ever came, nor ever will. One Peruvian Consul who aided in this business, lived for some years chained in a madhouse after he returned to his home. Perhaps some others made money and lived happy afterward; if they did, the writer never heard of it.

There was generally a large fleet waiting for cargo at the Chincha Islands, and very often they were on demurrage for weeks and months. That is, the days allowed in their charter contract for loading, had expired, and then the government had to pay them a daily sum of about $100 for an ordinary ship.

American captains were always ahead of the world for loading their ships quickly; when a bribe of $100 to $1000 would prove a profitable investment, most of them would make use of it. When a great many ships had been waiting there for months, a smart Yankee would sometimes come in and by bribing the authorities at the islands he would sail away triumphantly in 16 days with his cargo of 2000 tons on board. And the party who received the bribe would sit up perhaps all of three nights to gamble away the $1000 he had received. He liked to enjoy the fruit of his own labor and get the full benefit of his money.

A Hungarian named Kossuth was for some time superintendent of the "middle island" of the Chinchas. When an American ship was to be loaded by him he would offer the captain a bet of $800 to $1000 that he could load him in a few days say 10, 15 or 20. The captain would willingly lose and pay that bet and save 60 or 70 days time; while those who would not bet had to wait and look on.

To enable him to fill his engagements and gain his bets, Kossuth worked his Chinamen with barbarous ferocity; made them work over time and do extra tasks and flogged them cruelly when they faltered or failed. His was a horrible reign; and so many Chinamen hung and drowned themselves every day to be rid of his cruelty, that the monster was displaced. The principal labor of the Islands was afterwards done by Chinamen, under overseers provided with a whip; but it is just to say that in a good many trips there, I never saw one of them hurried or struck or at all abused by their drivers. Those working at guano, had a daily task, and generally finished it by 1 or 2 P. M., and the drivers were too lazy ever to hurry or reprove them.

OFFICE OF G. S. J. W.
Jan. 18, 1881.

DEAR FRIENDS OF THE JUVENILE DEPARTMENT:—Greeting:—I am such a stranger that I feel like shaking hands all round. As in my absence from these pages, the holiday season has come and gone, accept the kindest wishes of the Superintendent for a happy and prosperous year; may 1882 see greater progress in Juvenile Temperance than ever before. Having had an extra amount of office work during the past few weeks, I have not had an opportunity to speak to you collectively.

On January 3d, my waiting eyes were gladdened with the sight of 2,686 of the long-looked-for Rituals. All newly organized Bands were immediately supplied, using 2,286 (this represents the gain since Oct. 1st). Next, one was sent to each Lodge, with circular urging the organization of Band of Hope. The few remaining were sent as samples to parties applying for information. January 14th, 1,398 copies were received. With these, orders from Bands reporting to this office have been partially filled; your patience is asked now till a new invoice is received. From the long delay, many may have thot they had a very promising, but not performing servant; but exoneration from censure is asked, as all orders have been promptly filled on receipt of supplies.

ATTENTION SUPERINTENDENTS!

The National Temperance Publishing House have sent to this office, samples of three works, which every Band of Hope should possess. They consist of appropriate selections for readings and declamations at our public and private meetings; are just what is needed. The titles are as follows: "The Juvenile Temperance Reciter," "The Temperance Speaker," both full of interesting dialogues and recitations; and last, but not least in value, "The Sunday-School Concert," a collection of twenty-six temperance concert exercises, which are just the thing for our Band of Hope public meetings. To those Superintendents who have not a collection of suitable pieces, and especially to those whose lack of time or of experience renders the preparation of a program a heavy burden, the latter will be an invaluable boon. Send for copies to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St., New York. [see adv't.]

The Right Worthy Grand Lodge, thru its Literature Committee, have made arrangements with the Nat. Tem. Pub. House to issue the Youth's Temperance Banner weekly, instead of monthly, as heretofore. This is an excellent juvenile paper, attractive in appearance, and interesting and instructive in contents; it ought to be in the hands of every boy and girl in our Bands. It has been suggested that each Lodge unite with its Band of Hope to give an entertainment, the proceeds of which shall be applied to subscriptions for this paper. What Lodge will take the initiative in this direction? This will impose work upon you, but think of the pleasure and profit to each bright eyed darling, when this beautiful paper shall be read each week, and see if any labor you can undertake will yield a richer harvest.

M. E. RICHARDSON.

THE OLD STONE BASIN.

In the heart of the busy city,
In the scorching noon-tide heat,
A sound of bubbling water
Falls on the din of the street.

It falls in a gray stone basin,
And over the cool, wet brink
The heads of thirsty horses
Are stretching each moment to drink.

And peeping between the crowding heads
As the horses come and go,
"The Gift of Three Little Sisters,"
Is read on the stone below.

Ah, beasts are not taught letters,
They know no alphabet;
And never a horse in all these years
Has read the words, and yet

I think that each toil-worn creature
Who stays to drink by the way,
His thanks in his own dumb fashion,
To the sisters small must pay.

Years have gone by since busy hands
Wrot at the basin's stone;
The kindly little sisters
Are all to women grown.

I do not know their homes or fates
Or the name they bear to men,
But the sweetness of their gracious deed
Is just as sweet as then.

And all life long, and after life,
They must the happier be,
For this "Cup of water" given by them,
When they were children three.

PRAYER.

"BEHOLD HE PRAYETH." (Acts)

From his youth had Saul of Tarsus
Kept the law, and called to God;
Not in spirit of contrition—
Perfect he in his own thot.

Stricken sightless of a vision
Brighter than the orb of day;
Humbled to the dust, in anguish
Found he spirit blest to pray.

Blest above the nameless voices,
Countless tongues of pleading, vain
To be heard and ever answered;
To be pure from evil stain.

Cast aside thy cloak of evil,
Light of God in thee laid bare;
Ask that what the Lord hath taught thee,
Thou shouldst ask, and He will hear.

Blind to others' woes and wishes,
Blind to Heaven's kindest ways,
Child of earth would fain with prayer
Oft cast out a Father's grace.

Bind with fetters angels serving
Will and wisdom of a love
Higher far than brightest heaven
Is our earthly sphere above.

Yet in this, oh would be savior
Of thy race, give ear and thot:
Serve thou not those very evils
Thou wouldst oust by asking God.

For in this thou mockest prayer;
Gather shalt thou curse tenfold
In thy treasure—in betraying
With a kiss whom thou hast sold.

"WINE"—A SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONCERT EXERCISE.

The National Temperance Society has recently published a new concert exercise in four parts, by Hope Hazel, entitled "Wine." It contains a Scripture responsive service by the superintendent and scholars, individual recitations, and a selection for eight voices, together with appropriate selections for singing at intervals. It is a very impressive service, and should have a wide circulation in Sunday-schools, Bands of Hope, and juvenile temperance organizations. Price 5 cents, 60 cents per dozen. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, New York.

THE BIBLE TEMPERANCE CATECHISM.

The National Temperance Society have just published an exercise, entitled "A Bible Temperance Catechism," prepared by Rev. Benjamin A. Dean. It is divided into twenty sub-divisions, with about six or eight questions and answers in each, or one hundred and five questions in all. Every answer is a text of Scripture, and thus the Bible warnings against strong drink are admirably classified. It should be used very widely in Sunday-schools, and would be a valuable exercise for any juvenile temperance organization, or for children to commit to memory in the family circle, 12mo, 16 pages; 5 cents each, 60 cents per dozen. Address J. N. Stearns, Pub. Agent, 58 Reade Street. New York.

DAVID C. COOK.

Be sure to read with care David C. Cook's list of excellent publications in another page. Now is the time to secure good and interesting reading for the family, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, and to fill up every bodys library. Never before was such a chance to get proper books, papers and music for the young folks. They can be had too, for about half the price that old, battered, second hand books used to cost. Every body who dont spend money for tobacco and beer, can well afford to reap the benefit of these publications: exery one who does spend for tobacco and beer ought to use twice as much money for good literature to enable him to keep his conscience from becoming too persistently troublesome.

COMMUNION WINE.

The undersigned takes this method to inform the churches that he has undertaken the manufacture of Unfermented Wine for Sacramental use. OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

BE UP AND DOING.

The old plans followed fifty years ago to plow and harrow, to grind wheat, print papers, knit stockings, weave cloth, card wool, bake bread and rock children to sleep, have all been changed and remodeled and improved many times and the old imperfect and incompetent instrumentalities laid away forever. But there is a most determinded resistance to putting away to rest any of the old abortive machinery that was in vogue in the early days to drive the temperance reform. There is a persistent reluctance to allow any improvements to be built upon the ancient rudimentary apparatus with which the reform was carried thru its cradle period.

We have seen men reformed by the old methods from two to ten times and then perish thru rum. We have helped to restore ruined homes time after time, and yet have seen them go out forever in darkness. We have killed all the grogshops in a hundred communities, and have seen them under the old methods come back and take a front seat and stay. We have passed prohibitory laws enough to have reformed the world; but adherence to the old stereotypes has let them nearly all be trampled under foot and become signal posts of our failure and defeat.

The old plan of temperance effort was to meet and have a talk and a sing, and mayhap a prayer, and then circulate the pledge, shake hands and shed tears of joy over the rescued trophies of victory and go home; and when election day came, vote the old ballot which licensed the deadfall that baited and decoyed and entrapped and mercilessly slautered the reformed penitents, over whose restoration to family and home and society and church and hope of heaven, we had rejoiced.

All the time there have been prophets and seers who said, "Educate the people and stop the sources of all this evil." But all the time the old bottles have been used for the new wine and both were lost. We have expended millions in hunting for the stolen horses all over the world, but could never afford to buy a five or a one dollar lock to fasten the stable door or put up a one dollar notice to arrest and disarm the stock thieves. All this time we have been fishing people out of the river that flows to the lake of brimstone and fire, only to hear of their being bound hand and foot and chucked hopeless into the whirling rapids again. And however loud we have talked prohibition of the traffic of the manslayers, most of us have voted every time square against prohibition. It was not and is not on the old stereotype.

We have had a good many new patents, but they have been only patent outsides for the old stereotype. We called our societies, divisions; prayed, sang, recited, danced sometimes, gave the pledge, counted noses and rejoiced; and then in the division voted against education; out of it, voted against prohibition, wondered why this work of temperance went so slow, and took comfort in blaming it all on the ministers or the churches.

Then we called it Lodge and Temple and Council and Circle and Reform Club and some more pretty names; prayed and sang, recited "my name is Norval," warbled "Dublin Bay" and "the wearing of the green" played the Mocking Bird and Big Sunflower with a banjo accompaniment, danced a little on the sly under a borrowed name and a hired costume; administered the pledge, counted noses, rejoiced and went home; no time, place or desire for education; by and by $1000 spent for song and recitation and dramatics; $1 for education; 20 drunkards joined, one stayed, nineteen relapsed. Ten saloons when the lodge began, 13 now. Wonderful how slow this thing moves. But there was no education, and the membership voted every year to set traps to waylay and rob and murder their converts, and to poison the lives and morals and souls of every young member of the community as fast as they grow up.

But at last we hit upon the new sewing machine that is going to gather all the patchwork together, and join the pieces into one grand homogeneous campmeeting tent; come in, everybody; we call it Home Protection. First thing done is, send for the undertaker and get size, style, complexion, cost and all particulars of his last funeral. It is determined to avoid all previous sources and causes of failure, but hold on to the old stereotype and change the name. Program, prayer, good; singing temperance songs, good; speech, good; all gold so far: then a hash composed of a wounded soldier's dying soliloquy; song, "she polished her purple poodle's pearly teeth;" piece, shinning up a gumtree" and a few Battles of Trafalgar and Bay of Biscay. Then the pledge (stereotyped); pledge for what? The total abstinence pledge of fifty years ago, count noses, rejoice and go home, and be ready to vote the old whisky party grogshop ticket tomorrow.

But that is only the way some people would have had it. It will surely, like our live Lodges and Unions and other societies, teach something more than that old total abstinence pledge; which is certainly the first step that should be taken if possible; but it is only the first letter of a long alphabet and arithmetic and full set of text-books without the use of which we never can hope to get at one-twentieth of the converts we seek for, nor expect to retain much more than a tenth of those we succeed in capturing once.

Our recruits can learn almost as much in a beer garden as in some of our lodges, and can see the same acts and hear the same songs more artistically rendered there. We dont want to make a model of the beer dive in any particular. Save one, viz. they vote their platform every time. Nor do we want to have a single long-faced, dreary, dry or dull exercise in any entire program. But we do want a most complete revolution in many places; for the monotonous dismalities "invented for human torture, let us substitute an exercise that is all thru manly and womanly and instructive and improving and dignified and upbuilding and abounding in chaste enjoyment and innocent mirthfulness.

NOT A CHRISTIAN COUNTRY.

A few people of rather uncertain anchorage, are tremulously sensitive lest this should become or be called a Christian country. But they may as well give their nerves a good long rest; for it is a professedly Christian republic, and from the moment the rum god is dethroned and banished, it will be so in reality. It must be so; and those who would rather have rum and ruin and unlimited lawless vice than Christianity and peace, may as well learn that truth and face it. The snare of a deified drink delusion has been the only formidable weapon which the devil and his human lieutenants could ever use with hope of success, to defeat the almost unanimous adoption of Christianity in America.

Some inheritor of the mantle of Balaam, has recently discovered that about 100 years ago Thomas Jefferson and one other man said in dealing with a Mahomedan potentate that this was not a Christian government, and he thinks that ought to settle the matter for ever, especially when that idea finds favor with a few thousand foreign barbarian drunken rumsellers, the thousands of debauchees and outlaws they have educated and depraved, and a few dozens of well behaved people of good impulses who are afflicted with the weakness of unbelief, some of them in Christianity, some in any God at all. To honor or humor the bigoted prejudices of the few latter, and to pander to the all destroying, all devouring avarice of the former band of refugees from a land of pauperized heathenism—this nation of the grandest promise ever within human reach, is bidden to cut loose from the best bower anchors of its safety, and drift away rudderless, compassless, chartless, starless, sunless, Godless, hopeless, among the reefs and shoals and breakers of infidelity, immorality, ungodliness which mark the inevitable channelway into the final dark whirling maelstrom that has engulfed all the thousands of vicious and rotten human systems which have in all the past denied God, derided his laws and loved and worshipped a lie.

But let us note that every American who shall this year write a letter, record a date, a sale or other occurrence, make a will or grant a deed, will mark thereon conspicuously his belief that the Christian era into which this republic was baptized and under the holy banner of which this nation was planted, commenced 1882 years ago. In the 40,000 and more post offices of the U. S. during this year, this nation's employees will stamp the record of that ancient fact of Christianity upon 350 million letters and postal cards received for mailing, and again at the offices of their delivery that record will be stamped upon them.

At all the mints this nation daily inscribes in letters of gold and silver upon every coin from 50 cents upward that is prepared for circulation, the national assurance that the nation "trusts in God." In every one of the many million cash transactions of every day's occurrence he who pays a dollar to his neighbor, hands him the nation's confession of faith, "In God we trust," and the receiver assents as he accepts the coin. You forget as you do business at the various banks, and see the numerous trays piled high with weighty columns of glittering coins, that every piece proclaims to all the world to-day, and will every day of its existence, that this is a Christian country, and remembers to grace its commercial transactions with a reminder of the nation's prayer, the nation's faith, the nation's worship, "In God we trust."

Even the blasphemous bar keeper cannot help depositing many times a day in his till of iniquity and blood, the to him ever sternly reproving assurance that the nation for whose ruin he is conspiring, "trusts in God", and that ever present impress of the nation's trust is the hand writing on the wall which proclaims that his time is short, and the God of the nation will in no wise forget or betray that trust.

At every Christmas and every Thanksgiving the fact of the nations Christianity is impressed on the growing youth that will follow this generation, by the enjoyment for them of a season of priceless gifts and treasures which associates the name of Christianity with all that is for them joyous and precious and delightful.

Not a Christian nation! What do the 60,000 spires declare, which in city, town, village, hamlet all over this continent, rise conspicuous above all their surroundings, even in the worst, most godless resorts of men? Where the rum fiend and the devils of avarice and lust hold high carnival every night, day and Sunday of the year? Even there the church, school, Sunday school, lodge and benevolent society are heard above all the din and strife of tumultuous evil, proclaiming the nation's precious watchword, "In God we trust."

Now as to this fear of the danger of priestcraft. It is among the most stupid and contemptible of human follies. Of course the Roman Catholic Church has always allied itself with political power, and wherever it could, it undermined and usurped the political power of the state itself. There would be danger if it was likely to secure a voting majority in the nation and that majority were ignorant and superstitious and enslaved. As it is, all the other denominations of religionists are as jealously watching any encroachment on their part, as the most rampant, cranky Ingersoll could. As for any other Christian or religious denomination obtaining anything beyond the bare privileges of other and all citizens, from the state, there has never been any danger; no more danger now than of coming in collision with the moon.

It should be remembered that Protestant Christians, unless they go crazy, dont, in becoming Christians, in the least, part with their patriotism or good citizenship; a thousand times more likely to have both intensified and purified. While loving zealously their country, they are the better patriots for loving something else too, which the infidel who trembles at impending faggots and thumbscrews, does not love; they love Christianity and their own church and sect. It is probably safe beyond the most infinitesimal chance of error, to say that there is not one adult male or female member or minister or outside sympathizer of any church, that professes Protestant Christianity in this republic, that would not with as much vehemence and energy as Bob Ingersoll or any of the most pronounced infidels of the day, resist and oppose to the utmost, the most distant approach to any union or alliance or entanglement whatever, of the state or government with their own or any religious sect whatever. The best reason of all is, they dont believe it would be good for the country; and they know it would be the deathwarrant of the sect or the church or the Christianity which they love, were it allied with the state.

But if every section of every article of every future act of Congress or of all state legislatures were made to begin with "In the name of God" &c., which nobody desires to see; if every public building had a 12 in. letter inscription as the mormons do, "Holiness to the Lord;" if "God bless our land" or "God be with you," was printed upon every postage stamp, and every public or state document was headed with an acknowledgement of the God of heaven and earth, which no one is asking for, not a particle of evil or wrong or injustice could ever result to a son or daughter of Adam therefrom—except that it might arouse the ire of the poor, self-deluded fools who hate to hear the mention of the name of the merciful God who has filled the whole universe with unmistakable and innumerable evidences of his tenderest love and care for everyone of us, grateful and dutiful, or ungrateful and of tiger propensities.

LAW, LIBERTY, RELIGION.

AMERICAN CROW; GERMAN TURKEY.

But, then, you know the constitution of the U. S. dont permit any religious interference, etc.; so we cannot enforce a Sunday law, because, look at the Jews; they keep Saturday, and how can we oblige them to keep our Sunday? That was said by a native American a few days ago, with as much solemnity of voice and aspect as if it had been a special message that day delivered to him, by the angel Gabriel direct from heaven. And doubtless many other people hear some one talk that way, and accept and repeat it as legitimate wisdom.

Our legal Sunday is the subject of a civil, not a religious law; it has no reference to any one's creed or religious practice. It is a necessary sanitary and humane provision, like the laws which prevent cruelty and injustice and slavery, and which enforce cleanliness. But it is a surprising thing how any American can see so clearly that 50 million Americans have no right to enact a law which is in harmony with their religious ideas, but can think that 240 Jews who have come from a beer-pauperized, played out country to grow rich among a Christian people, must make their religion dominate the whole 50 millions of the nation.

The keeping of Saturday by the Jews is entirely and only a religious idea. They dont keep it, or any other day from a conviction like ours, that they can do more work and be healthier by resting one day of the week; but purely because of the religious duty of obeying a divine command. So the 50 million people who have no right to have a religious or sanitary law of their own, must bow their necks and meekly accept the religious yoke of 240 Jews who have sought a home here from persecution; and the 50 million must forego their rest day to oblige the 240 stranger exiles, and pay a national tribute to their religious scruples and prejudices.

And another class, the infidel section of the German people, who come from a beer and bayonet enslaved and pauperized country to share the benefits of a plenteous home carved out for them by christian Americans—the class of Germans who profess and practice the religion of paganism or heathenism—they cannot stand it to have their religious liberty abridged to get drunk and rob and murder men and women and children on Sunday and debauch and pauperize every day, the people who have given them an asylum from slavery. They are not going to submit to any religious intolerance from the 50 millions who would maintain a law that would do every one good and no one harm; but they demand that the 50 million shall swallow their religion of paganism and barbarism, that would engulf them and us, in an overwhelming Sodom and Gomorrah of iniquity and vice, such as they left behind them.

And these people are crying out always about their liberty and our religious intolerance; whereas it is altogether a question of religious intolerance on their part and purely a question of liberty on ours. We desire to maintain their liberty and our own to serve God in any manner consistent with the peace and liberty and welfare of the community—or not to serve any God or to hold any religion at all—But the small heathen faction insist that the liberty of the 50 million shall be abridged and their imported foreign devil-worship which is most emphaticaly a religion and a remarkably pronounced and clear cut one, shall be forced down the throats of the great intelligent, sober, moral and decently behaved American community.

It is time the 50 million American people should demand some religious tolerance for themselves: We have had and are having a good deal too much of the domineering, fanatical, run-a-muck, religious intolerance of our pagan invaders. In ancient times armies of barbarian invaders overcame the civilizations of their day, but it is not likely that a handful of exiles whose civilization is by no means in advance of that of their plundering ancestors of 14 centuries ago, will succeed in extinguishing by force the light of virtue and intelligence and justice and godliness which has hitherto shaped and presided over and blessed the history of this country; this last refuge of liberty.

LEAGUE OF OUTLAWS AND THEIR ORGANS.

On Sunday, 15th, a fellow who gave the name of Max P. Schetzel, supposed to be a saloon keeper, and a member of the conspiracy of foreign outlaws who are going to try to usurp the government of this State, visited an umber of places of business, some 30 or 40, and among them 3 or 4 groggery deadfalls. On Monday he entered complaints against them all for violation of the Sunday law. The Bancrofts and the cash grocer and several hatters and newsmen were among those arrested in consequence of this sneaking villain's complaint. One instance of the manner of his proceeding is as follows, and it is presumed it is a fair sample of more. The miscreant prowled for an hour or more around a store which he knew was closed every Sunday, and waited till the proprietor opened the door to go down street; he then made an excuse of sudden especial need of some trifling article which he asked as a favor might be sold him. His request was granted and next morning Mr. Smith was arrested like a thief.

The Chronicle and Call next morning reported the arrests, stating that the officers of the so-called League of Freedom denied all knowledge or complicity in the comedy, and that this Max Spitzcur or whatever his name is, was a resident of 1004 Market St, a Good Templar and an ardent supporter of the RESCUE, Organ of the Good Templars etc.

It seems pretty certain that both these papers knew perfectly well that they were giving currency to a positive lie and did it to curry favor with the league of ontlaws. They knew that the spy of the league was not to be found at the address he gave, nor did any one there know him, they knew that it was exactly in the line of the league to resort to such despicable tricks and that they would of course falsely deny it; and they knew it was a most unlikely thing for an agent of the RESCUE or any Good Templar to do.

If they were not positively sure upon all these points, when they published the slander, they were entirely sure on the following day, but neither of them ever made the correction; so to all intents and purposes they have been both equally guilty of palming on the public of this city and state a false report defamatory of the Good Templars and licking the feet of the miserable gang of wretches who live by creating festering sinks of crime and vice and debauchery and pauperism and moral leprosy, all over the city, a thousand times more noxious and poisonous to the public morals and the public welfare than the vilest of Chinese abominations.

THE YOLO "MAIL."—The Yolo Mail which years ago was boycotted by the rum league because it sypathized with the local option law, has again been the subject of a lively interest among that gentlemanly and sweet moral-scented nest of vermin. The Mail favors total abstinence and the Sunday law movement squarely and openly; therefore, 36 of the ten commandment expungers who are entitled to every one of the merits indicated by a striped suit of clothes, have notified the Mail that their patronage of it has stopped. When they did this thing in 1873 the temperance people undertook to procure two new subscribers for every one withdrawn. It is to be hoped that now when the temperance tide is higher and the temperance organizations are stronger, they will make a strenuous effort to sustain and support the Mail in this stand for good citizenship. It is time that the vilest enemies of decency and honesty, and the meanest of public nuisances should be taut all over this state, that they cannot break up an honest man's business and drive him and his family to starvation solely because he declines to be the mouthpiece of a gang of execrable miscreants whose trade is the ruin of the homes of the people, the degradation of the community to vice, crime and pauperism, the destruction of all honest industry and trade, and the filling of our jails and asylums and hospitals with murderers, criminals and all other classes of their debauched and plundered victims. The Yolo Mail is a worthy paper of standing and influence, and deserves that every good citizen in its county and vicinity should arise in its behalf; it is now fighting not its own battle, but that of the good citizenship of the country; and if the light of American civilization is not going to perish, the journals who espouse the truth and the right must receive better aid and better encouragement than empty words of approval.

The Crusader in an article "Why do Temperance Societies die," after showing that some of them have continued an unbroken career of usefulness for forty years, concludes very fitly as follows:

"But by far the most potent cause of premature death in temperance organizations is the want of education in the principles of temperance by means of a sound temperance literature. Temperance societies ought to be schools wherein to educate their members, for the fact that a person becomes a member of one is by no means an evidence of his thoro adhesion to its principles. A hundred regiments of newly-recruited soldiers would not be very effective in the field of battle, and would more properly be designated a mob than an army. It is as useless to expect temperance soldiers to do effective service in the war against alcohol without drill, as it would be to expect raw recruits to contend against a disciplined army. The drill that is needed is instruction in temperance, and how shall this be attained better than by the temperance library and the temperance papers? Temperance books and temperance papers are as necessary for the thorough equipment of a society, as constitutions, manuals of ceremonies, &c., but what are the facts of the case? There are temperance societies in which not a single member subscribes for a temperance paper and few, if any, possess books treating of the subject. In others, perhaps, the society takes a copy of a paper, it is addressed to the Secretary, and he frequently forgets to bring it, and when it is brought, it is laid upon the table scarcely ever to be read. A few societies have members, the majority of whom subscribe for temperance papers, and they either have temperance works, or the society has a temperance library. Such societies will be found among the longest-lived, because the members connection with the society, is based upon an intelligent conviction of the truth of temperance principles, begotten by the instruction derived from the sources named. We venture to suggest as a remedy for this state of things, that every temperance society professing to be a live society, should furnish to each member some temperance paper to be paid for out of the funds, and let dues be made sufficiently high to cover this expense. A means to instruct the members upon the different phases of this great question is as essential a part of the working machinery, as a hall to meet in; and until a more potent and cheaper educator than a regularly-read, well-conducted temperance paper is suggested, we adhere to the position just laid down, tho it may seem a radical one."

That is a conclusion in which all men of experience will agree. A temperance society that does not learn, cannot teach; if it dont teach, it is of little or no use; and to enable it to learn and teach its membership and its community, it must have a revenue to provide the material for education and must make use of it.

The lodges that topple over in 3 or 6 or 12 months in this state, are the ones that are left with only a ritual and a per capita tax, whose purposes they do not comprehend; two most important and indispensable things, but utterly insufficient to equip a successful live and aggressive lodge or society. No wonder they die.

ALL'S LOST IN OREGON.

ASTORIA, Jan. 10, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—To show how temperance fanaticism in Oregon is forever silenced, I enclose a clipping from that wonder of journalism, The Oregonian.

"The Kansas prohibition law has been a failure all over the state, notwithstanding the energy of Gov. St. John, who is an ardent prohibitionist, in its favor. A drummer for a Kansas City liquor house recently testified that he is now selling more liquor in Kansas than before the law went into force. One result of the law has been to turn away from the state thousands of German immigrants, who will not live where it is a crime to brew and drink their national and every-day beverage. These people wonder at this singular prohibition in a land which boasts of its liberty. The state and various municipal governments have lost a large income by prohibition, large wholesale houses have been compelled to remove to Kansas City in Missouri, and yet liquor drinking is open and common, and drunkenness and its attending evils nowise diminished. Prohibition is a farce."

Now isnt that drummer testimony unanswerable? Any one that has ever looked into a blow hole of hell can readily imagine the scene at the recording of that to us fatal oath. Behold the drummer as he leaneth upon the bar, with half smoked cigar between his jeweled fingers, and one foot resting upon the dainty spittoon! Hear the promiscuous testimony around the card-table, and rising above the clatter of billiard balls! Mark the reverent silence as from beneath the well kept mustache of the gaudy-vested barkeeper is administered the solemn oath "to tell a lie, a big lie, and nothing but a lie, so help you Devil!" And with breathless silence, amid the descending fragrant cloud of nicotine incense; do those assembled worshipers drink in the oracular words, as he testifieth that the Kansas City liquor house for which he drummeth, "is now selling more liquor in Kansas than before the law went into force." And thus at one fell stroke of his infallible tongue, he annuleth the amendments, rendereth the pledge a foolish thing, disbandeth the I. O. G. T., W. C. T. U., B. of H. & Co., and busteth the N. T. Publishing house and D. C. Cook; and causeth great rejoicing in the land where his possessions lie, and whither his pilgrimage tendeth. Verily the testimony of one Missouri whisky drummer ought to outweigh that of Gov. St. John and all the other sober and respectable inhabitants of Kansas.

HILO, Hawaii, Dec. 21, 1881.

ED. RESCUE:—I was much pleased to see the letter of Bro. Fairbanks in one of the issues of the RESCUE. He is not quite correct in one or two places, but his letter altogether is a very fair showing of the events of the time referred to. I wish here to bear testimony to the celerity which Bro. Fairbanks displayed in getting hold of the rules and usages of the Order. He was W. A. S. and W. S. in succession, and would next have been probably W. C. T. but for his departure. He rendered considerable assistance to this institution while he was here.

We are now trying to have a good lodge, strong in the elements of a good membership again, so that we may be able to present a bold front to the foe during 1882. As ought to be well known, Bro. J.H. Maby is L. D. The three first officers for the term ending Jan. 31, 1882, are as follows: J. J. Jones, W. C. T.; Miss Maria Conway, W. V. T.; G. C. Wilhelm, W. S. I regret that the names of others will not be published under your regulations.

J. J. JONES, W. C. T.

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER.

"To tell the truth, we Good Templars are very unpopular here. Does not that speak well for us? The proprietor of the whisky grocery in our village accuses us of interfering with his rights, and the religious fraternity (tho we have some earnest Christians in our lodge) for the most part dutifully hold themselves aloof from us.

Said the pastor of a church in this place, to whom I had been speaking in regard to the enforcement of the Sunday law, 'It does seem too bad to stir up a community; now there's Z. (referring to the keeper of the whisky grocery) he's got a nice family, a nice wife, nice children, and it seems a pity to make hard feelings in the neighborhood by entering a complaint.' Never a thot for the thousands of families that are being destroyed year after year by the nefarious traffic in strong drink—no pity for the thousands of sad-eyed, heart broken wives whose husbands are being swallowed up in the filthy maelstrom of strong drink. No matter for the multitudes of helpless little ones whose lives are darkened by the dreary shadows of poverty and despair thru the curse of alcohol—no matter for them—only things must not be stirred up, on account of Z's nice family. Bro. Wood, we must carry the war into Palestine, and show our praying brethren the necessity of doing something more than praying. 'Thy kingdom come,' a consummation which will necessarily 'stir up the community.'

Fraternally, ——— —. ———.

THE SANTA CRUZ Transcript has suspended its daily issue till first of May, when it is to be hoped it will again be permanently established. The League of public robbers dont like the Transcript because it commends sobriety and a decent Sunday and obedience to the laws of the United States and this State and is a clean paper; that is all his offence; they dont claim any other fault in Mr. Wheeler, yes, there is one more, he never gets drunk, never drinks any poison at all; but these defects in his morals render him so obnoxious to the whisky and pool and behind the screen thieves, that they have forbidden the people of Santa Cruz to get any printing done at the Transcript office or to take the paper.

Santa Cruz has always been reported as a community favorable to temperance and good morals; and doubtless that reputation has been deserved. It has a goodly proportion of excellent, worthy, intelligent citizens, and one would suppose it to be the interest of the good citizenship to center their patronage upon Mr, Wheeler so as to make the action of the rummies a most profitable and fortunate occurrence for him. If however the criminal class can ostracise a worthy citizen out of Santa Cruz, simply because he is favorable to sobriety and observance of law, it will seem that the leaven of crime which has been tolerated there, has already become an exceedingly dangerous and demoralizing power and seeks to "leaven the whole lump."

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

"LITTLE BLUE JACKET."—The National Temperance Society have recently published a book entitled "Little Blue-Jacket," written by Miss M. A. Paull, author of "Tim's Troubles." The story is of a little sailor lad, and of his quiet but effective work for temperance on shipboard, and is told in a most charming way. With this story is bound also five others equally well written and interesting. 12mo., 163 pages. Price, 75 cents. Address,

J. N. STEARNS, Publishing Agent,
58 Reade Street, New York.

THE TEMPERANCE ALMANAC is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages; list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1 per dozen. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade Street, New York.

NEW TEMPERANCE TALES.

ONLY TEN CENTS EACH.

"FIFE AND DRUM" SERIES.

The National Temperance Society has commenced the publication of a series of cheap and thrilling Temperance Tales, from the pens of some of the best writers on temperance in the world, giving a greater amount of valuable and interesting matter than ever before, for the small sum of ten cents. The object is to supply a great amount of matter calculated to aid the advancement of the cause of temperance, for a very small sum of money. These stories will be adapted to home and fireside reading, the railroad train, and for the young in every class of the community. Four of these are now ready, and others will soon be added to the list. The following have already been published:

"Fife and Drum," by Mary Dwinell Chellis. "A Tragedy of the Sea," by Mrs. J. McNear Wright. "The Quaker's Rule," by Earnest Gilmore. "Drinking Jack," and other stories, by Mary Dwinell Chellis. Send along the dimes. Address,

WANTED.

FOR THE YEAR 1882.

An assortment of 2,820 Coffins, mostly of cheap quality, to store away the worn-out and used-up customers and patrons of the wholesale and retail whisky, wine and beer dealers of this state.

The Coffins will be called for as required. Also,

WANTED.

2820 YOUNG FOLKS

Of both sexes, recruits to take their first steps and lessons in drinking, gambling, smoking and other bar-room accomplishments, to fill up the vacancies made by the 2,820 funerals above provided for.

PEN PORTRAITS.

Sample copy of the above by Geo. W. Bungay has been received. Pen portraits of Distinguished Abstainers contains 32 finely executed portraits of as many of the chief laborers in the temperance vineyard, with a brief biography by the talented author. It has also a history or pen portrait of a score of other prominent workers. It is a handsome volume and ought to be in the library of all who love to have an introduction to or an acquaintance with the best and noblest patriots and benefactors their country has ever produced.

Price $1.50. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St., New York. While commending most heartily this very opportune addition to our best temperance literature, there is one disappointment to be noticed. A list of our temperance heroes is incomplete that entirely omits all mention of Mother Stewart, Miss F. E. Willard, Julia Colman, Mrs. Mary C. Johnson, Mrs. E. J. Foster, Mrs. Lucy W. Hayes but it occurs before proceeding any further with this list of heroic, noble womenworkers, that the author is going to give them a volume by themselves very soon, so hurry up and get this first book off the shelves and make room for the other.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1.00, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36, besides 133 Library books, 5 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty-six million copies. There is not one of our publications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c. to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1¼c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2c. a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with little lesson pictures: also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WORKER, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c. per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words): also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45. Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in a neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. Far better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection: books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5½ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5¾ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

7½c. Packages of S. S. Reward Cards. 25c. packages of reward cards for 7½c. New designs. No. 1. Poems for children, with pictures, glazed cards, assorted tints, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 2. Scripture text, with picture and verse of hymn, glazed cards, assorted tints, 48 cards, size 2½x3. No. 3. Beautiful chromatic card, floral design, short Scripture text. 64 cards, size 1½x1¾. No. 4. Scripture text, chromatic card, 96 cards, size 1¾x1½. No. 5 Miniature Scripture text, colored designs, 192 cards size 7⅛x1½. No. 6. Precept, promise and verse of hymn, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 4¼x2¾. No. 7. Illuminated Scripture text and verse, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 3⅝x1¾. No. 8. The Lord's Prayer, floral border, glazed tinted board, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 9. Ten Commandments, floral border, glazed and tinted, 12 double cards, size 4¼x6. No. 10. Band of Hope, triple pledge, beautiful chromatic card appropriately designed, 12 cards, size 3⅝x1½. Prices, sample package, 10c.; three or more packages, 8½c. each; ten or more packages, 8c. each; twenty five or more packs, 7½c. each. Prices include postage.

Revolution Bibles. From "Oxford" plates. Teachers' Bibles, with concordance, encyclopedia, dictionary, tables, maps, etc.—most complete teachers' Bible extant, as low as $1.30, postpaid. Gilt edge, brass bound gilt Bible, with clasp and tasseled book-mark for 60c. postpaid. Magnificent gift Bible, new pattern, round corners, etc., for $1.25, equal to any $4.50 gift Bible.

Lesson Commentary. On the International Lessons for 1882. Covering not only the lessons for the whole year, but the entire book of Mark, and accompanied by the "Revised Version Text," a revised reprint of the "Cambridge Scholars' Commentary." Prepared by G. F. Maclear, D. D., and J. J. S. Perowne, D. D. Price, 10c. postpaid. 5 or more, 9c. each; 25 or more, 8c. each. Book is put up in strong postal card covers. No similar work for less than $1. We also publish at same rates a complete Bible Dictionary of two thousand complete articles, 512 columns, and nearly 100 illustrations. The "Teacher's Compendium," nine books on teaching, in one; The "Ideal Sunday-School;" "Sunday-School Management" (a choice book for teachers); "Word Pictures," and "Normal Half-Hours."

Holiday Lesson Calendar. For scholars and teachers. 12 beautiful chromatic cards, 5x8 inches, one for each month, containing the International Lessons for the whole year, the Home Readings, Memory Verses, lesson pictures, verses and maxims tending to promote nobler living, etc. The whole making a beautiful and inexpensive present for the whole school, or for a class. Punched for hanging up, sold at the following marvelously cheap prices: Single calendar (the 12 cards), 10c.. 5 or more calendars, 8c. each; 25 or more calendars 6½c. each; 100 or more, 5½c. each. Ready in December.

Alphabets. FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S DECORATIONS, etc., etc., on good paper. Style 1 are printed in red. Style 2 in blue. Style 1 are eight inches long and proportionate width. Style 2 are six inches long and proportionate width. We send five alphabets of Style 2 for 25c., or five alphabets of Style 1 for 30c., 10 alphabets, five of each, for 50c.

Holiday Reward Books. Reprints of choicest $1 to $1.50 story books in holiday binding, 12 kinds from one to twenty-five copies at 12c. each postpaid—25 to 50, 11½c. each postpaid—50 to 100 copies, 11c. each postpaid—100 copies or more, 10½c. each postpaid. Imported Holiday reward books from 5c. up to $1. Send cash for samples, stating prices.

35c. Sunday-School Record Book. THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL ENGINEER. Space for 50 classes, reports for each Sunday in the year, cabinet of printing press helps, containing 96 blanks—all for 35c. by mail, postpaid.

FROM OREGON.

WHAT IS THE MATTER?

The RESCUE is at hand, and chock full, as usual, of good things from Cal. but what about Oregon? Bro. Alley, God bless him, is doing a noble work. Persevere Bro. Alley, tho difficulties and discouragements beset your path, persevere; there is a palace and a crown at the end of the race for you. But I wish some of the other workers (for we have other grand and noble workers here) would drop a line now and then to cheer the hearts of their fellow soldiers. Tell us of your victories and forward movements.

I hear that Sheridan Lodge No. 118 is doing grandly. How is it, Bro. Foster, Bro. Falkner? Let us hear from you. Dont keep your light under a bushel; let it shine all over Oregon and Cal. Bro's and Sisters let us hear from you "What of the night?" "Is it almost morning? Bro. Long is at work but I know not with what success. The papers speak well of him. I wish we had half a dozen lecturers in the field. But where is our G. W. C. T.? we have only had one letter in the RESCUE from him. We want to hear from our leader and G. W. V. T. why, if she would tell us the "story" of her Lodge a thrill of joy would stir every heart. And there are many others who are "holding the fort," only they dont seem to realize that the whole army needs the inspiration which an account of their success would give.

Bro. Leland has our sympathies. But let him remember that Harriet is with the angels, and will be watching and waiting for him. Bro. Vandervert too has "passed over the river" but his "memory is blessed" and the good that he has done will live after him. Many others have been called to "come up higher" but their mantles have fallen upon those left behind, and the work goes on. The State Temperance Alliance will meet in Salem Feb. 15th. Will send you an account of their doings.

It has been the intention every week to enquire of our friends in Oregon why they dont send any items or articles to the RESCUE. It would have been pleasant indeed to record all Col. Long's successes and carry good tidings to every Lodge in Oregon once a week about their own jurisdiction. But a never ending press and constant drudgery has deferred and thwarted the intent to write and ask of the G. W. C. T., G. W. S., G. W. V. T:, and Col. Long why they dont address the Good Templars of Oregon every week thru the RESCUT. They have never failed once when they did send anything for publication to receive immediate attention and they are earnestly invited to come again and help make this paper more acceptable aad useful to their people.

SALINAS, Cal., Jan. 19, 1882.

We have long meditated sending a line to the RESCUE, that the friends of our cause might know for their encouragement "how our cause speeds on its way." Like travelers in a mountainous region, when we have surmounted one difficulty another has loomed up before us, and we waited for another triumph before shouting over the victory gained. But Sister Stevens has been with us for the past week and labored so successfully that we must now pause and sing the Doxology. Four months ago the saloons of Salinas and Castroville were moving on in "the usual tenor of their way;" and all the deadfalls about this region of country declared by their acts that they feared not God nor regarded man. Of course the RESCUE was waking up the few temperance men who read it; but even they seemed hopeless, as the majority of the Good Templars were more anxious to have a jolly time with their young companions, than to endanger themselves by engaging in the rough encounter with the enemy. In the midst of this calm that preceded our present hurricane, a joint committee from the W. C. T. U., and Salinas Lodge I. O. G. T., presented resolutions at a public meeting in Salinas, modestly, but firmly requesting the saloon-keepers to close their places of business, in obedience to the Sunday Law. The next week came the decision of the Supreme Court on the Constitutionality of the law. The next Sunday some of our saloon-keepers closed their dens, and expressed a desire that all should do so. We then circulated the copies of law furnished us by Dr. McDonald, putting them in all the saloons; and our Ministerial Union published in our city papers the warning to those who neglected to close, that they might expect the consequences, and pledged each minister to use his influence to secure the enforcement of the law.

All was quiet then for nearly two months within the city; and two saloon-keepers in the suburbs were complained of, and paid their fines. A number of complaints were made in Castroville, and two lawbreakers brought to Salinas for prosecution. One of these paid his fine on two charges, and the other pled "not guilty;" and, tho his witnesses were nearly all drunkards, and the lawyers drinking men, he was convicted. After the trial, he threatened the life of the Methodist minister who entered the complaint; but in an attack on the Sheriff, he was killed. In the face of all this, two of our Salinas saloons were opened on Christmas day, and made it public that they intended to keep open, and had engaged an old Good Templar to defend them. To-day one of these is enjoying a trial by jury. I now drop my pen to go and see how the case goes.

Well, our man was convicted of selling liquor on Christmas, and pled guilty of the same offense on the next Sabbath. The other man also paid his fines for the same days, and promised to do so no more. And now our temperance enthusiasts shout, "Hurrah for Gonzales."

> "We must clear the regions round about,
> Steady, boys, steady. In all the State
> Let us press the battle to the gate."

These circumstances will show how opportune was Sister Stevens' coming; and there were evils in the Lodge that called as loudly for outside help. Her coming and the grand results of her labors, have cured these evils as effectually as Napoleon checked an insurrection in Paris by ordering the authorities of the City to "gild the dome." She lectured in Central Hall to good congregations Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, addressed the Band of Hope on Saturday night, and two Sabbath Schools on Sunday; and on Sunday night the largest hall in Salinas was crowded to its utmost to hear her. The statistical results are 138 names to join the Lodge, and 33 dollars for the Orphans Home and some subscribers for the Rescue. She was with us on Monday night when we initiated 84 of the new comers in the Lodge. Some others have applied since. These are good substantial men. As a specimen, one of them said to me during the campaign, "If you know of any good Christian men who would go in, but for the want of means and the fear of hard times, you call on me for the funds to initiate ten such men." This is the spirit of the men who came in. They have enlisted in the time of war to battle for the right; and here is our vow which we adopted Sunday night "in the great congregation" and sang the 1, 2, 4, 6th and last verses again in the Lodge after initiation.

Give praise to Jesus Christ the Lord!
Let all Good Templars sing,
All glory to th' Eternal Word!
Our Prophet, Priest and King.

For by his spirit and his truth.
The Temperance Cause to-night,
Attracts the aged and the youth
Like doves in homeward flight.

Here in Salinas Central Hall.
What means this eager throng?
They come, they come, with rapture all
To join our triumph song.

This means, we love the Sabbath day,
We love our neighbors all;
And will no more endure the sway—
The curse of alcohol.

Too long we've heard the low sad wail
Of worse than widowed ones;
In anguish heard the mother's tale
Of worse than murdered sons.

To-night, great God, to thee we vow,
By thine assisting grace,
That henceforth we will not allow
Saloons to rule this place.

But "mene, mene, tekel write
On every gay saloon;
And Ichabod from this glad night,
Shall be their doleful tune.

But ours shall be the joyous songs
Of souls redeemed from death;
God's praises shall employ our tongues
While he shall lend us breath.

Then hallelujah! for the Lord
Omnipotent doth reign!
All hallelujah! for his sword
Our victory shall gain!

MARIPOSA, Jan. 17, 1881.

ED. RESCUE:—Our lodge, organized in Nov. with 17 members, now numbers 44, and nearly all good, energetic members.

There is strong reason to hope that Mariposa will yet be rescued from the iniquitous demon whisky. It is to be regretted that our butterfly town has been so long a slave to the wine cup. The Sunday Law is now being enforced and the quiet appearance of our streets on the Sabbath, is in marked contrast with the profanity aud depravity of a few months ago. We are beginning to feel that there is a "temperance wave" as well as a "cold wave" sweeping over the Golden State, and hope its influence may work a wonderful reformation in the character of California life.

We have a pleasant little mountain town; since the temperance movement was inaugurated, the citizens seem to be more useful, wives and children are happier and more contented, and harmony and quiet reign supreme. Our thanks are due to Bro. Hughes for his persevering efforts in Mariposa County. CHAS. H. CONVERSE, W. C. T.

THANKS TO THE SALOON-KEEPERS.

The withdrawal from the Mail within the past few days of the patronage of nearly all the saloon keepers of Woodland is something to be thankful for on behalf of the general community, whose interests the Mail always aims primarily to represent. So long as we stood under implied obligation to consult the special interests of the saloon men, equally with those of the mass of the community, on account of their joint patronage, hostile as those interests were and are to each other, it was not easy to do justice to both. But by their own free choice they have now relieved us from this conflict of obligations, and so left us wholly free hence forth to utter the entire truth without fear or favor for any.

For this freedom we thank the saloon keepers. It was a free gift on their part, without the slightest legitimate cause. We merely upheld the duty of all men to obey the laws, and of all business men to observe the Sunday Law, because it was one of the laws of the state. They took offense at this. Why? Because they felt that they were the men opposing that law, and that without their aid the opposition would and could amount to nothing. Hence their anger. They were logical in that; but should have blamed the law and not us, who simply maintained its obligation on everybody, themselves included, as every good citizen will be sure to do. The wounded bird by its fluttering, betrays the fatal shot. They stand self-condemned by their causeless anger. If they did not violate the Sunday Law and did not combine so to do, then why get angry at the Mail for maintaining that that law must be obeyed, so long as not pronounced unconstitutional and not repealed? and for saying that those who did do both were lawbreakers and conspiritors?

We suppose these saloon-keepers claim to be business men. Yet they have acted like mad boys rather than like business men in this matter. To be told the simple truth about the duty of obeying the Sunday Law could not have angered them if they had not violated it and combined to violate it. Yet they got mad, stopped their papers, and took out their advertisements, and so undertook to scare or muzzle the press. That was very silly in them, but for us it was a positive benefit, since it will enable us to tell a great many truths that the public need to know about the business of these saloons, and which a natural sense of obligations to them as our patrons would have led us probably to put in a very mild form. But now we can tell the whole truth about them in a very plain way to the public. Not to them, of course, for they don't propose to read our paper; they don't take it, and they won't beg or borrow it! O, No! of course not. They have done, like the ostrich, when it sticks its head, eyes and ears under the sand. The shot of the rifle-man can't hurt it, of course, for it can't hear nor see anything of it. Wonder if the poor bird will feel the shot? Probably not.—Yolo Mail.

BEER.

A writer in the Boston Advertiser says that while spirits stimulate to violence and lust, beer produces merely somnolence." But we know a man who for twelve years has never used any liquor but beer. He comes home from his elegant store, behind his handsome pair of horses, and makes home a terror. He runs after his wife with an axe, and makes a beast of himself in a thousand ways. Is that somnolence? We know another man who uses only beer who has beaten his wife so as to make her helpless for days; was dead drunk on beer when the neighbors helped to bury his infant son; and has repeatedly knocked down and beaten his girl of eight and boy of five. Is that somnolence? We never heard it called by that name before.—Congregationalist.

Tally that to the credit of that paper, and make a good stout conspicuous mark of it.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

PATENTS

We continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, etc., for the United States, Canada, Cuba, England, France, Germany, etc. We have had thirty-five years' experience.

Patents obtained through us are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. This large and splendid illustrated weekly paper, $3.20 a year, shows the Progress of Science, is very interesting, and has an enormous circulation. Address MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors, Pub's. of SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, 37 Park Row, New York. Hand book about Patents free.

CONTRACTS TAKEN

To sow every town "knee deep" with Temperance Literature,

At 5 cents a head, without any labor on the part of society or individual, by means of our Class Papers and post-office delivery system.

We furnish papers (not tracts), send them out addressed, wrapped and mailed separately every month for a year to each individual, for 5 cents a year—or semi-monthly for 10 cents a year. Each paper contains 6,000 words, the matter of a $1.50 book in a year's issues, all for 5 cents—eighteen different papers to choose from, each for a special class of readers or special field of work. Thus for $5, one hundred persons can be reached every month for a year, and the individual or society is to no trouble distributing. Every one will subscribe if asked, when it is only 5 cents a year; or the expense to society for a whole town is trifling. Sample of each, and full particulars for 10 cents. We publish Band of Hope supplies including weekly paper, library, badges, pledges, certificates, pledge rolls, etc., so cheap that penny collections pay expenses. (sample outfit sent for 25 cents, full particulars free), also a whole library of $1.00 temperance story books at 2 cents each, (samples of three numbers for 10 cents). Temperance posters ½ c. each; samples of six for 5 cents; many other supplies, all at prices suited to general distribution. Address,

The Revolution Temperance Publishing House,

OREGON.—It is proposed to send a copy of the edition of Feby 16th to every lodge of this jurisdiction for each one of its members, that all of them may have an opportunity of seeing the paper. And as the RESCUE goes also to every lodge in Oregon, a package will be sent to the L. D. of each of them for distribution. This will take about 20,000 in addition to the regular issue of now 3600. As this involves a large expense to the Grand Lodge, it is hoped that a sufficient force of new subscribers may be brot in to justify the outlay.

SUBSCRIBERS this week; Chico (Dosia Stauffer) 5; Heppner, Or. 1; San Jose 1: Birds Landing 1; Walnut Creek; 1; Willows, 1; Gilroy (W. H. Thomasson) 6; San Francisco 1; J. W. Webb (San Diego 1, Passadena, 1 El Monte 4); Murphys 1; Col. Goulding, Igo, 1; Mrs. Stevens (Oakdale 11, Ceres 3.)

BRO. C. C. DUNN of Napa publishes a very handsome leaflet advertising the platform and principles of the Order, the Home and the RESCUE and inviting all good citizens to take membership with us and help us to extend the blessings of temperance. A poem by Ella Wheeler and several little appropriate items of well selected reading matter, make it a very creditable and attractive handbill. Bro. Dunn fires an occasional conical shot into the enemy's camp thru the colums of the Register on the Sunday law and other matters. The Good Templars are indebted to him for active vigilant service whenever and wherever occasion presents itself. He is one of the Order's good boys that will do to be proud of.

BRO. JOHN ROBINSON of Guerneville. It is very painful to have to state that Bro. R. last week had nearly the half of three fingers and the end of the thumb of his left hand cut off with a circular saw. Beside the very severe suffering he will have to undergo from such a painful wound, it is an unfortunate thing for him to have to be idle for perhaps three months.

BRO W. O. CLARK called a few days ago on his way to the new territories southeast of us, and possibly he will make a trip into Mexico. His principal object is to try to plant a few grains of temperance wheat among the copious tares which the servants of the devil are sowing there all to themselves. When the day comes that the swarming myriads of this world shall come to judgment, and the stray ones here and there, modestly standing in the outskirts of the crowd, shall be summoned up to the front before the throne to hear the welcome, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant," dont be a bit surprised if you see Bro. Billy O Clark raked in among the happiest and the foremost, and there will be no one there who will not rejoice to see his earnest, honest, unselfish, unheralded, unpretending but persevering labors of love fitly rewarded at the great last.

Mission Star Lodge, No. 160, which has held its meetings for about 4 years at No. 2131 Mission St. this city, has leased for three years an elegant hall on Sixteenth street, between Valencia and Mission, No. 2,933, and is now furnishing it at an outlay of nearly $500. The first meeting in the new hall will be held Tuesday evening, February 7th, upon the occasion of their public installation of officers. Bro Geo. B. Katzenstein has been pressed into the service and will install the officers. Then a good time.

ACTIVE inquiries made about our Mutual Aid System; the best in the world; but no one must suppose that a death benefit occurring now will produce a large sum; we ot to have 1,000 members this time next year and then the benefit will be about $1,000.

LATE.—Last week the report of Mrs. Stevens came altogether too late to get in type, and it seems likely to be so this week.

THE Banner, of Little Rock Arkansas, says he wants 5,000 subscribers this year and "will have them." If the temperance people of that state really desire the cause of prohibition to succeed, the cheapest, safest and most effective action they can take is to get 10,000 subscribers to their State Organ. If they want to stick in the mud 20 years longer, and then begin at the bottom, let them starve out their temperance press as Ohio, Michigan, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Connecticut and several other states did years ago.

THE North Miss. Conference memoralize the legislature to submit a Constitutional Amendment prohibiting forever the manufacture of intoxicating liquors except for medical, mechanical and Sacramental purposes. Oh what an idea, to prohibit drunkenness except at the sick bed and the Communion table.

SEE new ad of Messrs Milnes Bros., Bloomfield, Sonoma county. Send and get nice tastily executed cards from them. They write that they find the RESCUE the best advertising medium in the state for their business, and desire to continue to present their compliments and cards to its readers.

GUSHING PIETY. The temporal and spiritual safety of the members of Mr. Kalloch's church is the subject of a godly zeal and affectionate inquietude on the part of the San Francisco press and some other folks. It is reported that the means of sudden escape in case of an alarm of fire in the Temple are insufficient. There is no peace or sleep of refreshment on the journalistic pillow, lest a burn-up should select a special occasion to visit that particular locality, and a Vienna tragedy ensue. Nothing but the sight of a building contractor's receipted bill for four or five thousand dollars for repairs and alterations will restore the wonted calm of the editorial philanthropists. It would possibly have a pacifying tendency, till the repairs are executed, to practice the congregation once or twice a week with a bogus alarm of fire, as they do on the steamers, and train them to retire safely and in good order. The recent active sentiment against Mormonism in Utah, and in favor of protection to the Temple Society against fire, are pioneer indications of a great revival of morals and religion in the newspapers.

SOME LETTERS and postals and sometimes communications that come to this office are unanswered that would gladly be attended to, if possible. Five minutes more work cannot be crowded into the week without making the week larger or crowding out something else that claims attention. If any one feels hurt or offended at apparent breach of courtesy in this respect, the assurance is given that not one piece of work is ever undertaken by the writer, without the most uncomfortable feeling always present that six or ten other things are equally clamorous to be attended to first. Aud there is no present help for it.

San Bernardino is to be envied. The Index reports that there is not a prisoner in the county jail and not a criminal case pending in the Superior Court.—Los Angeles Express.

We congratulate San Bernardino upon having an active temperance sentiment strong enough to elect temperance officials, enforce the Sunday Law and protect her citizens. The prisoners in the jail, the criminal cases pending, and the victims upon the chain-gang in Los Angeles, are the direct results of the drink traffic. Dont envy San Bernardino, Mr. Editor, but sound the alarm for the safety of your own citizens. *

THE WATCHWORD contains an imitation of the Pilgrim's Progress, a journey from the city of great danger thru the various ditches, swamps, etc., etc., to the city of true temperance. Some of our more advanced juveniles could make a good readable article by planning out something in that line. It would be a good exercise.

DONT GET THE RESCUE.—When any one entitled to receive the RESCUE does not, the right thing to do and the easiest is to notify the editor immediately by postal card or letter. No possible precaution is neglected here to make it absolutely sure that every one's paper shall go strait to his P. O. and invariably on its proper day, if the mail dont collapse. If one subscriber gets his paper, every other one at the same post office should get his, because every package is seen to have its correct number of papers. When a postal is sent notifying the ed of the organization of a new lodge or Band of Hope and its address, the RESCUE is sent regularly thence forward. Otherwise it waits until the discovery is made by chance. Names are often sent to this office which it is impossible to decipher; those aggrieved can notify.

There was some talk months ago of a postal card ordinance in connection with this paper. That was nothing more than a plain simple request to the organizers of lodges to send a postal notice of any new one organized, that the lodge might be put on the list and get the paper. That was all the "ordinance" said or asked; it had no reference to any thing else expressed or implied. But it has not been complied with half a dozen times, and therefore we sometimes hear of lodges for the first time when they are several months old.

LESSON IN SPELLING.

She said he had a flattering tongue,
As to his arms she fondly clongue.
And love's sweet roundelay he songue.

For that, said he, my love I guess
You cannot, cannot love me luess;
Give me the little hand I pruess!

'Tis thine, she said, with glance oblique,
While blushing roses dyed her chique
The twain will be made one, next wique.
—Somerville Journal.

HANS.

"Die Freiheit Die"——[There were two lines of verse here, but no printer dare tackle them, for fear of incurring the wrath of the author.]

"Thank God we got here at last. There is no shutting up of the Wirlhstube (beer saloon) at nine o'clock in the evening."

Hans, the speaker, had just landed. The Atlantic was between him and the insufferable tyranny of monarchical despotism. Hans loved democracy—a system of self-government bounded in its privileges nevermore by hateful restrictions. If in Fatherland, police regulations made life a torment, the prospect of a, perchance, perpetual flow of lager was simply overpowering.

The hardest thing for Hans to learn was that individual self-government was the price of liberty. That moral and hygienic laws refused to enlarge their possibilities for his especial benefit in a free country, appeared a mockery. That any one should question or try to interfere by adverse legislation with his right to swim and drown in lager beer was abomination in the sight of Hans.

All this opened his vision to the vanity of seeking for true liberty on earth. But if his conceptions of such things were somewhat rudimentary, they differed not materially from those of other sons of Adam, as yet in the swaddling bands of civilization. Have we not all met with similar experiences? Beside, lager beer was not the original mother's milk of infantile Hansche. Not at a very remote period he could, and did, drink water—stronger beverages unobtainable. True, during the crusades he fought violently against open or veiled moslem doctrine. (Prohibition means the same in the faith nearest to his heart.) But Hans had learned early to obey—to follow example of the great in his sight. To drink each other under the table, was, and is yet the insignia of aristocracy and opulence. Hans cares as little as any for the lessons of bitter experience. He has even well-nigh mastered the art to scoff at redemption truth. But he will as naturally follow the lead of his superiors in debauchery and brutality as the Apache will honor the greatest horse thieves in the land. More: He will glory in giving his vote, his generally hard-earned savings, his life, his all, to protect himself against human or divine endeavors, appeals and statutes, adverse to dictates of depraved appetites and abnormal cravings. But this is the history of the natural tendency of the human heart from the beginning. At a certain stage of progressive idiocy, we all like to prate about modern enlightenment. Hans furnishes his quota, heap measure. Of late, he hopes to save the world by talking communism, or equality and fraternity in Belialism. Mentally never specially gifted, he could not give a definite idea of what he wants, over and above free indulgence in his ways, to save his life. But in this also, Hans is but one of the countless editions of incipient lunacy on stilts.

Unlike some other more advanced types, Hans is yet held amenable to the law. Is it strange that he would rather be justified by its majesty, than have it in advance of his moral level, and plead insanity in transgression? Who has never stumbled at the sermon on the mount?

If Hans points to a moral, it is this; to sandpaper and varnish sawlogs before we deliver them to the "circular," is not convenient. Granted that straightjackets are irksome, where such become indespensable persuaders to sobriety and decency, fit them on by all means. With worthiness of greater freedom, such will invariably become obsolete. No law, however stringent, ever prevented a soul from nearing deliverance from the only bondage we need dread. No amount of political, social or religious liberty can lift us to moral and spiritual or social requirements or status, indispensable for due enjoyment of such. Hans after all is but one type of the many in pursuit of happiness upon the broader way.

KENTUCKY.

A state prohibition convention assembled in Louisville last month, with F. M. Gilliam chairman, and a good attendance of delegates. Resolutions were adopted, declaring for absolute prohibition, arraigning the two old political parties as having clasped hands over the liquor traffic, denouncing the present school system of the state, and asking the ballot of women in all matters relating to the liquor traffic. G. W. Bain, Esq., in an address to the convention said:

"A political prohibition convention in the Democratic state of Kentucky is, to say the least, a daring adventure. Some will call it impudence, others fanaticism, while possibly a few will class us among those referred to by the late President Garfield, when he said the man most to be admired in this world, is the man who dares to look the devil in the face and tell him he is a devil. I dont say the Democratic party is the devil or the Republican party is the devil, but I do say the liquor traffic does the devil's work, and that the licensed liquor traffic belongs to both of these parties. For twenty years, the Republican party has trifled with us and pandered to the whisky rings. Now and then they put a little catch-clause in their platform, but in every instance it contains a double back action spring with automatic attachments, and they laugh at us after election. Grant's edict, 'Let no guilty man escape,' proved but a boot to toe Bristow out of office into oblivion, while he unlocked the jail doors and bid the whisky thieves go free. The Democrats say they did not do it. But why? Because they did not have a chance. I know we are going against the tide; but men of straw can go down hill. It takes muscle to go up.

"Some will say, why dont you wait till you get up a public sentiment that will carry you thru? That is like the old ditty we have all heard before:

" 'Mother may I go out to swim?
'Yes, my darling daughter;
Hang your clothes upon a limb,
But dont go near the water.'

We have to go in the water if we expect to swim.

"The question here to-day is not numbers, but the magnitude of our principles and the possibilities of our purposes.

"Some one has said: 'Ideas are the warriors of the world, and a war without ideas is a brutal one.' The old parties have not a living issue. The great idea of one is to get into office, and the great idea of the other is to keep in. Then the war between them is a brutal one, in which bitter memories dig up an old carcass to make a bridge of its bones on which to walk into office. I am not here to abuse either party. Both have accomplished good results, but the issues that gave them life are dead; and a party cannot afford to live on past records. In the Methodist church when a minister is effective he is continued; when his day of usefulness is over, he is superannuated. Both parties need the Methodist economy.—Prohibitionist.

COMMUNION WINE.

The Watchword has a colum on Communion wine. The Weekly Welcome is quoted as saying "Let us be thankful that the Fruit of the Vine which all the Evangelists agree was the term used by the Savior to designate the contents of "the cup," can now be had free from any intoxicating property. The real fruit of the vine is now being used by 1200 churches and chapels thruout the United Kingdom. We hope that before long none other will be used in any place of worship."

The Rev. Wm. Reid, D. D., wonders "that a poison—a brain poison—a soul poison—a poison of virtue—of morals—of religion—the cause of more sin than all other causes combined, should be continued in use in the observance of the Lord's Supper, as the symbol of all that is pure and holy, while it is the most significant symbol of death, eternal death."

Dr. Norman Kerr, an eminent Christian M. D. protests "against the custom of putting alcohol before a child at its first Communion. No man who has once suffered from the brand of drunkenness, should be allowed by his doctor to go to a Communion table (that uses alcohol)."

Rev. Dr. Peabody notes that tho the Evangelists have often used the word wine, they never once did so in connection with the Communion. He has satisfied himself by careful research that the Jews, at least the strict ones, carefully excluded leaven of every form in drink or food from the passover, and that it was customary for the master of the house to press the contents of the cup from the clusters of grapes preserved for that special purpose."

KANSAS.

A Judge Humphrey of Kansas, one of the diminishing long eared tribe of jurists has asserted that like our first parents in Eden, the young people of Maine are particularly attracted to the kind of fruit that is forbidden. The Manhattan Nationalist regrets that the judge was not present at the creation to point out to the Creator the natural effect of prohibitory laws to defeat themselves and ruin mankind.

The Democratic leaders in Kansas openly declare for the repeal of the prohibitory law. The leaders of that party in many places beside Kansas have for many years with a most remarkable unanimity, agreed in barring out their party from the only possible avenue to success that was open to it. And it is probable the Republican party will have to put up prohibition candidates in Kansas while they persistently ignore them elsewhere.

It is feared the railroad monopolists, always ready to join hands with wrong, may unite with the outlaw rum interest at next election; a large majority of Kansas voters are said to be in favor of curtailing the power of railroads to carry out evil designs.

Kansas received 4,245 foreign immigrants last year and the native increase from other states has been of a better class than ever before. If the new law has prevented the coming in of any settlers who would not go to a no rum state, their absence is one of the greatest gains the state could make. Some German immigrants going to Kansas last summer were advised not to go there because there was no beer to be had. They replied, "we are going for land, not beer." That kind of Germans will make valuable settlers; the kind of foreigners who come to a state to keep gin mills and thief dens are each one of them of more injury to the country than a horde of chinamen. Nebraska is said to have five times as much attractive homestead land as Kansas, but only received last year 6235 immigrants.

IT IS ROLLING.

BY J. R.

All the signs of the time show that the abstinence ball is rolling more rapidly and effectually than ever before. Years ago, the small speck was set in motion by humble, but devoted workers, in the midst of scorn and derision, much of which came from the high places in the land, but the toilers kept patiently and unflinchingly rolling the abstinence speck until it became quite a ball, increasing in size and progress, not only by the efforts of the reclaimed but by the earnest sympathies of philanthropists, religionists, and the choicest intellects and warmest hearts of the land, until to-day, thank God, it rolls at the head of the beneficial reforms of the day, surrounded by supporters who firmly believe that as its past track shows increased comfort and profit amongst the people, so its future course will be of mighty power and benefit to the human race.

At first, only mothers, wives and daughters, driven by desperation to take an active part against the liquor demon who had ravished their happy homes and prospects, were around the saving speck, which they regarded as another ark, but their ranks were gradually increased by the more fortunate of their sex, whose attention was aroused by the horrors of the evil around them, and whose sympathies were riveted to the cause of the sufferers. Thus, to-day, the abstinence cause has no more unselfish, liberal and essential agents than the thotful women thruout the world. In this cause, they make preachers outspoken; statesmen, daring; judges, careful, young men, vigilant, and old men, firm. Their steadfast stand on abstinence has given the female suffrage cause a prominent place among the advancing reforms of the day. This reform which was once generally scouted, is now looked upon as one of the chief means of chaining the liquor demon; and those who have so fearlessly, by their influence and voices, helped the abstinence voters should certainly by them be welcomed to the ballot-box. The ball is grandly rolling by their aid, and when it rests in the midst of sobriety, peace and prosperity it will be by womens' votes.

CHARACTERISTIC of wine drinking France is the story of a foreign resident of Paris who had frequently to call at a certain residence, where he became somewhat interested with the lively and polite janitor and his wife. One day the janitor was alone in his lodge and on enquiry the visitor was told that there had just been an addition of a daughter to the family. Calling about a week later, he found the lady seated by the fire. What do you think of my happy family, said she showing him an ugly little poodle dog, a huge coast of Africa cat in her lap and a tame pigeon on her shoulder. But where is the baby I heard of? Oh, the baby, yes, it is out in the country to nurse. Yes, said the father, chiming in, we sent it out to nurse on the fifth day after its birth. I think it was a rather fine baby. So says the Paris correspondent of the Boston Journal.

THE TWO EVILS.

In regard to the two evils, intemperance in liquor and tobacco, I feel very much as most of the children who recently wrote upou the subject evidently did, judging from their essays—that it was easier to find more arguments against tobacco than liquor, probably because it is the greater nuisance to the greater number. The man who drinks only annoys his own family and immediate friends, while the smoker hasn't the grace to keep within any bounds; and unfortunately for non-smokers, the indulgence does not in any way disable him. What a blessing it would be if it intoxicated like opium, and compelled him to keep within some den previously provided.

There is quite as much need for a prohibition law against tobacco as against liquor.

The anti-smoke societies that are saying so much about chimney smoke from engines, ought to include in their raid individual smokers whose smoke is poisonous and quite as offensive.

I noticed the other day three blocks on Kearney street densely clouded with tobacco smoke, and yet there didn't seem to be more smokers out than usual.

I took the dummy to the cemetery; next me sat a man smoking and holding a puny child whose irritability showed unmistakable signs of nervous disorder. She reached up and tried to pull the cigar from her father's lips; she knew she did not like the fumes, tho too young to know it was killing her. At the cemetery I saw him weeding three little graves and I thot soon there will be four; but I couldn't tell him he had murdered them, because one that hasn't the sense to know these things wouldn't bear being told. BETH.

READ UP ON BEER.

A new help is coming to the front. At the request of Miss F. E. Willard, a course of weekly readings has been prepared by Miss Julia Colman to extend thru the year. The plan includes a thoro investigation of the origin, the nature and the effects of beer, wine and cider, arranged in three different series, each one extending thru the year, or rather ten months of the year, so as to allow for delays and interruptions. The course on beer is now ready. It consists of forty handbills on that subject, some of which have been already published, tho about half of them are quite new.

The plan is this: these handbills are all bound together in pamphlet form, and in the order in which they are to be taken up. The dates are assigned beforehand, so that each member can know what topic is to come at a certain meeting, and be prepared for it, bringing whatever else can be found bearing upon it. Beside this, references are given in the pamphlet to other tracts and accessible books and these are assigned to certain members to select extracts from, to be read in connection with the leading handbill, all together forming a strong discussion of that particular point in the beer topic. whether it be as to the item of cost , or nutrition or medicine, etc. etc., and the members can add all they please.

This pamphlet contains full directions with all the references to other sources of ir formation, making a stout octavo of 48 pages for the trifling sum of five cents. Every member of the organization ought to have a copy, and if they cannot pay full attention to the course they will be likely before the year is out to find themselves vastly better informed than ever before on

"The dark things hidden in the beer."

The plan also provides for the distribution in the community of some of the hand bills or other tracts that come before the society in connection with this course of reading, thus making the entire neighborhood sharers in the benefits of the course, and it ought to make all the members active propagators of the idea, and good intelligent fighters against beer. Something we must do, or the brewers will have the best of us, for they are determined to make us all beer drinkers, and they are gaining all the time, and would have gained far more than they have but for the execution already done by our hand bills. We set out, as we declared at first, with the intention of covering every man's beer glass with a handbill—by your help, of course, for we can do nothing without that. This course of reading and distribution is well adapted to use in all kinds of temperance societies. Try it and get a copy for five cents. A course on wine for wine drinking localities is nearly ready, and another on cider is in course of preparation; but every locality needs to read up on beer.

CHAUTAUQUA.

It is one of the aims of the RESCUE to commend its readers to use a good deal of diligence and go to some expense if need be, to furnish the parlors of their intellectual storehouse with the right kind of useful and ornamental knowledge, to improve and cultivate and embellish and polish the talents with which the Creator has endowed them.

One of our correspondents seems to think the Chautauqua training will not carry us to heaven, but certainly it may do valiant service in beautifying and smoothing and brightening and flower-strewing the way thither.

The great "First Thought" who fashioned the little plants and mosses and insects, which are so tiny as to be altogether invisible to the unasisted human eye, clothed them in a beauty of ornamentation, infinitely beyond the highest power of human art or human imagination; and if he expended such a boundless wealth of beauteous adornment on these humblest of created things; if he made the snow flake and the salt crystal marvelous temples of architectural glory, we may be sure he loves to see an immortal soul, a creation after his image, beautified and glorified with a polish and a culture and a faithful educational training, derived from an earnest honest search for wisdom and knowledge, and an admiring study of the works of nature and of nature's God.

The readers and friends of the RESCUE have been many times urgently commended to unite with the Chautauqua circle and reap all the great and rich advantages to be derived from its pleasant and useful course of study. It would be pleasant indeed to hear that many persons, multitudes have been induced to undertake these studies, because of the recommendations here made, because an assurance would be felt that the RESCUE had been vastly useful to them. A reference to page 195, in last weeks number will tell you that Miss Willard, the untiring, ubiquitous and most comprehensively efficient President of the National W. C. T. U. has succeeded with Dr. Vincent in making a temperance training school, one of the educational features of the Chautauqua System. Of course this branch is optional with the students, but this addition to that institution ought to make it more popular than ever.

Those who have been thinking it over had better write to the Secretary at San Jose and make a commencement now if they have not done so already.

FACTS ABOUT WOMAN SUFFRAGE,

TRACT BY J. HOOKER, CONN.

1. The experience of other countries. It is now about ten years since women were admitted to the franchise in Great Britain, in every respect except voting for members of Parliament, and the present discussion in England is wholly upon extending their franchise so as to embrace that right. Disraeli declared himself in favor of it and Gladstone says it will be granted soon. 220 members of Parliament voted for it, and Sir John D. Coleridge, then Attorney-General, said in a public meeting that it was sure to be granted,and that, as to the suffrage already granted, no one thot of such a thing as a repeal of the law. A petition to Parliament for full suffrage to women was signed by 300,000 women of the kingdom. The London Examiner, in refutation of the statement that women would not vote if they had the right, gives the result of 66 elections. Out of every 1000 women on the register, 516 voted, and of every 1000 men 564, showing that the women voted about as generally as the men. In Austria, women have been allowed to vote for everything that men vote for, since 1864. At a late election of members of the Austrian Parliament over 9000 women voted in Vienna. In Sweden women have voted equally with men for several years.

2. The experiment in our own country. In Wyoming, full woman suffrage has been established about 9 years. Hon. N. L. Andrews, Speaker of the House of Representatives, writes, Jan. 16, 1879, that he came to the territory "with the strongest possible prejudice against woman suffrage," but that, "under all my observations it has worked well, and been productive of much good and no evil that I have been able to observe." He then goes on to say: "In my opinion the real, health-giving remedy that would counteract the political degeneracy of the age would be the ballot in the hands of the women of every state and territory." And again: "If good government be the ultimatum sought by civilized people, I see no safer, wiser or better way of securing that object, than by the ballot in the hands of woman." He also believes, "that the time must soon come when woman suffrage must of necessity become universal thruout our country." The Boston Post (Democratic) published the goregoing letter in full, and says editorially, that the writer "is a Democrat of ability and standing," and that the letter is "a reinforcement of no small value" to the advocates of woman suffrage. A Wyoming lady, writes to the Boston Herald that "in the legislature of 1875 (the experiment had been then tried four years) only one man was opposed to woman suffage, and he was an intemperate man and a defaulter. This man made a motion to repeal the act, but no one would second it, and he was actually hooted down."

There are now twelve states that allow women to vote in school matters. The act that has just been passed by the New York legislature went thru the Senate unanimously.

3. The opinions of sound thinkers. Herbert Spencer says: "The giving of political power to women.....being required by the law of equal freedom, such a concession is unquestionably right and good." Prof. Newman of University College, London, appeals to the women of England thus: "To claim a purely domestic status, disables you for contest against odious enormities, pregnant with fraud, cruelty and social decay. Such modesty is not womanly sensitiveness; it is rather to be called womanish selfishness. I implore you, ladies, in the cause of the wretched and injured, and to quell that licentiousness which is the ruin of great nations, arise and claim your rightful position in the state!" We might fill many sheets with strong passages from English writers and speakers in favor of woman suffrage. Among its living advocates are Florence Nightingale, whom all the world admires for her heroic labors in the hospitals during the Crimean war, Rev. Dr. Temple, Rev. Fredrick B. Maurice, Prof. Amos, (law professor of London University,) Lord and Lady Amberly, Prof. Fawcett, M. P., Jacob Bright, M. P., Disraeli, (who Prof. Newman says supported the bill with a zeal quite astonishing,") and many other leading names. Among its advocates recently deceased, are Rev. Chas. Kingsley, John S. Mill, Harriet Martineau and Mrs. Somerville, the last of whom was unsurpassed as an astronomer, while Mis sMartineau's books on political economy are text books of instruction to-day.

These are foreign authorities. Some of our own will be given next week.

PEN PORTRAITS.

Sample copy of the above by Geo. W. Bungay has been received. Pen portraits of Distinguished Abstainers contains 32 finely executed portraits of as many of the chief laborers in the temperance vineyard, with a brief biography by the talented author. It has also a history or pen portrait of a score of other prominent workers. It is a handsome volume and ought to be in the library of all who love to have an introduction to or an acquaintance with the best and noblest patriots and benefactors their country has ever produced.

Price $1.50. Send to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St., New York. While commending most heartily this very opportune addition to our best temperance literature, there is one disappointment to be noticed. A list of our temperance heroes is incomplete that entirely omits all mention of Mother Stewart, Miss F. E. Willard, Julia Colman, Mrs. Mary C. Johnson, Mrs. E. J. Foster, Mrs. Lucy W. Hayes but it occurs before proceeding any further with this list of heroic, noble womenworkers, that the author is going to give them a volume by themselves very soon, so hurry up and get this first book off the shelves and make room for the other.

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

On the 16th February it is proposed to issue an edition of 20,000 copies of the RESCUE. An excellent opportunity of advertising will be afforded on that occasion. And it is hoped some of the correspondents of the paper will help make it an interesting and useful number.

RETURNS RECEIVED.—During the past week the following Lodges have filed Grand Lodge returns with the G. W. S. and their receipt is acknowledged: Nos. 126, 226, 447, 449, and Hawaii No. 7.

ENCOURAGING.—Up to the date, 325 lodges have filed their quarterly returns for the previous quarter, reporting an aggregate and actual membership of 16,843, or an average of a little in excess of 50 members per lodge. There are still a number of delinquents to hear from, but they will not enter into the calculation unless heard from; as this jurisdiction has never figured in any paper lodges nor fictitious membership. Since the commencement of the current fiscal year and the date of the last quarterly returns, 37 new lodges have been instituted with an aggregate charter membership of 906. So that the membership of the Grand Lodge of California in round numbers is 18,000 and more are coming since the Good Templar "boom" of California continues.

DIME COLLECTION FUND.—A movement is on foot to contribute the literature due the various lodges on account of the recent dime collections, to the literature committee of the R. W. G. L. for distribution among the freedmen of the south and in the new and weaker jurisdictions. So that the collections will be divided one-fourth each between the National W. C. T. U. and National T. S. and P. H. and the remainder in literature from the N. W. C. T. U. and N. T. S. P. H. to the freedmen of the South. The scheme is commendable and it is hoped that all who have contributed to the dime collection fund will at once send to the G. W. S. their consent to forward the amount of literature due them for disposition as above indicated. All contributors are requested to immediately notify the G. W. S. whether they will or will not join in this movement. The following lodges have already volunteered their consent, aggregating $64 worth of literature, and it is believed nearly all others will do likewise; Siloam No. 2, Sylvania 12, Vallejo 64, Campo Seco 105, Centennial 107, Caspar 117, Independent 119, Columbia 128, Constitution 130, San Juan 134, Aerial 144, Igo 155, Lakeview 211, Charity 212. Scenega 221, Orion 224, Kernville 237, Fairview 247, Sheridan 260, Riverside 284, Madera 290, Live Oak, 297, Victoria, 328, Newcastle, 339, Soulsbyville, 340, Success, 366, North San Juan, 369, La Porte, 381, Pacific, 392, Azelea, 400, Saticoy, 411, Capay, 419, Pleasant Prairie, 429, San Luis Obispo, 444, Castroville, 446, Willow Spring, 461, and Madison 463.

INSTALLATION.—This is installation week in all lodges of the I. O. G. T. It is hoped that every lodge will be prepared for a prompt installation of its officers at the apointed time. D. G. W. C. Ts will not install the officers of their lodges until they are placed in possession of the quarterly returns. As soon as received, the quarterly returns should be transmitted to the G. W. S. Any neglect or delay in the transmission of the returns proves a source of annoyance and great inconvenience at the Grand Lodge office.

REGALIA VOTE,—Lodges that have not yet certified up the result of their vote upon the question of the proposed change of the white collar of the Order to a metalic badge, are requested to do so immediately, as the record must at once be closed for transmission to the R. W. G. S.

PLEDGE CARDS.—The Grand Lodge publishes a neat pledge card with a Murphy, or blue ribbon pledge, printed in blue upon one side and an announcement of the I. O. G. T. upon the reverse. They are convenient to take the pledges of persons disposed to sign them outside of the lodge rooms, at public meetings or wherever a person may be induced to sign the pledge. The pledge cards are sold at $1 per hundred. The cards are printed upon cardboard the size of a postal card.

HOME FOR ORPHANS' TRUSTEES AND MANAGERS.—The regularly quarterly meeting of the Boards of Trustees and Lady Managers of the Good Templars' Home for Orphans, will be held at the Home, Vallejo, on Tuesday next commencing at 10 o'clock A. M.

GENEROUS DONATION.—Antelope Grange No. 98 of Dunnigans, Yolo Co has forwarded thru T F Hughes a donation of $116.75 to the Good Templars Home for Orphans' fund, and the same has been gratefully accepted and acknowledged by the G. W. S.

KERN AND TULARE.—Information is wanted of the whereabouts of George Gilbert Tiechurst, an Englishman who resided at Havilah, Kern county in this state, having gone there from England eight or ten years ago. He was engaged in mining in the mountains about Havilah. His relatives and friends in England have not heard from him for a long time and his aged father grieves very much, fearing some sad end must have come to him. He was a Good Templar, and his friends have written to ask the Order here to make inquiries concerning him. Any information concerning Bro. Tiechurst's whereabouts or fate will be gladly received by the G. W. S., and transmitted to his friends and relatives.

ABOUT CHARTERS.—Six weeks ago and over, a new supply of 100 charter plates was ordered from the R. W. G. S., but owing to various delays on the part of the lithographers, for which the R. W. G. S. gives the assurance that he is not responsible, the charters have not yet arrived, tho they have been looked for daily for the last four weeks. To add to the misfortune, a roll of twenty-five charters which were sent to the G. W. C. T. for signature and return to the G. W. S. have miscarried and become lost in the mails, a circumstance which has never before occurred between these two offices. So that until the new supply arrives from the East no new charters can be issued. Meanwhile charters are due, and will be issued at the earliest moment possible to the following new lodges: Fort Jones, Mountain Fern, Frazer Valley, Lathrop, Rockford, Golden, Marshall, Greenwood, Saratoga, Mazeppa, Cornelian, Evergreen, Mountain Rose, Hokes Valley Lakeshore, Buena Vista, Starlight and Forest Home.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24, 1882.

The board should have held a business meeting at the Home Tuesday Dec. 27, 1881. There were only four members present, namely, Mesdames Thompson, Alsip, Carpenter and Robbins, this not being a quorum, no business could be transacted, only that pertaining to the Orphan Home Christmas Festival which occurred the following day, December 28th.

The exercises were held in the second story of the schoolhouse at 2 o'clock P. M. The Christmas tree stood in the center of the room, fairly groaning under the weight of presents, thanks to our brothers and sisters who so promptly responded to our call. Santa Claus came, and when he discovered how abundantly he had been supplied with gifts for the orphan children, hesitated somewhat, as if disliking to despoil the tree of its beautiful garb; the hesitation was but momentary. When distribution began, aprons, pockets, hands and arms were filled to overflowing; children's hearts made glad, managers rejoicing at their happiness. The enjoyment was not marred by the illness of any one of our large household. Every child in the home was taken down to the schoolhouse; even to the babies, numbering two.

The President, Mrs. Thompson, thot it best to withhold our report of receipts from lodges and friends toward the Orphan Home Christmas fund until a complete one could be made. We now submit the following report of cash and other donations received, and herein return thanks to the generous contributors.

MISCELLANEOUS DONATIONS.—From Dr. R. H. McDonald, President of the Pacific Bank, San Francisco, one hundred and thirty cornucopias, each filled with choice candy; also a quantity of Christmas songs. From the St. David's Hotel, San Francisco, one hundred and thirty Christmas cards, selected by Mrs. McLellan, of Benicia. From the following residents of Vallejo, to wit; Mrs. S. C. Farnham, one doz. turkeys; Mrs. Jas. Frost, two packages of candy, one of nuts, one and one-half doz pairs of stockings; S. Dannebaum, one piece of muslin. From Vallejo Lodge, No. 64, a large trunk filled with every thing one could think of, reminded you of a magicians hat apparently no bottom to it. The members of Vallejo have good reason to be proud of their donation. From Red Bluff Lodge, No 192, a large box of clothing made up of new material, numbers of large garments sixty nine, suitable for both sexes. Three doz. pair of stockings, two doz. pocket handkerchiefs, and bibs, waists, and sundry articles too numerous to mention. PARAGRAPHS.

BY T. J. SUTTON.

The arguments of the whisky men against prohibition seem to me to resolve themselves into such contradictions as these. "Governments have the right to punish criminals, but not to prevent crime." "It is not interfering with a man's liberty to punish him for getting drunk, but it is a gross violation of the rights of citizenship to say one shall not sell whisky to men to get drunk on." If it is wrong to drink liquor it is equally wrong to sell it. If one man deserves punishment for drinking it another deserves punishment for selling it. If excessive drinking is detrimental to society, so is excessive selling. If society has the right to punish crime, it follows that it also has the prior and higher right to prevent crime; because in sound logic the right to punish crime is derived solely from the circumstances of the punishing power having made all reasonable efforts to prevent the crime it punishes. Punishment of crime without making every possible effort to prevent crime is itself crime. There is, then, a clear inconsistency in the position of the rum advocates who cry out against the punishment of dram sellers and at the same time acquiesce and even aid in the punishment of the drinkers. Surely if the former have a right to sell, the latter have an equal right to drink; and should be protected in the enjoyment of that right by their beneficiaries and not "given away" to the authorities the moment they get drunk. Such a course is not only inconsistent but ungrateful !

LAW.—A high official has declared the Sunday law cannot be enforced in San Francisco. The Sunday law interferes with the business of a monied and influential class. Its enforcement might improve the public morals a little, but it would proportionately diminish the revenue of the public demoralizers and debauchers; its action must therefore be suspended. It is better that society reek with crime of every degree than that an organized gang of brothel furnishers and murder breeders should be broken up by public authority. But who ever heard of a law so harsh in its punishments or so unjust in its provisions that it could not be enforced against the poor without the slightest regard to its effect upon the revenue or the morals of anybody. I never did. The fact is, society is humbugged in this matter. Every interest of civilization, every sentiment of justice, every feeling of humanity, of philanthropy, benevolence, charity, love, cries aloud for the suppression of the inhuman traffic in rum.

PROTECTION.—It is admitted on all sides that society may protect itself against vagrancy. Rum is the mother of vagrancy!

It is admitted that society may protect itself against theft, robbery, burglary and arson. Rum is the mother of these also. It is admitted that society may protect its members against the contaminating touch of prostitution. Rum is the mother of this.

It is admitted that society may protect itself against murder. Rum is the prolific mother of this most barbarous and horrible of crimes. I have passed forty-five years of my life upon the outermost rim of the blood-draggled frontier, and in that time have witnessed or been cognizant of the facts of one hundred murders; and every one of those murders was the fruit of strong drink; every murderer was inspired and driven to his ghastly work by rum. But its sale must not be prohibited, because to do this would interfere with some people's business.

COMMUNION WINE.—Dr. F. R. Lees of England has written to the RESCUE in regard to the report, that he had on reading Mr. Wilsons book recanted the opinions which he had held thru a course of 40 years study and labor on this question of ancient and modern wines. After proving most conclusively the actual facts of the existence of unfermented wine for 3000 years and having completely demolished the boshy and ridiculous book of Mr. Wilson, he said—"if these facts are no facts, if unfermented wine is a myth, I confess myself defeated and the criticism was wasted industry." Now look at the truthfulness of the leaders of the other side of this controversy. They published at once the cheerful intelligence broadcast, that the famous scholar, Dr. Lees on perusal of Mr. Wilsons masterly book, had confessed his own error and declared his forty years labor fruitless and mistaken. And it was republished in America and deceived the Rev. J. C. Simmons who saw it. Mr. Simmons' letter which appeared in the Pacific Methodist has been answered at considerable length in the RESCUE, but always with an entire concession of the well understood fact that it is just as much his desire to understand and teach the truth, as it is on this side. Neither of us desires to establish a personal theory or opinion, or to serve any other purpose than to get at a proper understanding of the truth in a matter, which each believes to be of immense importance. And this controversy if it can be called so, has been as perfectly friendly as if we were both laboring to prove the same point.

The leading men on the side of fermented communion wine, to whom thousands of Christians who have not taken time or had opportunity to investigate this matter themselves, look as authorities, have for 20 years past in this country put forth no argument save one in behalf of their position, viz. that their opponents were not of the first scholarship, that the highest scholarship knew better. And with this they have deceived thousands of innocent men who loved and desired the truth. It is safe to say that no man has had access to so many documents, manuscripts, authorities and evidences of all kinds upon this subject as Dr. Lees, and no one will venture to say that he has or has had a superior in the scholarship and intelligence necessary to their proper understanding. And a large number of the most eminent scholars have similarly investigated the same subject with similar results. While it is conceded to the other side, that they have and have had a large number of eminent classical scholars and theologians who could have been as capable and competent as Dr. Lees, but they have passed judgment according to their prejudices, skipping all examination or investigation, and never qualifying themselves in the slightest degree to give an opinion entitled to the least respect. Next week the reader will hear from Dr. Lees.

VETERANS HOME.

Monterey bids for the location of the Veterans' Home; the Argus and the Index urge it, promising rest and sunshine, salubrious climate, a beautiful landscape, vicinity to the Pacific Grove, a lovely chance for the veterans to fish and gather shells and bathe and enjoy the healthful sea breezes and be lured to sleep with the soothing lullaby of the surf waves that roll upon the beach, and dream happily of what the billows of old ocean are saying in their ceaseless come and go.

On the other hand, somebody in Fresno who loves old soldiers and wants to sell land, offers a free tract for the home, and will plant a vineyard on it so that the country's old heroes and defenders may enjoy the happiness of a constant home drunk, make their home the 'veteran's hell,' have a general debauch from Christmas to next Christmas, and die off as quickly as possible.

Probably San Francisco will bid for the location of the Home as it would help the brewers who could have a brewery next door to it.

If Fresno County can offer no advantages better than those its few drunkard makers hold out, in the interest of their own individual pockets, it would seem that Monterey presents a complete and unanswerable claim; probably no other locality can offer such strong and wholesome inducements.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

WHAT WINE HAS DONE.

All over this country, all over Canada, all over England, there is an active work going on in the special interests of the boys and girls. In many thousands of villages and towns and in many thousands of country homes all over these nations, there are to-night, and every night, men and women talking, reading, writing, thinking about this matter of surpassing interest to the young folks. Every year for the past fifty, more and more people have commenced and joined in this thinking and writing and working, for the benefit of the present young folks. And now those who have long labored in this work are thinking that these young folks are by far the most privileged generation that has ever been born into this world. We expect they will see the awfully sinful and cruel liquor traffic utterly destroyed and forever buried.

Let us see what this drink evil has done. We read of many ancient nations famous for learning and culture; they were generally rough, strong, sober healthy people at first, and overcame their enemies in war; grew wealthy, learned to love wine: became vicious and corrupt; poisoned bodies made poisoned morals, poisoned souls, poisoned finances, and the greatness of the nation so poisoned, perished, and its people degenerated into insignificance.

In ancient times Idolatry was the great crime of men, but it had always drunkenness as its chief corner stone, and the business of making, selling and using intoxicating drinks to-day. building and running breweries and dramshops is doubtless the vilest and lowest and most cruel and degraded form of idolatry that has ever existed among men. Other races have worshiped gods and images and snakes and elephants and angels and spirits, but our liquor business is pure devil-worship.

THE JEWS,

Before the Babylonish captivity, had a country of their own, and every man had a vineyard; altho their grapes and grape juice were mostly used as food, they also made fermented wine—not for nourishment or food or medicine, but to get drunk on. There is no evidence that they ever believed fermented wine was good or wholesome, or of the slightest use or benefit; or that they ever made or used it for other purposes than for feasting, gluttony, revels, idolatrous sacrifices and drunken frolics.

The ancients believed that their preserved pure grape juice, free from alcohol, was good and wholesome as food and medicine, and so it was. There is not a word in the bible nor any other ancient history to indicate that they believed intoxicating drinks gave strength, health or nourishment, or did anything but make drunk. That is only a comparatively modern idea, founded upon utter ignorance.

But the Jews got drunken and idolatrous, and wicked and demoralized; their enemies used them up and took away their country from them twice, and now, for 1800 years they have had none. Before they had vineyards and abused their grapes, they conquered their enemies in war; but the bottle was too many for them; and now, in all these eighteen centuries, having no vineyards and no drunkeries, they have been a sober, healthy, moral, virtuous, vigorous, prosperous, wealthy people; prospering and surviving and growing in wealth and numbers and importance and influence with a worse chance to live or prosper, than almost any people on earth ever had; they have been robbed, persecuted, abused, burned, imprisoned, mobbed and murdered for all these centuries in nearly all the countries they have fled to, and would have perished from off the earth under such treatment, at any time that they had ceased to be a sober, and consequently a moral, virtuous, thrifty people.

It may be told you that other causes have preserved the Jews, but the Lord never provided any way yet for a drunken man or family or nation, to survive without reforming and becoming sober.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT

Used fermented wine, and after conquering about all the world that he could find, he died in his 32nd year, a drunkard, after a heavy debauch. He was in the habit of having drunken sprees on pure wine, but no one has ever accused him of the hypocrisy of pretending that he took that kind of wine as a food or medicine, or for any other purpose than to make him boisterously drunk. His empire soon went down of course; like king, like people.

THE PERSIANS, GREEKS AND ROMANS,

One after another, with the best chances for continued prosperity that the world had so far afforded, went down into insignificance. Their poets and historians and orators and priests praised up their sparkling wines; they praised their unfermented wine as a medicine, too; but they did not pretend to use the other for anything but to intoxicate. In place of increasing in wealth and power and learning, as they might have done every year till 1882 and 2882, they went down hill with wine and the pauperism and vice and degeneracy it caused; and to-day they furnish the world with beggars and organ-grinders and boot-blacks and a few drunken cooks, fishermen and sailors; and we send missionaries to their countries as we do to the Cannibal Islands.

THE SPANIARDS AND PORTUGUESE,

But a short time ago, were great and powerful nations. Their ships were upon all seas; they had colonies everywhere. Enough specie was carried there from abroad to make them rich for 3,000 years. but they have devoted themselves to drinking and making wine, and making the world a drunkery; with the most brilliant chances for constant growth, they are utterly insignificant, worthless, pauperized nations, and with the exception of furnishing a few raisins and fresh grapes, they are no more account to the world than the sawdust that floats down a river. Perhaps the extreme poverty of the people has saved them from entire extinction; they are generally so poor that they have no means to get drunk very often. While they have come to poverty, the sober Jews, with the worst chances in the world, have grown immensely.

MORE TO FOLLOW.

England, Germany, France, Belgium, Holland, Hungary, Russia, Switzerland, Austria—in fact, most part of Europe, have had for fifty years past an agricultural and industrial income, all of them which ought to have made all their treasuries full and every home happy. But they have wasted in drunkenness and the losses and damages it has occasioned, far more than the whole value of the land and everything else the people have. With the saving of what they have lost in drink and vice, they could have paid in ready cash for all their wars and never felt it; would not have had a cent of national debt, and in place of being on the verge of general starvation all the time, every city could be stored with one or two year's full supply of provisions. And for every park, library, church, school, etc., they could have three better ones.

Why you young folks are so fortunate, you are going to see a new era; the opening of an age of sobriety. Christianity divorced from its alliance and friendship and partnership with the devils chief agency. When the grogshop and the brewery and winery are destroyed, there need be no tramps, no paupers, no criminals; the door will stand wide open for a happy home, a plenteous table, an abundance for all, and no impediment to a joyous, useful, virtuous, godly life for every one of you.

THE CHINCHA ISLANDS.

There used to be a large fleet of English ships, another of American, a few French, German and other European ships, constantly loading at the Islands after the guano trade had fairly opened. There were sometimes as many as 100 vessels there. Work commenced early in the morning for those who were getting cargo and ended most commonly early in the afternoon. The Peruvian Government stipulated always that they should have at least 60 days and at most 90 days to load a ship, according to her size; and they soon got into a way of making every ship pay 30 or 40 dollars a day for any time they saved of their 90 days.

The guano was powerfully strong with ammonia; and when it was being dumped down into a ships hold, men unused to it could only stay there a few minutes and live, unless they had a large pad of oakum over their nose and mouth to breathe thru. And of course it was impossible for any human being to work there, without frequent hearty drinks of some strong, fiery liquor; it was a little strange, but any kind of drink would answer the purpose, that would make men drunk. And after drinking it, men could work nicely in guano.

Ships went first to Callao, entered at the custom house, made arrangements for loading, got a permit and then had to beat down against the trade winds 120 miles to the Islands. One of the first things to be supplied with in Callao, was pisco, the native grape brandy, which was very fiery and had a tremendous grip in it.

One vessel that went there in 1854, had a great many offers to be supplied with rum or pisco; did not want any; "but you cannot load your ship without it;" "men cannot work there without it," &c. "All right, then we will stay there without loading," was the reply. On arrival at the Islands, the sailors were informed that they would be well fed, well treated, well worked and when fools drank rum they should have coffee. They were quite willing, only one venturing a very lame protest, which the rest at once repudiated.

In the ships near by that one, when grog had just been served out, the sailors sang very cheerfully for fifteen minutes or so, then quieted down and slowed and were sullen till grogtime came again; in a few days a second mate had an arm broken, a seaman got stabbed and another lost an eye in three of a good many drunken rows On the sober ship there was a steady attention to business, not a growl or disturbance of any kind: Every thing pleasant and cheerful and as at that time the parties who looked sharpest after their business got loaded first, that ship was loaded in less than half the time of some that had an equal chance, and quicker than any one had been known to load for many months. It was said that was the first vessel that ever loaded there without liquor, but I met an English Captain afterward who asserted that he had done so three years earlier. Three years after this, more than half the American ships loading at the islands used no liquor and the rest mostly declared they would never again. Few of them did except in the cases where the Captain liked it himself.

Most of the English ships continued the practice to the end of the chapter, it being represented to the owners that it was impossible to get a ship loaded without it.

HOW RUM HELPED.

In 1854 there was an English bark called the Cotfield, at the Chinchas. She had gone to Australia from London with a splendid freight of about $30 a ton; took about 100 passengers on a wild cat gold rush from Melbourne to Callao at $120 each and got $27.50 a ton thence to England. With proper management the profits of that voyage ought to have amounted to nearly the amount of the first cost of the vessel, but she was sold for debt at the end.

The captain had a jolly long time in Callao before going to the islands; in 3 to 5 days he should have reached the islands; 10 days was a very long time, but he immortalized the name of the Cotfield by being 45 days on that 120 mile voyage. At that time a captain could choose to load his ship by bringing the guano off in launches and hoisting it on board, or await his turn and haul in alongside the big shoot on shore, which showered down from the top of a high cliff a whole cargo as fast as it could be trimmed; that took from 2 to 3 days. They had to wait sometimes 30 or 40 days for their turn.

When the Cotfield's turn came, the captain was over to Pisco having a good time; the mate, when ordered to haul in and load, said he had no orders; he was having a good time, too; so the Cotfield had to wait till another turn came round. Meantime, he took his ship over to Pisco, a most singular freak, and when, after about 40 days more, his turn came again, the ship was not there, and the turn was lost again; next time, he was on hand and got it. Returning to Callao, he staid there a long time. Those who heard of the loud fame of the captain of the Cotfield, supposed they would find him a scrubby, worthless, dirty-looking ruffian, but he was probably, of all the captains there, the handsomest, the most dignified, gentlemanly, courteous and pleasant in manner, appearance and conversation; he would be the last one of the fleet to be picked out as that celebrated character—he liked rum; that was all that ailed him.

People had a good time there; some ships were a favorite resort for a little knot of captains, who met there to smoke, talk, play cards and drink pisco to keep the sailors from getting too much. When they were away, their mates imitated in many instances the example of the masters. And the second mates followed suit. And the sailors ditto. Guano was not by any means a bad cargo if properly loaded; it had to be kept with extreme care from getting wet in the bottom of the ship, by being well dunnaged; bags were furnished to lay in the bottom over the dunnage; and all precautions had to be taken to allow any water the ship might make, to run off or keep clear of the guano, which when dry would cake so hard that it had to be removed with a pick, but when wet became like the mud in a mud scow.

Because the simple, easy precaution of guarding the cargo from contact with the water on the "bottom floor" of the ship, as you would call it, a vast number of ships were obliged to come back from sea with their pumps choked, leaky and the voyage and the ship ruined; no one knows how many, but it is pretty safe to say that the neglect induced by rum alone caused more than one hundred ships to be lost, to put into port or come back and discharge cargo, or meet with serious loss and damage there or on the way home.

A fine English ship, in 1854, arrived in Callao from San Francisco, after a passage of 300 days; 3 times the length of a voyage to New York or Liverpool. The captain was a gentlemanly, highly-educated man of a family of note. To tell all the mischief rum did at those Islands to life and morals and property would make a book as copious as the Bible.

ONLY STIMULATES;

Cannot Strengthen. When the body is tired, rest and food are required to repair the waste. Alcohol has no power to mend the waste of the body; it robs the blood of oxygen, which is absolutely necessary to the proper action of the nervous and muscular systems. Alcohol may give the drinker a spurt, and thus enable him to accomplish something beyond his natural strength, but it leaves him weak and exhausted afterwards. It is like the whip to a horse, making the animal use his strength too rapidly. Benjamin Franklin demonstrated the fact that there is no more strength in a gallon of ale than in a penny loaf; Dr. Livingstone travelled many thousand miles in Africa, and Sir Henry Havelock bore the fatigues of a war campaign in India, without the aid of alcohol. While alcohol cannot give strength, it does serious injury to that vital organ the heart. I will therefore write,

Heart overworked by it. The heart pumps the blood all over the body thru the arteries. In a full-grown man, the heart beats 73 times in a minute, 4,380 times in an hour, 105,120 in 24 hours; over 5,000 ounces of blood are pumped thru the body by the heart in 24 hours. This is the same as saying that 115 tons have been raised one foot. Suppose you take a wine-glass of whisky at luncheon, another at dinner, and another at supper, you will then have taken two ounces of alcohol. This increases the beating of the heart 6,000 times in 24 hours, which means lifting a weight of seven tons a foot high—that is, 35,480 ounces. So that two ounces of alcohol make the heart do work equal to lifting a seven ounce weight 35,480 times. We cannot wonder then at the drinker being exhausted, when he has to do so much unnecessary work. I think I am justified in writing,

One glass does harm. The one glass may lead to more; all drunkards began by drinking one glass at first. If you can take one glass yourself and no more, your example may be the means of leading another to drink who has not the same self-control. However small the quantity of drink taken into the system, it does mischief.—Banner.

A GUIDE POST FOR THE BOYS.

"Mr. Wm. E. Dodge has made heavy investments in almost every enterprise that points towards the reformation and the regeneration of the race. The church, the Sunday-school, education, temperance, have been 'many times and oft' the recipients of his generous benefactions. His heart is moved by the 'wants of man,' and its pulsations put the thot of giving into his head. He gives discreetly, not under the emotion of mere impulse, but after mature deliberation. Religion and reform have drawn rich prizes from his exchequer, but they have not been the prizes of accident and chance. In pulpit and pew, and in almost every phase of honorable life, there are those who 'rise up and call him blessed.' His great capacity for business is proved by his success. As a man of brains he rises to an altitude that commands the respect and honor of not a few of the best educated thinkers in this country. The merchants of New York joined with their neighbors in an effort to send him as a representative to Congress, where his excellent common sense controlled by conscience, led him to a faithful and honorable discharge of his duties. So frequently is he called on to preside at public meetings his face is familiar to the multitude. He is the President of the National Temperance Society, and he is 'the right man in the right place.' He is prompt as 'the dial to the sun'; a ready and sensible speaker, who knows how to say without over saying the right word at the proper time; and he is sufficiently familiar with parliamentary usage to conduct a public gathering with propriety and dignity. Mr. Dodge is tall and slender, has dark hair with lines of silver, finely cut features wearing the stamp of integrity and firmness, and a knowledge of the world. He dresses plainly, but always in good taste, and never assumes airs of importance because of his wealth and influence. How many rich men with half his income and not a tithe of his good sense would stride along the street with heads lifted too high to see their poorer neighbors! The life of this merchant prince is a rebuke to the miseducated snobs who rinse their throats with wine because they like it, and especially because they, in their ignorance, think it is a proof of gentility and the habit of the aristocracy. Some of the best men in the land, and not a few high officials have put aside their wine out of respect to Mr. Dodge as their guest. This was a fitting honor to a man who from his childhood up, thru good report aud thru evil report, has been true to his temperance principles."—Pen Portraits.

THE WORKING MAN.

The noblest men I know on earth
  Are men whose hands are brown with toil;
Who, backed with no ancestral groves,
  Hew down the wood and till the soil;
And win thereby a prouder name
  Than follows King or warrior's fame.

The workingmen, whate'er the task,
  Who carve the stone or bear the hod,
They bear upon their honest brows
  The royal stamp and seal of God;
And worthier are their drops of sweat
Than diamonds on a coronet.

God bless the noble workingmen,
  Who rear the cities of the plain;
Who dig the mines, who build the ships,
  And drive the commerce of the main
God bless them; for their toiling hands
Have wrot the glory of all lands.

A VAST GROGSHOP.

Bear me witness if I exaggerate when I say that the country is rapidly becoming one vast grogshop, to which half a million of its youth are yearly introduced, and over whose threshold sixty thousand are annually carted to a drunkard's grave. The streets of our cities echo to the shouts and oaths of drunken revellers, from whom society seeks protection thru police regulations, and in hovel and mansion alike, not entirely smothered either by physical fear or social pride, is heard the sound of insane violence and wailing. What river is there along our coasts, what harbor upon whose shores a city stands, whose waters have not closed over the bodies of those who victims to this traffic, were flung by violent hands from pier or bridge, or madly sought beneath their silent surface forgetfulness of woes or wretchedness too poignant to be borne. Within the darkness of dungeons and along our highways may be seen wrecks of former beauty and manhood wrot by this traffic, and now and then one, as by a miracle, after long years of misery and debasement, rescued there from, lifts up his voice in public and makes men aghast with the recital of his woes and degradation.—Ohio Alliance News.

MATHEMATICS.

A NUT THAT CANNOT BE CRACKED.

A mathematical problem, which has been worrying some of the weighty minds of the community, has been laid before the Sentinel. It requires to know the area of a body of land which is in the shape of an irregular quadrilateral. The only terms given are the dimensions of the four sides, which are respectively, 1,669½, 1551½, 990½, and 947½ feet. The problem belongs to trigonometry, but without other measurements being given it offers no basis for any kind of a calculation in any branch of mathematics. It is apparent that any four sides can be made the periphery of numberless figures differing in shape and area. If, in this problem, the distance be given from two diagonal corners also, the correct answer may be reached by simple geometrical process; or, if the measurement of any one of the four angles be taken, it may then be solved by logarithms.—Lodi Sentinel.

That problem can be very easily solved, Bro. Ellis, by supposing, what is evidently its intent, the largest area of land that can be enclosed within those lines. Will some of the young mathematicians who read the Rescue send the answer and the method of finding it? Some of the young ladies who are in the habit of carrying off prizes for essays, etc. The first correct answer received at this office will be rewarded with a copy of "Our Wasted Resources," and the second, Julia Colman's "Alcohol and Hygiene."

DRUNKENNESS AND FALSEHOOD.

"Whenever strong drink producesa permanent effect upon the human body, there is established in the affected person the habit of falsehood. No one has met with a dipsomaniac whose word can be relied on. Women or men, the members of the dipsomaniac class have, to some extent, and too often to the saddest or extremest extent, forgotten the truth. This is so certain that falsehood becomes a part of the diagnosis, if we may so say of these cases. There are two modes of accounting for this remarkable phenomenon. It may be said that the habit of untruthfulness is begotten with, not of, the habit of intoxication. The habit may be looked upon in this light, as a part of a general degradation or deterioration of character. Again it may be said that the habit is begotten of intoxication. It may be looked upon in this light, as an effect of the intoxication, in the same way as color blindness may be the direct effect of a chemical which, like alcohol, produces when taken into the body in large quantities, a nervous abberation. Inscrutable as it may seem, and as indeed it is, I believe this last explanation is the nearest to the correct explanation of the phenomenon."

Just what the Bible has been preaching for more than twenty centuries, that wine perverts the judgment, is a mocker, a deceiver. Priests and prophets went astray because of it, and the Bible associated the wine of intoxication, the wine of ferment, with everything wicked and filthy and profane and abominable; and never in the history of the world has it had any other tendency but in the direction of such things.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL CONCERT.

A collection of twenty-five concert exercises and dialogues, for Sunday-schools, bands of hope and other juvenile temperance and religious organizations; 16mo, 224 pages, cloth 50 cents; paper 25 cts. The following is the list:

CONCERT EXERCISES.

The Alcohol Fiend; Beware of Strong Drink; The Cup of Death; The Fruits Thereof; Who Hath Woe? Gospel Temperance Service; Scripture History; Sowing and Reaping; The two Ways; The two Wines: Wisdom's Ways; The Contrast.

DIALOGUES.

An Appeal from the Apples, Grapes, Rye and Hops; Fighting against Rum and Tobacco; Counting the Cost; The New Pledge; The Young Housekeeper; Curing a Drunkard; Wine a Mocker; I Can Do a Little: A Fit of Indigestion, Eddie's Procession; Water is Best; Bad Habits; Blue Bows.

The above dialogues and concert exercises are among the best ever offered for Sabbath-schools and temperance organizations, and the volume will be sent, post paid, to any address, on receipt of price. Address

DAVID C. COOK.

Be sure to read with care David C. Cook's list of excellent publications in another page. Now is the time to secure good and interesting reading for the family, the Band of Hope, the Sunday-school, and to fill up every bodys library. Never before was such a chance to get proper books, papers and music for the young folks. They can be had too, for about half the price that old, battered, second hand books used to cost. Every body who dont spend money for tobacco and beer, can well afford to reap the benefit of these publications: exery one who does spend for tobacco and beer ought to use twice as much money for good literature to enable him to keep his conscience from becoming too persistently troublesome.

The Temperance Almanac is out for 1882 with its usual large amount of useful information and reliable statistics. Contains 72 pages; list of the leading societies of temperance, and has a capital department for the children—ten cents single copies or $1 per dozen. Send to J. N. OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

WHAT ONE WOMAN DID FOR KANSAS.

A man might have done the same thing, perhaps, but it was a woman that did do it. It is not intended so much at this moment to praise the woman, as to appreciate the act.

The legislature of Kansas were voting upon the question of submitting to the people the present prohibitory amendment "and before the result was announced, it was known by a woman in attendance who had kept a tally, that the changing of one vote would result in the approval of the prohibitory amendment to the constitution. This fact was communicated to a little black-eyed woman, whose heart was deeply interested in the question. Her husband had voted against the measure. She left her place as a spectator and made her way to his side. With great emotion she pleaded with him in a whipser, in the name of himself, his wrfe and children, and for the honor of Kansas, to change his vote. He arose before the announcement of the result of the vote, and amid the applause of many grateful women, changed his vote to the affirmative.

That was a matter that made scarcely a ripple on the current of the world's thot; the value of the change of that one vote was not quoted in the market reports of the day. But it is quite possible that the five minute's plea of that little black-eyed woman, which succeeded in the change of that one vote, was the heaviest single financial transaction that ever occurred on this continent.

It is not extravagant to suggest that the act of changing that vote was one that added a largely increased valuation to every honest man's property, and every honest calling, business or occupation in Kansas.

It changed the public commercial policy of Kansas from a suicidal to a most judicious and salutary one. In place of giving state authority to the destroyers of the lives and properties and business of the people, that vote gave the people the opportunity which they improved, to protect their homes and families and properties from the murderous and plundering assaults of the manslayer conspiracy.

That vote made Kansas an attractive and secure home for good, honest, virtuous settlers to flock to; every family of such people being an addition of many thousands to the wealth of the state. And it built up an impassable barrier against the ingress of the brewer and the professional harlot, the distiller and the jailbird, the saloon keeper and the gambler, the five cent beer diver and the tramp, thief and pauper, the presence of every one of whom would have been an annual loss and damage to the community, state and nation, reaching into the many thousands.

If the vote of the people had not carried the amendment the change of that one vote would not have been of such tremendous import. But the amendmeut was carried; if that one vote had not been changed, the cause of prohibition, which has by the adoption of the amendment, received such a hopeful and positive impetus in Kansas and in all Christendom would have met a set-back in Kansas and every where else. Had Kansas failed and been counted with Carolina and the other unsuccessful states, it would have given the enemy high courage and motives for a vigorous following up of their many advantages. It would have discouraged too all the wavering, weak voters on our side. And who can tell but if that vote had failed to save Kansas then, a rush of ignorant, foreign barbarism could have been poured into the state sufficient to defeat the amendment when later submitted to the people; for it must be admitted that with legislature and people there was not a very large margin of success to spare.

It is a fact however that the one vote saved Kansas from a temporary defeat of prohibition and saved the whole country from the demoralization of such a defeat. It saved Kansas from one or two or perhaps five or ten more years of rumselling and it hastened by as many years the prohibitory law that will be enacted in each of the other states and the final comprehensive National law which is sure to come.

If that woman had done something which saved Kansas from one years impending grasshopper pest, she would have doubtless been much praised and some rewarded. But she saved the state from one or more years of an infinitely more costly and destructive pest than grasshoppers or dry season famine. And in view of all its financial bearing upon Kansas and the Union, it is perhaps far within the mark, to estimate the cash value of that few minutes work of a good woman, at one or two hundred million dollars in the saving of money costs for drink and all the cost of loss and damage to life and property, destruction of business and retardment of prosperity thruout the country.

Of late quite a number of portraits of temperance reformers and workers have appeared in some of the temperance papers and other publications. One that ought to be canonized in that way and to excite the warmest and most affectionate interest would be that of the dear heroic little blackeyed woman who turned that vote! and whose name should go down to history as one of those highly favored and "blessed among women."

FOR THE GERMANS.

That the natives of Germany and France and their immediate descendants in this country are fondly attached of their drinking habits, and intensely intolerant to the opinions and practices of the better classes of Americans, is not at all to be wondered at; probably they are no more to be blamed or abused for those peculiarities than people are for having a red or dark complexion. Obstinacy, bigotry and intolerance are mostly the offspring of ignorance, and our immigrants from Europe are entitled to the fullest measure of considerate compassion for their entire ignorance on everything relating to wine and beer; save how to make, and sell and drink them. On these points they are experts; on all other matters relating to alcoholic drinks they are as stupendously ignorant and blind as the eyeless fish that inhabit the brooks in the caves of Kentucky. And it is not surprising, for there are English and American scholars of eminence—not a few, but thousands, eminent in many various branches of learning, college men, professors and ministers among the rest, who, because they have disdained all inquiry into the very important matter of the nature and effects of the use of poison, are quite as blind and ignorant on all such things as the fish referred to.

To the knowledge of the writer it is a custom (to what extent cannot be stated) with the doctors in Heidelberg to advise a healthy, sober, promising American student who goes to college there, by no means to drink any water, but to use wine and beer instead. Some of those students who have obeyed, and others who have not, have proved that that was the most fatally dangerous and abominable advice, and have convicted the doctors of the most lamentable ignorance of a matter of supreme importance for them to understand. An American lady who goes to Leipsic to take a finishing course of musical instruction, and has to consult a doctor for some trifling ailment is strenuously commended not to do the one thing that above all others is the most important for the maintainance of good health: Dont drink any water, he says, use Rhine wine, etc.

It is supposed these are fair average types of the German doctors; if they are so intensely ignorant upon this point, it is quite natural for their people to look upon a law or custom which prescribes beer and wine just as we would look upon one that should prohibit the use of water or bread, which to us would surely be a hardship.

If it has taken fifty years of a constant bombardment of temperance papers, books, tracts, lectures, sermons and crusades of fifty different kinds to convert a majority of American sentiment to the admission that the drink system is a nuisance and ot to be abolished, how can we expect the large body of Germans to become in the least degree educated out of their old follies, when the only sources of information open to them are their own papers, published in the interest of the breweries and by men quite as ignorant of what beer is and does as the rest, and vastly more bigoted and more double-crammed with the intolerance begotten of the most sublime ignorance on the drink question.

About twelve years ago, at the session of the R. W. G. L. in St. Louis, an effort was made by a Pacific delegate to have the ritual of the I. O. G. T. translated into German, and a movement inaugurated to get at the reason of the German people by means of arguments in their own language, but it was staved off by the assurance of the Secretary that the work of translating the ritual was already in progress, and a number of plates or pages stereotyped. But a much more important matter in the estimation of that august body occupied all its energies for several years. The advocates of all talk and no funds, of the cost nothing, have nothing and do nothing policy, were laboring to kill off the degrees as a preliminary to getting away with the regalia, and then the signs and passwords and so on. The battle ended with 200 or 300 thousand members killed, wounded and missing, and the German mission was thrown overboard.

It is probably idle to expect any action in this line from that body, but it is a very sad neglect on the part of our Grand Lodges not to adopt some immediate mode of active work among the Germans and endeavor to instruct them in the truth, as we have done with other people. Some of our best and most earnest and enthusiastic temperance workers are and have been Germans, who have studied this matter and learned the truth. These people, behind none of us in genuine zeal and faithful testimony, might have been but for what they had the opportunity to learn, just as active members of the league of outlaws; and there are doubtless members of that conspiracy who, had a similar opportunity come to them would have been actively at work instructing and reforming their countrymen.

We ot to have 8 or 10 German Lodges of Good Templars in this city and 40 or 50 in the state and to have that we want some German Temperance literature. Possibly there is no other way in which an experimental $250 or $500 could be as effectively invested for the good of the cause by the Grand Lodge of Cal.

The W. C. T. U. of Ohio and Illinois are actively at work in this direction and publish a German temperance paper which is doing a good work.

COMFORT FOR WINE MAKERS.

It will be readily admitted by the grape growers in this country, that they need never expect to make real wine at a smaller outlay in California than they can in Switzerland, where labor of all kinds and everything the laborer needs is so cheap.

But the wine makers who use grapes there, are clamoring to their government to protect them from ultimate starvation, against the wine makers and brandy makers right alongside of them, who dont need grapes at all to make their liquors, but make a favorite searching article from glucose and the pump and the drug store and the potato, &c., and undersell the grape wine utterly. And the glucose sharps can do it as cheap in St. Helena as in Switzerland.

If our grape growers are not entirely blinded, they must see that glucose and grapes that grow down cellar and on the shelves of the drug store and in the hydrant, are just as sure as the sunrise, to be the source of supply of the bulk of the market for California wines and brandies. If not blind, they should know by this time that they never can make a fancy or favorite quality of wine or brandy, by a treatment of the utmost skill and care, extending, if you please, over a period of 10 to 20 years—but the San Francisco and Sacramento and Napa expert will in two or three hours or at most two or three days, fabricate a precisely similar liquid, with the same identical qualities, and so perfect the imitation that nothing but a chemical analysis will detect the difference; and it will be just as good too, and costing not as much as the meanest and cheapest fermented grape juice wine that is made on the coast.

But there is one real comfort to the vineyard man who will not prostitute the good and loving gifts of God. The ingenuity of man has so far failed, and no doubt it always will, to make a grade of raisins at all passable or even saleable, out of turnips, potato-balls, glucose, thistles, beets, old shoes or cabbage leaves; and if they ever get to canning that kind of goods and labeling them canned grapes, or pure grape jelly or grape syrup, they cannot run the pure genuine article out of the market or undersell it, or educate a taste for a substitute that is built up of rosin and strichnine and glucose and turnip juice and kitchen slops. The fact should be broadly known that in the Napa Valley right among the vineyards, the substitution of glucose for the grape has actively begun, and that there never can be the slightest obstacle to its general use in San Francisco and other cities, nor the least danger of its detection there; this should indicate to the grape grower that his interests lie solely in the direction of putting his vineyard to a lawful and proper use, which under any and all circumstances will prove the only profitable system for him to pursue.

Mr. Sargent tried a few days ago to curry a little political favor and manufacture a little Sargent voting stock among the drunkard makers, by magnifying the wine and brandy interests of California before the National Committee of Agriculture at Washington; in that he said the product of California for 1880 was valued at nine millions, three millions of which went to the producer. And he was certainly above the mark in his estimation of the producers share if he meant the grape grower as the producer. How would the statement look that the wheat crop of California amounted to 70 millions, of which one third went to the farmer; or the raisins produced in California sold for six millions, of which two millions went to the producer? Verily the way of the producer that sells himself to the service of the drunkard maker will be very hard. In all other countries he is a miserable slave.

CHICAGO'S BLACK HOLE.

WHERE THOUSANDS OF YOUNG MEN ARE YEARLY RUINED AND MILLIONS OF MONEY ANNUALLY WASTED.

The Chicago Inter Ocean gives a diagram of a tract of 20 blocks of that city, some of which are entirely and others largely devoted to dens of debauchery and crime, which a correspondent describes as follows:

"THE BLACK HOLE.

Let the reader visit that portion of the city bounded by Van Buren, Twelfth, Clark, and State streets, as in the annexed diagram, and let him bear in mind that he is right in the heart of our city, and nearly in the center of its business interests. What does he find? That one of the principal streets in Chicago, a very artery of its business, and as to location without its equal in our city, is, for over one-half of its length, and for two-thirds of its best portion, almost entirely given over to liquor saloons, variety theaters, concert saloons, and houses of ill-fame. The places marked are only a few of the more striking ones. Every block besides these actually teems with all-night saloons and similar dens. And the night revelry carried on upon this thoroughfare would, if known in all its horrid details, send a blush of indignation over the face of every virtuous citizen of the city. In the district bounded as in the diagram, there are nearly five hundred liquor saloons; there are six variety theaters, and over 100 concert saloons, fifteen gambling houses, between fifty and six pool-rooms, and if one counts every tenement and flat let to abandoned women he will find over 500 places of ill-fame; but, counting only each door or street number as one, one will find over 200 such places in this small district alone. This number of places will give the reader, at the very lowest, over 3,000 abandoned women who inhabit and patronize this section of this city.

RATHER UNDER THE MARK.

And any one who is at all acquainted with this part of the city will say that the figures are rather under than above the mark.

By a careful count there are 12,000 young men who nightly patronize these places of destruction and death. It is safe to say that $190,000 is weekly spent in these dens of infamy, or nearly $10,000,000 is yearly wasted upon these avenues of sin and crime. No one can estimate the value of the lives that are ruined, or the value of the hearts that are broken, or of the homes made desolate by these haunts of vice and crime. And it is an alarming fact that the vast army of harlots, drunkards, gamblers, and thieves who inhabit this quarter of the city, and patronize so freely the low groggeries, variety theaters, concert halls, gambling hells, and houses of ill-repute, find plenty of recruits from the youthful victims who are nightly led astray under the false glitter and seductive influences that are here spread open before them. Dante has pictured in his "Inferno" that the words painted over hell were: "Who enters here leaves hope behind." And surely the "Inferno" of Dante could not be more repulsive to the moral sense than one of these low variety theaters. In one of these places which the reporter visited he found the so-called wine-room down underneath the theater itself, and away from all sight or sound of the outside world. And here, in a small room, dimly lighted, were nine of these painted and powdered women, exhibiting every unmistakable sign of their unholy calling. They were ready to entrap into their foils any one, rob them, and then cast them forth upon the streets, there to find their way into the courts, or else to become a prey to a second thief and footpad. Modesty restrains the reporter from further describing the scenes witnessed in this den of infamy. Decency would forbid their being published, but enough should be described to arouse a just indignation that these places are permitted to exist in our city, and to stir public sentiment until they were blotted out of existence forever. These variety theaters are patronized largely by the youth of our city. At one place were counted 750 young men, and among this number were 320 boys. The majority of the patrons of the concert-saloons are young men. And what a mockery to call these places concert-saloons, for, with the screeching of the singer, the clanging of glasses, the curses of the half-drunken habitues, their loud laughter over some coarse joke, with the deadly and sickening stench, they appear anything but places of concert.

FILL THEM WITH THE VILEST LIQUOR,

A VILLAINOUS PARODY.

What a mockery, also, for one of these harlots, whose very dress and looks show not only her abandoned character, but tell, also, the story of her hardened, deceitful and cursed life, to stand upon the stage, before a crowd of young men and boys who are filling themselves with the vilest liquors sold in our city, and sing a song with the lines,

O mother, kiss your darling.

One would naturally expect to hear in places of this kind, profanity mingled with obscenity, but when the sacred things of life are set at naught; when decency is discarded, and amid these scenes of revelry and debauchery one of these outcasts steps before the audience and sings the praises of a mother's love, it shows how barren are these creatures of all sense of shame. The variety theater is one remove from the concert saloon in point of merit, but not one whit above it in point of respectability. That point of merit is that you must go inside of the variety theater to hear the voices of the sirens, while those of the concert saloon are heard as easily and distinctly upon the streets as they are upon the inside of the screens that divide them from the public gaze.

LET THE PULPIT SPEAK.

That these dens of iniquity (concert saloons) should be allowed to exist in such profusion, and that sin and debauchery of the most damning kind should be allowed to so openly flaunt itself to the eyes of those who are upon the streets without a remonstrance, without a word of indignation from the Christian pulpit of Chicago, is a mystery. The only opposition that has thus far come up against them is from the press of Chicago, and among this number the Inter Ocean has been foremost.

The respectable people who reside on State St. are justly indignant at the rapid increase of these dens of sin around them. It is a standing joke at the variety theater that State street is abandoned to prostitutes, or in other words has become a market place of prostitution. In this district there are rumshops enough for five cities of 10,000 inhabitants each; drunkards enough for twice that number; gamblers enough for twenty cities; thieves enough for a state four times the size of Rhode Island, and with variety theaters and concert halls enough for five cities as large as Detroit, Mich. Chicago, with its population of 500,000, has some 300 churches, and perhaps there are 300 or 400 clergymen in our city. Its school system is one of the best in the world, and its citizens are as charitable as any in the world, and for business enterprise they have no superiors. Some 112,000 men, women, girls and boys are employed in the factories of Chicago, and alongside of this fair showing, comes the astonishing fact that the city has 4,000 liquor saloons.

FEARFUL STATISTICS.

In 1880, over 28,000 arrests were made by the police force of Chicago—10,743 of this number were between the ages of 20 and 30, and 22,533 were males. It is safe to say that fully three-fourths of all the males arrested were young men and boys. All of this was done by our small police force of only 473 men, at a cost to our city of $191,380.75; while for the police force of New York city $4,000,000 are expended.

New York, with its population of 1,500,000 has over 7,000 liquor saloons, and it is estimated that the money spent in these places, is $60,000,000 a year. It is safe to say that Chicago with its 4,000 saloons, will expend one-quarter of that sum, or $15,000,000 a year. Complaints are made often and loud of the condition of our streets, of the mud and filth which accumulates and renders them almost impassable. But what of the moral condition of our city? The public should move in this matter. The police force should be 1,000 strong. More money should be expended to reclaim this vast Sahara of iniquity. In the very midst of these strongholds of sin our missions should be planted, our churches built."

A police force ten thousand strong, with a mission and a church and a Sunday school and a temperance society for every one whisky den in Chicago, would never make a very perceptible diminution of the crime and debauchery there, or be likely to at all arrest its continuous increase as long as the rum and beer sellers were allowed to continue their atrocious work. A prohibitory law with a united front of the professors of Christianity and temperance in favor of its rigid support, and six feet of good manila rope with just one saloon keeper suspended at its lower end for the first violation of the prohibitory law, would do more to reform and bless and Christianize Chicago in a week, than the whole preaching and praying force of the civilized world turned loose upon that city, could in twenty years, provided the grogshops were allowed to stay.

While believing that Guiteau should have been hung (or roasted) on the day after he fired the shot at President Garfield, because letting one guilty escape involves the certain future murder of hundreds of entirely innocent victims, it is beyond the logic of the writer to comprehend if Guiteau is to be hanged, or ought to be hanged, why every saloon-keeper, brewer and brothel keeper in the land should not be instantly hanged on the same day. Or if these characters are permitted to poison men deliberately and intentionally to death, inciting men to murder their wives and mothers and children and each other; teaching boys to steal, entrapping innocent girls to perdition, and mudrering them by a slow torture of years ——— and as it can be proved that they never did, nor can, nor will, nor want to do any better deed than Guiteau did, or wanted to do when he shot President Garfield—and if they are allowed to go scot free, how in common sense can we punish Guiteau at all for killing just one man?

If the Mormon doctrine and practice, were the doctrine and practice of Chicago even with the disgrace of polygamy included, as they once prevailed in Utah, and do now exist in those portions of Utah where Federal judges and Federal bayonets and gentile debauchers have not been able to establish our modern adjuncts of Christianity, there would be neither grogshop, brothel nor gambling den —if they were the prevalent doctrine and practice of the people of the United States, and a condition of things like that described, were to exist in the gentile cities of Chicago and San Francisco, it would seem that the United States army might be consistently employed to stamp out at the point of the bayonet a system, religious or political or both, that would not only tolerate but embrace consentingly, and support with vote and countenance such a hideously barbarous and brutal nest of publicly approved and pulpit indulged crime.

And if Mexico and Canada were virtuous nations and had the power to do so, they would be justified in demanding of the U. S. the immediate purging of these cities with the alternative of sending an army in the name of humanity and for the whole world's sake, to burn them up, and not leave one stone upon another. Such a horrible barbarism is an insult and a defiance to the God of heaven, and it comes square from the mouth of every teacher of Christianity, and of every other member of society whose life is not a constant protest and active battle against the monstrous national crime.

Oh that the Mormons and the Mahomedans and the Brahmins may be moved to educate and send missionaries of temperance and morality and cleanliness and godliness to our devil possessed cities of America and England and Europe.

SECOND DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

In the course of human events it becomes necessary for the people of Indiana who are in favor of peace and good order, and that the perpetuation of the blessings, privileges and equal rights bequeathed us by our forefathers be secured, to declare the course which impels them to the separation from King Alcohol, who has proved to be the most unjust and unmerciful king who ever ruled. He has been for many years the direct cause of putting to death without cause or provocation, five thousand of our people yearly. He has filled our jails, state prisons, alms and poorhouses, blind and insane asylums, poisoned the blood of millions of our sons and daughters, caused thousands of wives to weep over husbands and sons whom he has unmercifully slain, has separated thousands of wives from their husbands, has caused thousands of suicides; has wrecked many vessels at sea and cars on land; sends thousands yearly to the land of woe; has obstructed the administration of justice, has made judges dependent on his will alone for the tenure of their offices: has erected a multitude of new offices to increase our taxes; has kept among us in time of peace standing armies, has incited insurrections among us has taken from us 60 millions of dollars yearly, for which we have only received in return discord, murder, misery and crime. He has threatened to blot out the God-given Sabbath; has defied the laws of God and man, has threatened the overthrow of our government, and turned the faces of our cities toward Sodom; has turned into poison liquid fire to curse our people, the grain and fruit that God designed for a blessing, and our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A king whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Therefore the law-abiding people of the state of Indiana have determined to take the sword of the Spirit and the ballot, and with all possible speed overthrow the greatest of tyrants, King Alcohol, and, the people of the State of Indiana, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the universe for the rectitude of their intentions, in the name and by the authority of the good people of the State of Indiana, shall be free from King Alcohol, and for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other, our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor. Signed, Jos. Cadwalader.

"NORTH AMERICAN REVIEW."

In the February number, Prof. Geo. P. Fisher of the Yale Divinity School, whose writings on the supernatural origin of Christianity and on ecclesiastical history are well known, comes to the defence of the Christian Religion against the attacks of modern doubt and infidelity. No abler or more eminent advocate for the orthodox faith could be summoned into the controversy that has been lately waged on this high theme, and it is not too much to say that Prof. Fisher justifies every expectation by the vigor and clearness with which he handles the subject. He proceeds in a very orderly manner to maintain a series of positions in regard to the origin, essential character and beneficent effects of the Christian faith, which are intended in themselves to furnish the answer to all objections and cavils. In the first place he takes advantage of the position that Christianity is no new thing whose present existence calls for justification or apology. It is inwrought with the very fibre and substance of the best part of modern institutions and civilization, and has contributed more than any other force to making them what they are. We are impressively invited to imagine what they would have been without its agency.

The idea that Christianity has been a bane to mankind is very effectually disposed of by an appeal to history and the experience of the race. In tracing the development of Divine Revelation.and the gradual establishment of the religion of which Christianity is the consummation. Prof. Fisher gives a very broad interpretation to the idea of inspiration in the writings which contain its record and its precepts. Thereby he is enabled to meet with skill and effect some of the most telling arguments of the skeptic and the infidel. He claims for instance, that the Divine method was to select a chosen people and lead them gradually up to the plane upon which the fullness of truth could be revealed to them with a possibility of being received and propagated. There was no sudden transformation of human nature, no violent sweeping away of old institutions and miraculous introduction of a new system, to which there must be a sudden and complete adaptation of mankind, equivalent almost to a new creation of the race; but instead of that the chosen people were dealt with as men of their own era, and those that surrounded or came in contact with them were similarly treated according to the requirements of the stage of progress reached from time to time. Hence the evils and abuses characteristic of ancient days were not suddenly rooted out, but were restrained and mitigated, while the forces were set at work which were to effect their final annihilation. This idea of the gradualness of revelation and the modified character of inspiration avoids a vast array of difficulties, but at the same time it approximates the process of religious development to that of political and social development and the growth of civilization generally. To many minds it will seem in no small measure to abolish the distinction between religious revelation and the general supervision of human affairs which all devout minds attribute to the Deity.

In dealing with the facts and doctrines of Christianity, Prof. Fisher displays much of the same breadth of method. While he resolutely maintains the genuineness and credibility of the miracles of the Savior and the Divine Character of the Gospel record, his arguments regarding the authenticity, substantial harmony, and essential truth as to facts of the New Testament scriptures, are such as would be applied to any other controverted writings. Considered in that light they are well-nigh conclusive, but they are in some respects, quite different from what we have been accustomed to in religious controversy. The testimony of the disciples is tested as human testimony, and the records treated as subject to the ordinary accidents and incidents of literature. All this, of course, does not affect the essential character of Christian revelation or the religious belief and practice that is founded upon it. In dealing with these, the learned writer has a strong case, and presents it with much vigor and force. His contribution to the controversy will be regarded with great interest, as furnishing the latest statement of orthodox views in what may be regarded as an authoritative form. Taking it as such, not the least part of its value will be found in the evidence it affords of the progressive character of the most strictly orthodox thot of the day.

Other articles in the February number of the Review are: "Do the Spoils Belong to the Victor? by President Andrew D. White; "A Remedy for Railway Abuses," by Isaac L. Rice; "Repudiation in Virginia," by Senator John W. Johnson; and "The Lancet and the Law," by Henry Bergh.

OAKDALE.

Mrs. Stevens has made an awakening on the question of temperance in Oakdale; secured a large addition to the membership of the lodge there, and made an opening for temperance literature to follow up and strengthen and give permanence to the results of her labors there. The following business men of Oakdale are now subscribers to the Rescue and it is hoped our Good Templars and good citizens all round, will take note of their address and extend to them their friendly patronage.

To the Ministers of the Gospel:—Dear Brother:—We send you a few of our leaflets for your own perusal and for distribution among your friends. We assume with entire confidence your interest in the temperance cause, and your intelligent acquaintance with the present state of the reform. Whoever has kept step with the march of ideas upon this subject has ceased to prattle of the sufficiency of "moral suasion" to cure alcoholism, the "impossibility of executing prohibitory laws," "the impropriety of taking temperance into politics," and similar expressions which may have been excusable in a temperance childhood. He secs that what is wanted is a reform which shall make our laws to harmonize with God's law: "Cursed be he that putteth the bottle to his neighbor's mouth." Our law condems a man who steals or injures a horse, but sells to men, for a price, the privilege of doing their best to ruin a boy, and to blight a home.

The need of the hour is "unity and organization." The staunch, reliable_temperance people of every community should see "eye to eye," should know each other, plan and act together to do the duty nearest to hand. Many things are to be done. There is yet immense ignorance to be enlightened by lectures and temperance literature, and the few should not be left to do it all. We should familiarize ourselves to the idea that the supreme political problem is not "the offices," or "the finances," or "our party," but righteous law faithfully administered. Law that does justice to mother and wife and child, that protects the homes of the nation from assault, and stamps out the institutions alien to them, whether in Utah or in our own town. Temperance men must act together, and if the political parties persist in ignoring this great issue, put their strength where it will tell. R. W. Nelson's plan of organization is good. But organize. A. J. Jutkins.

"HEALTH."

This is the name of a nice little health magazine, published monthly, only 60 cts. a year, Dr. R. Walter, Editor. There is not money enough in present circulation to buy a commendation in the Rescue of anything that is not known to be true and genuine, but what is true and good and wholesome gets at times a gratuitous and unsolicited introduction to its readers. Dr. Walter will visit you then 12 times a year for just 60 cents, and you will find him not only an advanced and skilled medical practitioner and authority, but at every visit he will teach you in the most pleasant conversations, a variety of lessons for preserving your health, and making your life altogether joyous and useful and happy. The time to send for the best doctor is before you are sick, and learn from him how to keep well.

Dr. Walter should be invited into every household in California; he is just the doctor we want; not mummy swathed in ancient medical delusions, nor a professor of any revolutionary patent healing power—but a plain, common-sense advocate of wholesome food, wholesome habits, wholesome medical treatment when ailing humanity needs careful nursing, rest, comfort and curative nourishment, the true healing art. If about 1,000 people in California will each send twenty 3 ct. stamps for this Journal "Health," to the Health Publishing Company, or to Robert Walter, M. D., Reading, Pa., the Rescue will undertake to return the money to all who regret the act at the end of the year. Clubs of five or more get it at 50 cents. That 60 cents will do more good than $20 spent at the drug store.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

ENORMOUS SAVING TO SCHOOLS.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1 0, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan:" we then issued two publications; we have now 36, besides 133 Library books, 5 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty-six million copies. There is not one of our pub ications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 4½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing, etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1½c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 1c. each a year, or 2½ a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with litt e lesson pictures; also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter o most Sunday-school papers (please count words); also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45.

Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in a neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. Far better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection; books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5½ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5½ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4½ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

7½c. Packages of S. S. Reward Cards. 25c. packages of reward cards for 7½c. New designs. No. 1. Poems for children, with pictures, glazed cards, assorted tints, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 2. Scripture text, with picture and verse of hymn, glazed cards, assorted tints, 48 cards, size 2½x3. No. 3. Beautiful chromatic card, floral design, short Scripture text, 64 cards, size 1¾x1¾. No. 4. Scripture text, chromatic card, 96 cards, size 1⅜x1⅞. No. 5. Miniature Scripture text, colored designs, 192 cards, size 7/8 x1½. No. 6. Precept, promise and verse of hymn, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 4½x2½. No. 7. Illuminated Scripture text and verse, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 3½x1¾. No. 8. The Lord's Prayer, floral border, glazed tinted board, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 9. Ten Commandments, floral border, glazed and tinted, 12 double cards, size 4¼x6. No. 10. Band of Hope, triple pledge, beautiful chromatic card appropriately designed, 12 cards, size 3½x1½. Prices, sample package, 10c.; three or more packages, 8½c. each; ten or more packages, 8c. each; twenty five or more packages, 7½c. each. Prices include postage.

Revolution Bibles. From "Oxford" plates. Teachers' Bibles, with concordance, encyclopedia, dictionary, tables, maps, etc.—most complete teachers' Bible extant, as low as $1.30, postpaid. Gilt edge, brass bound gift Bible, with clasp and tasseled book-mark for 60c. postpaid. Magnificent gift Bible, new pattern, round corners, etc., for $1. 25, equal to any $4.50 gift Bible.

Lesson Commentary. On the International Lessons for 1882. Covering not only the lessons for the whole year, but the entire book of Mark, and accompanied by the "Revised Version Text," a revised reprint of the "Cambridge Scholars' Commentary." Prepared by G. F. Maclear. D. D., and J. J. S. Perowne. D. D. Price, 10c., postpaid. 5 or more, 9c. each; 25 or more, 8c. each. Book is put up in strong postal card covers. No similar work for less than $1. We also publish at same rates a complete Bible Dictionary of two thousand complete articles, 512 columns, and nearly 100 illustrations. The "Teacher's Compendium," nine books on teaching, in one; The "Ideal Sunday-School;" "Sunday-School Management" (a choice book for teachers); "Word Pictures," and "Normal Half-Hours."

Holiday Lesson Calendar. For scholars and teachers. 12 beautiful chromatic cards, 5x8 inches, one for each month, containing the International Lessons for the whole year, the Home Readings, Memory Verses, lesson pictures, verses and maxims tending to promote nobler living, etc. The whole making a beautiful and inexpensive present for the whole school, or for a class. Punched for hanging up, sold at the following marvelously cheap prices: Single calendar (the 12 cards), 10c., 5 or more calendars, 8c. each; 25 or more calendars 6½c. each; 100 or more, 5½c. each. Ready in December.

MRS. STEVENS.

A welcome reception at Oakdale; crowded houses for three nights; forty-eight names to lodge; $22.25 collection. Eleven yearly subscribers to RESCUE. Oakdale Lodge will now be included in the list of lodges of one hundred members. A determined band of workers have redeemed the town in three years; for about that time has elapsed since I first organized the lodge. No horse racing now on Sunday; altho saloons are not all closed they will be. One saloonist, Mr. Swift, who honorably closed, but found the others would not obey the law, at once gave up the business. He told me, "I was disgusted to find myself classed with outlaws, and determined to quit the business. These outlaws ought to take warning from the law breakers of Sheridan.

One man said to me, "I would have these saloonists in Oakdale arrested, but I am afraid they might burn my house." Then I replied, if "we have a set of outlaws who will commit arson and murder, because a just law is enforced, the sooner we awake to the fact the better. The more depredations these outlaws commit, the sooner the righteous indignation of a long suffering people will be aroused, and our country emancipated from the cause of the rum sellers slavery. And so I believe the outlaws of Sheridan who have so wantonly burned property, and attempted to destroy the home and happiness of Mr Click will be the means of placing the League of Freedom where it belongs, among the criminal lawbreakers of our state." No compromise with outlaws should be our watchword.

Rev. Mr, Gage, District Deputy of Stanislaus Co. is an earnest advocate and friend of our cause, and the county of Stanislaus bids fair to be placed among the foremost working temperance counties of our state.

Sunday night at Ceres; another good meeting largely attended; only one saloon in this place, and I think that is nearly starved out; temperance sentiment strong here. At Stockton met some of the subscribers for RESCUE; all expressed themselves exceedingly pleased with this paper: said there was no trash in the RESCUE.

J. W. WEBB.

SAVANNAH.—From Alhambra, Bro. Beardsley took me direct to his Good Templar home and family, posted me as to the "good ready" he had been working hard for in the lodge and neighborhood. At open lodge, good singing, an excellent essay by Sister Lee, W. V. T., and speeches by S. S. Supt., Bennett, Mr. Randolph, Bros. Stowell, Beardsley, and self—a regular temperance love feast. Next night, good, deep interest at the lecture; canvassed for names, not without some success; seven will be proposed next lodge night, most of them obtained by quiet work privately done by the members. There are now 47 in this young and promising lodge, among them Hon. Mr. Ellis in the last legislature, and his family. Addressed the public school and prepared the way for a Band of Hope which we successfully instituted on Sunday afternoon. Sold some of Cook's books and papers. Bro. Beardsley promised me at District Lodge to get up a club for the RESCUE and sure enough, the W. V. T. had sent off six names recently. The saloon is closed on Sundays.

EL MONTE.—On Saturday morning went to Baptist church to hear our noble Good Templar, Elder Fuqua preach. He was unable to be present, and one elder Webb had to preach, without notice or special preparation. "Out of the fulness of the heart. the mouth" spoke both gospel and temperance truth. At the church meeting directly afterwards, the necessity of church members actively working and identifying themselves with temperance workers, was freely advocated and acquiesced in by more than one. From Bro. Beardsley "chipping in" too, I suppose he must be a church member also. But he is one of the kind that will "speak out in meeting," on temperance.

Sunday is a day of rest. Thus I rested; took a class of 13 bright boys at Sunday-school; addressed school at length, instituting good Band of Hope, Bros. Fryer and Cross Supt. and Sec. being elected to corresponding offices in the Band, At 11 o'clock preached to a full house. At 3 went to Savannah, conducted Sunday-school, delivered an address and organized Band of Hope, the Supt. being one of the first to give his name. The assistant Supt. was elected first officer of the Band. A good number of young men joined, the older ones to encourage them and the children and when Bro. Beardslee handed over his tobacco and took the pledge the applause was tumultuous. It numbers nearly 50 members. Returned to El Monte and lectured in the church, crowded to excess. We had good singing and the "banner" collection of the county, $10—exceeding Los Angeles, the Banner Lodge. No board bill, Judge Grey, Lodge Deputy Quinn and I know not how many others giving cordial invitations to stay with them. Monday I rested only writing letters and addressing the schools and lecturing at night to a full house again. Obtained two subscriptions to RESCUE, and a score for Cook's books and papers. This lodge is interested in the "Mutual Aid;" blank applications have been sent for to G. W. Sec. and as soon as they are received he may look for a number of names. I am going more persistently to advocate that. In this place a beautiful $5000 school house and grounds are nearly ready for occupation. The glorious rain is copiously falling making long faces shorten up and everybody in good spirits. It looks as tho the drouth were broken and all will have heart to take hold of all branches of our work in earnest. Appointed T. J. Cross agent for RESCUE and he may be relied on to send a number of names soon.

At the close of last lecture, Bro. Graves, W. Sec. "brot the house down" by reading "The Dutchman's opinion of ter penefits of trinking" The lodge takes two RESCUES and has just renewed for another year.

Klotz Mill is 25 miles from Milville, and in order to reach the above named place, three things are necessary a good team, a large stock of patience, and considerable faith; during the Summer months a large number of men are employed in the mills and I have no doubt it is a "busy camp," but it is dull enough in the Winter. No lodge meetings are held having adjourned until Spring, delivered two lectures on the 14, and 15, school house crowded each evening and anticipate good results, 16th, returned to Milville where I had left a sick horse (having a little of Bro. Culvers experience in Humbolt County), 17th drove over to Balls Ferry, lectured 17th, and and 18th, to large audiences, this is one of the oldest lodges in the county, and Bros. Winsell and Wilcox report accessions at each meeting they now "hold the fort."

ANDERSON on the line of the C. P. R. R. is six miles from Balls Ferry twelve from Redding, lectured here on the 19th, and 20th, and at the close of meeting on the 20th, initiated 14 leaving 5 to be initiated next meeting, and promised to lecture again this evening, 27th, school house crowded many being unable to gain admittance; but little has been done since their reorganization in August last, but the prospect for the future is good. Bros. Fisher, King and others bold and determined, Saturday 21st, drove over to Igo, lectured in Good Templars Hall, obtained additional names for membership, and Sunday morning 22d. went to Eagle Creek, lectured there 22d, and 23d, in the new Hall of the Champions, found that it would not be good policy to attempt to organize a lodge at this time; 24th, returned to Igo and lectured to an audience that completely filled the large hall and were attentive and enthusiastic, obtained 19 names for membership and initiated 14, closing lodge about 1 A. M. Am under very many obligations for favors conferred, and shall long remember Bros. Ingle, Robinson and Batchèler; 25th, drove into Redding 15 miles intending to try Copper City, again but the rain prevented, being unable to reach Gass Point on the 20th and 21st, shall endeavor to be with them on the 28th and part of the day Sunday 29th; having thus reported progress will now sum up my work in Siskiyou, Trinity and Shasta Counties in my next, Would say to Bro. King that they still have "weather," such as it is, and to Bro. Hughes that the "Good Man from Bodie" would'ent think of exchanging places under any consideration; the Ex. Com. have done well in selecting this route for me, am "getting used to it" rather like it.

W. CROWHURST.

While at Gold Run an invitation was extended to visit Dutch Flat. Hence on Sunday we spoke for Bro. Rev. J. J. Harris, addressed the Sunday-school, and in the afternoon organized a Band of Hope with a number of children and thirteen adults. Cook's literature is in abundant circulation, and "more to follow." Bro. Chas Uren, L. D. is chosen Supt. and is doing good general work, aided nobly by our good Grand Lodge Sister Sarah Pitman. Bro. Bro. H A Frost and his wife (formerly Sister H V Waggoner) are alive in the work, and their tables are loaded with temperance literature.

Down from the mountains we came to Virginia Schoolhouse, six miles from Marysville, and at the home of Sister Hollister found that the lodge is doing effective work, and that its 32 members constitute almost the entire community. People from Elizabeth and Wheatland and Sheridan were present and packed audiences was the result.

Next a visit to Yuba City Lodge found a few earnest very determined workers, who, in the midst of the opposition of another temperance society, were enlisted in a life warfare and resolved not to disband, but hold the field conjointly with the other society, and remain in existence as an agency through which the organized force of Good Templary may work in Yuba city as elsewhere.

Through a misunderstanding, no lecture was delivered in Yuba City; but we visited a number of our workers in Marysville, found Bro. Covilland in the midst of business, corresponding, planning for organizing new lodges, sending out literature, planning for and controling .two District Lectures, giving advice, studying our purposes and methods of action, etc., etc., etc. The Dist. Dep., Bro. Graves started for Texas, but before leaving, visited the Dist. Sec. office and informed him that the work must go on, and at the same time placed on the desk $100 to make it go on.

"Boycotting" and "bulldozing" have been used against Good Templars in this part of the state, but they still live.

Bro. Y. Dougherty conveyed us from Sheridan to Berry's school house, where we were met by a good audience, which, in spite of an empty stomach and tingling cold, caused indirectly by the breaking of a double-tree, listened with earnestness and enthusiasm and warmly invited us to come again although we have been twice to the same place.

On we came to Pleasant Grove formerly known by the exceedingly euphoneous sobriquet of Gougeeye, and found that accidently our postal card had contained the wrong date but we met with the lodge, initiated candidates, exemplified the work etc. A club of six subscribers to the RESCUE will be sent by the W. V. T., Sister Mary Trevathan.

THE Chronicle says: "The price of beer has been advanced on account of the scarcity of barley. During the past year the demand for California barley was very active, and large quantities were shipped to the East. This has had the effect of increasing the price of the grain in the local markets to such an extent that the brewers have in turn been compelled to raise the price of beer. The manufacture and consumption of beer is increasing largely in this city. It is claimed by the advocates of malt liquors that the use of beer is rapidly destroying the taste for the more fiery alcoholic liquids, and that in consequence intemperance is diminishing in San Francisco."

It is a very uncertain question how much the price of barley affects the price of beer. In New York, and other Atlantic cities, beer is about independent of barley; they can get all the drunk they want into it with a very little or no malt. The ever-ready glucose, and the brewers' drugs are no dout in as active service here. It is possible that the barley delusion is a mere cover for the cinch the brewers are going to make upon their poor, deluded, idiotic customers. If tea or coffee or sugar or fish was to be advanced 40 per cen t in price to enrich a rich monopoly, there would be a vigorous protest made, and many people would refuse to buy them at all; but the drunkard makers know that the poor deluded and demented fish, that have the brewers' hook in their mouths, will come obediently whither they are pulled, and their helpless victims would stand it like lambs to have the price of their pigswill doubled at the will of their masters; and would still have their beer if a condition was added that they should carry all day an open bottle of asafetida under their nose—in fact, most of them really do that now.

No one but a helpless, enslaved, idiot drunkard, a natural fool, or a depraved, wilful liar, asserts his belief in the claim made by the beer-swiners that the use of beer decreases intemperance. The Chronicle should be manly enough to tell people what it well knows, that beer here and everywhere else it has been tried has not only augmented the consumption of strong liquors, but has created an independent army of its own drunkards, the most besotted, filthy, brutal, depraved and swinish of all drunkards, and furnishing the largest number of thieves, tramps, murderers, suicides and paupers, and drunken ladies, drunken women, drunken children and betrayed girls. It is criminal to give currency to that nonsensical, utterly absurd falsehood so thoroly exploded—that beer is conducive to sobriety without adding the well known truth that it is the most devilish and debauching of all the snares that lead to drunkenness, crime and perdition.

OREGON.

DIED at Zena January 3, 1882, Brother J. E. Witten, a worthy and well-beloved member of Val Fontis Lodge No. 74, and one of the oldest and most efficient. The Lodge passed memorial resolutions expressive of their tenderest regard for the deceased as a citizen, a friend, and an honest and earnest worker in the cause of humanity.

MRS. S. H. McKune, of Amity, Oregon, writes that they have been compelled to close their reading-room for the present, and thinks Amity rather a discouraging field for such enterprises. But it should be remembered that there are a million more fields in this country equally discouraging: but for the courage and perseverance of the temperance workers, they would everyone become permanent synagogs of Satan. The only vestige of hope for the salvation of this country from the downward course to utter debauchery and utter perdition, is in the triumph of temperance and the destruction of the devil worship of the grogshop. Any and all schemes of reform or improvement that don't include first and last "death to rum" are nothing but compromises in Satan's interest and for the betrayal of mankind.

FIGHTING THE SALOONS.

WORK OF THE HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION IN OAKLAND.

A mass meeting of citizens was held in the First Con-Congregational church, Oakland, yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Home Protection Association, and the building, which will hold about 3000 people, was crowded. Among the speakers upon the platform were all the ministers of the denominational churches, as well as speakers from various parts of the State. Major Whittle and Dr. McDonald, although announced to be present were not. Addresses were delivered by Dr. Morse of East Oakland, Mr. Whitney, President of the Association, Rev. Mr. Todd, Dr. Sprecher, Judge Russel of Haywards, and Dr. McLean. The latter speaker referred in plain language to the evils arising from the carrying on of business on Sunday. In referring to the liquor trade, the speaker said: "There is not an election held in this State in which the liquor men do not largely figure and in which they are not pulling the wires for their own protection, and you all know it. I tell you that in the coming election the Home Protection Association intends to be a prominent political body, and it rests with you whether or not the association will win or lose. No candidate who will not pledge himself against Sunday trading, who will not pledge himself to enforce the Sunday law, will receive a vote from members of the Association.

The meeting was enthusiastic, and although the building was a church, the audience was frequently carried away by the enthusiasm of Dr. McLean and the earnestness of his address, and frequently broke out in loud applause. The Home Protection Association is growing rapidly in Oakland, and will, as the speaker said, form a strong political body in the coming campaign. The appeal of the speaker for funds for the association met with a liberal response, and the meeting adjourned to meet again on Thursday evening next at Medical College Hall, on Clay street.—Ex.

BRO. WEBB says he hears encomiums upon the RESCUE down South, save in the matter of classing Adventists as sympathizing with outlaws and bad characters, "because they dont believe the first day of the week should be called the Christian Sabbath." Now it is submitted that it is a very great injustice to twist the item which appeared in this paper, into that shape. Not a particle of objection is or was offered to the views any one may entertain as to which day should be the day of rest. Those who are strenuously in favor of the observance of Saturday, seem to have about as good ground of scriptural defense, as the disputants on either side of any contested doctrinal point. That is, there is no reason to doubt their most perfect sincerity and honesty in their seventh day doctrine, and surely no one can rise to a higher moral level than that of acting as he believes right.

There is no more cause of assault against the Adventist and Jew for keeping Saturday, or the Mahomedan for observing Friday, than there is against the Methodist for his Sunday observance. The last and meanest thing the RESCUE would think of, would be the utterance of a belittling whisper against any sect or individual on account of a conscientious belief or religious practice. But if any individual or group of individuals, Protestant, Catholic, Mormon or Mahomedan, shall ever interpret the bible so as to make it favor rumselling and debauchery and murder on Sunday or any other day, or on any pretense shall take a place as the party referred to did, by the side of the league of ruffians and outlaws, against shutting up the dens of vice and crime on Sunday or on any other day—it is right and fair to class them with the vile, unclean birds of the same feather—as was done simply and only, to the individuals who did just that thing. It was not hinted or supposed, that the sect of Adventists want rum sold on any day; if there are any of them who do want to champion the open Sunday grogshop, they, and they only, have a right to feel personally affronted at the action referred to.

We think our Lodge is doing finely considering the dry weather (as that affects all things more or less) and we can truly say we have members of all ages, from the little child of 2 years to the old man of 72 years whom we initiated a short time ago, and I have never witnessed a more solem and deeply joyful ceremony than the initiation of that generous old man who was his own worst enemy. We have opponents in our Sunday-school, but we intend to win them over if possible. The great trouble is that so many think that Temperance organizations ought to be run without money (just as if anything could be prized that was not paid for) or on a very cheap scale. We need a Band of Hope here very much and I hope if we are ever favored with another lecturer they will stir us upon that subject.

I see in last weeks RESCUE, our report on change of regalia which ought to have been reported long ago, it must have miscarried as we watched some time for it before writing the second report.

It is raining here now and we hope to have no more fear of that bugbear a dry season. Wish we could form a prohibition club here but see no chance as yet.

We intend having an entertainment at our earliest convenience, for that noble charity the Orphans Home.

Yours for Prohibition, MONT.

ABOUT LIES. However one may abhor the utterly infamous habit of lying, in earnest or in fun, much or little, white or black lies, one meets with an artistic marvel now and then in lying; a black, but sparkling gem; a jewel in a snakes head, that excites his admiration, not for the lie, but for the art and talent displayed in its execution, the coloring and the bold intrepidity of its conception. The Chronicle reports some remarks of the C. C. Advocate alluding to the disappointed hopes of reform in the Catholic church. The Monitor takes it up and its reply closes thus:

"So far as the immorality of the first reformers can be reflected in their characters, the reformers of the present are making history repeat itself. Everybody has heard of Gavazzi, the apostate priest, who fell about thirty years ago, and was pitched over the Pope's garden wall to rot with the other weeds in the heap. Well, this bright ornament of modern reformation was picked up by the Popery-hating portion of the Protestant community, elevated into the ranks of the modern reformers of Rome, and sent all over the country to proclaim Protestantism and denounce Popery. * * * The poor fallen priest was arrested in France last month and his fate is thus described in a French paper: 'Signor Gavazzi, who is described as an 'English preacher,' was yesterday sentenced by the Seine Tribunal to thirteen months' imprisonment for immoral behavior.' "

It is barely possible that some fellow who gave the name of Gavazzi was some time in this century arrested in France; it is possible that even Father Gavazzi has been arrested at the instance of jew-branding, heretic-burning heathens, for preaching the gospel. But it is eminently probable the whole paragraph is a ready manufacture of the Monitor on the inspiration of the moment. There are two salient points in that item, which denote the artistic talent and the independence of fettering conventional restrictions which distinguishes the Monitor. First, that the great Gavazzi should be charged with immoral behavior; second, that any immoral behavior could be a subject of imprisonment in France, or even of arrest. It was another bold stroke too, to locate Father Gavazzi in France at all last month, let alone in a French prison. It is presumed the quotations in the Chronicle are accurate, but the RESCUE is not privileged to see either of the papers referred to, and they may have been misquoted.

THE editor of a newspaper that has in part adopted phonetic spelling, received a postal card from an old subscriber in the country which read as follows: "I hev tuk your paper for eleven years, but if you kant spel enny better than you have been doin for the last two munths, you may jes stoppit."—Castroville Argus.

That is not at all an unlikely story. It is possible that some good speliers may have regretted or objected to the few cautious improvements in spelling adopted by the RESCUE, but if they did they never made a noise about it; those who were so shocked as to go round and defame the paper and howl and try to prevent people from subscribing to it on that account, were always those who could not write five lines correctly without frequent references to a big fetish dictionary full of falsehoods and silly absurdities and rotten fossilisms.

THE San Luis Obispo Tribune deserves compliment for the excellent appearance and valuable contents of its first January number, a handsome paper of 24 pages in an embellished cover. It has an extended early history and present description of its county, much other interesting information, and a well assorted miscellany of good reading. Hope it has had an extensive circulation and will make people better acquainted with that interesting county, its intelligent population and its talented Tribune. This notice comes late, because when received, the Holiday Tribune was supposed to be the New York paper of that name, and was laid aside till a favorable moment to spare for examination, which never occurred till now.

THE VOTERS of Maryland at last election defeated and routed in several counties the whisky candidates, put up by the liquor men. Men of large influence and formerly favorites of the people were rejected because they had opposed the local option law.

FOR RESCUE.

During last week I received a circular from our G. W. S. wanting to know if our lodge wont fall into line with other lodges, in allowing the Literature Committee of the R. W. G. L., to distribute our portion of the Dime Collection to the Freedmen of the South, and other weak jurisdictions. Our lodge for the reasons stated below, said—No.

We appointed a Committee to solicit donations, with the understanding that ¼ should go to the W. C. T. U. ¼ to the N. T. P. House, and ½ returned to us in temperance literature, therefore we cannot very well dispose of the ¼ which should come back to this community.

Then again; we of California are foremost in the Temperance work, as is evidenced by the good we accomplish, the number of lodges and membership we have, and the amount of temperance literature we take and read, and by the fact that we maintain our weekly RESCUE. We hold that if the lodges of other jurisdictions would only wake up, go to work, raise their per capita tax, so as to have some funds to work with, put lecturers in the field, support their various state organs, appoint Committees to solicit Dime Donations, and show the people that they meant what they preach, and were in earnest when they said, "intemperance was a damning curse," "the greatest wrong of all wrongs," they would have the respect of those who were not directly engaged in the work and would get means to carry on the war, without calling for help outside their own jurisdiction. If they want to accomplish any thing (I mean the Good Templars of other states) they must take off their coats, put their hands in their own pockets, as we do in California, go to work with a will and then they will accomplish something.

We of California have a greater battle to fight than any state in the union. We not only have to fight the liquor traffic as a business, but there are large amounts of capital invested in vineyards and grape growing, that say we must not succeed or we will destroy those vineyards and make them bankrupt. You let a young man be helped every time he gets into pecuniary trouble, by some one able to do so, and he will die some time waiting for help; but let him help himself, and he will never want help from anyone. So it is with those young G. Ls. of the Eastern states; they get embarrassed and discouraged and call on some older lodge for help instead of putting their hands in their pockets and helping themselves. Consequently they are dying all the time waiting for help.

This article may appear selfish, but it is not so; our acts in the past will show that selfishness has no place in the Good Templars of California; and if by appearing selfish we can only wake others to a sense of their duties and obligations as Good Templars, we will have accomplished a good work.

Yours in F. H. and C. N. E. MANNING.
Guerneville, Jan. 23, 1882.

A POWERFUL RULER.

Jay Gould to-day wields more power than any monarch on earth. The American people, distrustful of their own good sense, suspicious of the officers they elect to legislative and executive positions, will not permit the government which represents them to control the corporations; but they allow four irresponsible individuals the right to tax them at pleasure; and the business interests of the country are absolutely at their mercy. In every nation on the earth, the telegraph is a part of the postal service and is owned and controled by the government. In this country the telegraph is practically the property of one man, and he the most dangerous and unfit person for such a trust to be found anywhere. The owner of the telegraph is absolutely master of the press. Without the news, the journals of the day would be impotent. Jay Gould can issue the order and the offending journals become bankrupt. He is also in a position to misquote the markets of the world. A variation of one cent a bushel in grain, of one penny a pound in cotton, is a fortune in one day to him who can make that quotation. Jay Gould has the power to misquote on the markets of the world every product and security dealt in our exchanges. In any other country than the United States the whole nation would rise up and protest against such astounding authority being lodged in the hands of the purest of men.—New York Hour.

THE SONS OF T.—On the 12th day of July, 1882, The National Division of North America, composed of the leading representatives of the Order from the different States, Territories, and British Provinces, will meet in Annual Convention at Concord, New Hampshire, with the Most Worthy Patriarch, E. J. Morris, of Cincinnati, Ohio, presiding, and H. S. McCollum, Esq., of St. Catherines, Canada, Most Worthy Scribe. Recently, the Order has created a National Mutual Relief Society, for the protection of its members, which is meeting with great favor, and gives it additional permanent strength. F. M. Bradley, Esq., of Washington, D. C., is General Secretary.

The propriety of having a Mutual Aid Society is becoming apparent to all temperance organizations. It is a wonder indeed that our I. O. G. T. Mutual Aid does not make better progress. It can be made up to 1000 members easily by next October and if it is it will then be the cheapest, the safest and the best ordered insurance society in the world. Our Grand Lodge has never put any wild cat on the market nor has it ever failed in its enterprises. This last and most useful addition to its advantages would have doubtless been in a full tide of progress, but for some poisonous influence secretly and covertly circulated among members of the Order, first by secret enemies who would like to see the Order in the nethermost dungeon of perdition, and secondly because there are many members more interested in the success of other Orders and who are interested in old style insurance agencies. It may take all day to induce a customer to believe it his duty to take the pledge, to insure his life, to buy a horse, to subscribe for a newspaper, to take stock in anything—and after some eloquent genius has expended a whole day in working up the case to a favorable issue—one envious cautionary whisper of depreciation or defamation by a cunning opponent will very often capsize the whole days work. Or in other words one undoer with a very few words can counteract whole volumes of industrious effort made by doers to persuade people into the line of their best interests.

The following business men of Healdsburg and vicinity, are subscribers to the RESCUE, and are commended to the patronage of temperance people generally:

Prof. John Gamble; Litton'sSprings College.
J H Urich, M. D., Geyserville.
Judge A P Moore, Merchant, Geyserville.

ON TROUBLING PEOPLE.—It is gravely alleged that we are a dissatisfied people, and keep on troubling the church and decent people of every class. The charge is true. Instead of denying it we only intimate our purpose to trouble yet more in the sense complained of. The evil of our drinking customs has got to be put down. We cannot suffer the cry of "Peace, peace," whilst the hurt of our people is unhealed, or only healed slightly. If decent people wish rest, they can only get it by putting away strong drink. They will not get it in any other way. If the churches wish peace, they can get it by not only freeing themselves from all complicity with the evil, but going against it in the name and strength of the Lord. So long as the churches tolerate the traffic, so long must there be not peace but war, not smooth things but controversy and troubling action. "First pure, then peaceable." So the fanatics will keep on. They are sworn to destroy the traffic in the church and everywhere else, or die in the attempt. And they will not die, but live and declare the works of the Lord.—Glasgow Good Templar.

THERE is a strong pressure being made by the frends of machine politics, civil service deformity, one man state sovereignty, railroad and other monopolies, to get Mr. Sargent made Secretary of the Interior. It might be a good thing for the best interests of the country to have him there. There are two great enemies to the liberties and properties of the people and the best interests of the commonwealth, the Republican and Democratic parties. No progress in genuine prosperity can be made, except in spite of their determined resistance. The abolition of the greatest curse and tyranny and cruelty that ever oppressed any country can only be effected after the funerals of these two great blind confederacies, who are in firm covenant with the powers of evil, and bound hand and foot to countenance no reform whatever in any direction. Mr. Sargent when in Congress contributed largely to the demoralization and destruction of one of these parties, and now if he has a show in its cabinet for three and a half years he might assist materially in hiding it away in its little grave forever; then the friends of morality and justice would only have one spoils brigade to fight and conquer.———Some sparkling genius suggests Mr. Booth as an improvement upon Mr. Sargent as a cabinet officer. A good idea. It looks as if that cabinet will need one of its members to be a competent and experienced caterer for drinks; to preside over the sideboard and mix the hot beverages for the others. California would be honored as a wine growing state to furnish that officer. Altho Mr. Sargent made a grand public eulogy of the brandy and wine interests of this state in Washington a few days ago, and in an eloquent plea for their encouragement and extension sought to secure the sympathy of the manslaughter agencies, he would by no means be the best bar tender we could send to the cabinet.

IF a Judge undertakes to render a manifestly unjust decision, he has to flounder in a mud hole of inconsistency and folly to justify his action. So does every man, however learned, who attempts to prove that something is, which he knows is not. There is no case of this kind that places the idiot actor in such a pitiable role of despicable littleness as that of the Reverend who dishonors his brethren and his profession by trying to block the progress of the temperance reform with a "Thus saith the Lord" barrier. The Rev. J. W. Owen of England has recently come out in print to broom back the ocean as follows: "He objects to bind himself and others to the outcome of tetotalism, which is spiritual pride, pharisaical self-righteousness on account of not being as other men are." "A total abstainer cannot be called temperate, and vice versa." "Objects to running away from an evil rather than making it flee me." "If drink must be let alone because it is abused, everything else capable of abuse must be let alone, &c." "Dont want to mutilate his bible" (poor fellow, how he loves that bible!) "Objects to set himself above the wisdom, rule, teaching and actual example of the Savior;" that last will be abundantly believed; no doubt he is modest and dont aspire to go an inch above it.

But fool as he has made himself, he has made about the best argument that could be made, as John B. Felton did in his great buncomb anti local option argument, that had not a single sentence of commonsense or reason in it. There are 30,000 ministers or more in England and it is gratifying to know that only one of them is fool enough to exhibit thus publicly, his wretched ignorance and imbecility.

THE Spiritualistic mediums invited to earn a handsome premium offered by the Hanford Journal dont seem to have applied for it. A good friend and reader of the RESCUE objects to an item that appeared lately regarding the above. On looking it up it appears susceptible of modification. The allusion to fraud should not have been applied to spiritualists, but to the mediums who defraud the honestly disposed, well meaning spiritualists by their deceptive shingles all over town and their fraudulent advertisements in the Chronicle. By the admission of many very decided spiritualists, the profession of trance and writing and slate and table rapping mediums and pretended clairvoyants, abounds with the most brazen frauds and impostures. And the first instance has to be recorded of their ever having foretold any coming event, found any lost or missing person or property, or truly described any passing event at a distance of which they were unadvised beforehand. If they could do one of these things they could easily clear themselves of the charge of imposture and delusion. But they never could stand a scientific test or do anything more than impose upon those who blindly give themselves away to be sold without examining the evidences.

A postal card informs the RESCUE "My address is Santa Ana" but it dont say which one of the residents there sent the card. Dont be surprised; lots of excellent people do things like that, when they are in a hurry and thinking of several things at once.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

PATENTS

We continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, etc., for the United States, Canada, Cuba, England, France, Germany, etc. We have had thirty-five years' experience.

Patents obtained through us are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. This large and splendid illustrated weekly paper, $3.20 a year, shows the Progress of Science, is very interesting, and has an enormous circulation. Address MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors, Pub's. of SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, 37 Park Row, New York. Hand book about Patents free.

CONTRACTS TAKEN

To sow every town "knee deep" with Temperance Literature,

At 5 cents a head, without any labor on the part of society or individual, by means of our Class Papers and post-office delivery system.

We furnish papers (not tracts), send them out addressed, wrapped and mailed separately every month for a year to each individual, for 5 cents a year—or semi-monthly for 10 cents a year. Each paper contains 6,000 words, the matter of a $1.50 book in a year's issues, all for 5 cents—eighteen different papers to choose from, each for a special class of readers or special field of work. Thus for $5, one hundred persons can be reached every month for a year, and the individual or society be to no trouble distributing. Every one will subscribe if asked, when it is only 5 cents a year; or the expense to society for a whole town is trifling. Sample of each, and full particulars for 10 cents. We publish Band of Hope supplies including weekly paper, library, badges, pledges, certificates, pledge rolls, etc., so cheap that penny collections pay expenses. (sample outfit sent for 25 cents, full particulars free), also a whole library of $1.00 temperance story books at 2 cents each, (samples of three numbers for 10 cents). Temperance posters ½ c. each; samples of six for 5 cents; many other supplies, all at prices suited to general distribution. Address,

Subscribers this week Davisville 1; Clarksville; (H. R. Hughes) 2; Compton (F. Caseres) 7; Brentwood 2; Antioch 6; Newcastle 1; Elmonte 1; Churchill 1; Elk Creek 1; Smarstville (Mrs. L. D. Brown W. V. T.) 3; Modesto 1; Forest City 2; Jennings, Kansas 1; Bro. Webb 2; in all 31.

THE average production of Spanish vineyards is set down at 450,000,000 gallons of which the province of Catalonia produces one-fifth—the sub-provinces of Barcelona and Terragona aloneyielding in a good year more that 70,000,000 gallons.

THE Chicago Signal is fuller than ever of good instructive articles for old and young. It ought to have 1000 subscribers in California. Those who have not yet subscribed for it ot to begin with January 1882.

IN OAKLAND the jury disagreed as to whether keeping open the Opera Gardens and selling liquor on Sunday, clearly proven and admitted, was a violation of law. It stood 8 for conviction and 4 for acquittal. The jury were selected from 150 summoned.

IF by any chance Guiteau should succeed in getting a new trial and should be acquitted by any legerdemain on the plea of insanity, he will doubtless renew his demand to be appointed minister to Berlin. In that case the problem of the future will be whether President Arthur will send Guiteau to Berlin or Guiteau will send President Arthur on a mission to another planet.

BRO A. B. HOTCHKISS of San Diego Supt. reports his Band of Hope as now prosperous. It is safe to say that every other band in the state is just as prosperous that uses the same energy and activity in educating the membership as is employed in such as Excelsior and Guerneville. The badge wont make a flourishing band, but when that badge truly represents an interest and a training in the principles of the great temperance reform and indicates a real recruit to the active temperance army it has a grand significance. It ot to be quite as highly prized as the French cross of the legion of honor, a distinction for which so many men risked and lost their lives in savage warfare.

THE Vancouver Register gives extracts from 30 Kansas journals, every one of which declares the prohibitory law is a success and a blesslng. One contains a note from a doctor who sends to a neighboring town for whisky for a patient far gone in consumption "who needs it badly." Perhaps whisky will not kill off a consumptive patient far gone, much sooner; but the inability to procure it for medicine would doubtless result in a far less mortality among the patients of the fossilized class of practitioners; a circumstance that has hitherto been overlooked among the advantages of prohibition.

THE Mirror and the Daily Times of Los Angeles are published by Yarnell, Caystile and Mathes, and are most worthy of support. Those who desire to send to their Eastern friends accurate reports of the condition and possibilities and prospects of the Southern counties, should send them these papers in place of frightening respectable settlers from this state by sending them the trashy journals which advocate the wine and brandy trade, and the consequent pauperization and utter debauchery, which that trade has, in all the past, visited upon every country that tolerated it. Temperance people at home too, should patronize clean, decent papers, and should demand the riddance of the obscenities which disgrace so many of our leading journals.

WEATHER CHART for Februrary. More than usual vigilance will be required in this month of 1882 to avoid getting entrapped into reading long articles in the newspapers commencing with such titles as "New Comet," "Most Startling Revelations," "Assassination of Bismark," "New Translation of the Bible," "The Jews returning to Palestine," etc.. Always look at the other end first and see if it is not a sell about a diabolical quack medicine. Panama will be entirely free from snow this month and Mr. Lesseps may as well countermand his order for 2,000 pairs of snowshoes for his canal diggers. South of Santa Cruz there will be copious rains in this month, but it may be a good way south.

"Several saloons in the city of Portland which could not get licenses under the new ordinance have been closed out by the police and the proprietors arrested.

The Oregon State Temperance Alliance will convene at the city of Salem, on Wednesday, Feb. 15, 1882, at 11 o'clock, A. M., in the M. E. church. All transportation lines will make reductions to delegates.

Col. J. T. Long, of Kentucky, a noted temperance lecturer and an orator of rare eloquence, is now in Oregon working in the cause of temperance. Col. Long is also an ardent woman suffragist. He organized a new lodge of Good Templars at Portland last Thursday evening, to be called Prohibition Lodge, which has eighty-four charter members."

It is presumed there are not many noted temperance lecturers nowadays that are not ardent woman suffragists.

"LIQUOR wont hurt you if you let it alone." Capt. Reynolds of this city and his wife and his son and his family have always let it alone. But the other day the son of Capt. Reynolds was murdered in Seattle, by two graduates of the grogshop and thief den, and his young wife, who also let liquor alone, was added to the other million or so of widows who let liquor alone, and yet liquor has slain their husbands and spread over all the rest of their lives an excruciating load of agony and mourning. The vigilants, who summarily hanged the murderers at Seattle, made one mistake; they should have hung up the rumsellers also, who trained the murderers and were themselves by far the most guilty criminals.

RAILROADS.—The New York Tribune thinks people ought to be satisfied and not complain of the conduct of the railroads—on the ground that in the recent war of competition they have allowed the people to save 100 million dollars in the reduced freights and fares, which was as good as making a present to them of that amount. That is very lopsided reasoning: very tipsy logic. Whenever the RESCUE shall reduce its rates of subscription and advertisements, so that its patrons shall make a saving of 100 millions in a year on the reduction, they may just make up their minds that it has been robbing them and they could not help themselves. But when the RESCUE and its fellow workers shall show by figures pretty soon, that they have induced a saving of two thousand millions a year to the nation by having their advice adopted, and the liquor leprosy destroyed, there will be no charge of previous dishonesty, but the world will acknowledge that neither railroads nor any other interest can at all make a country prosper that tolerates the grogshop.

THE FOLLOWING is a copy of a leaflet sent out with the Seal and address of Santa Clara Lodge; it is suggested as a good idea for other lodges to follow; and then to be sure to convince their new recruits that the lodge is faithfully following out the purpose it professes to be its guiding motive.

"Santa Clara Lodge sends a kindly greeting, and with your permissien would say a few words in its own behalf. It has worked its way from a small beginning, has overcome all obstacles and difficulties and has planted its banner in Santa Clara, to stay till it shall have accomplished its mission and driven intemperance from our town. But to do this we must gather in all Workers of Temperance, and all friends of sobriety; we must enlist good citizens under our banner, and by working together we can soon take our town for temperance. We ask you then to come and help us—come and fight with us in the good work. You have friends with whom you have influence; we want to see those friends in our Lodge, but you must come first, do not withhold your influence; your friends need your example and we need your aid for the enemy is strong and mighty. The cries of the widows and orphans are going up to Heaven from all over the land; the curse of strong drink is on our country. We appeal to you in the name of humanity to come and help us fight this great evil. By order of the Lodge."

"THE retirement of Mr. James from the Postmaster-Generalship is one of the most unfortunate results of the present system of civil service. He was selected by Garfield as the one man in the country who, by actual knowledge and skill, was most competent to take charge of this great National department. He had made so many improvements in the New York office that it was naturally inferred he would be equally useful in Washington. He proved himself so in digging up the star-route frauds. But all his efficiency was of no avail, because he was not a stalwart and a politician. He was forced to get out of the Cabinet, and his son-in-law, an equally efficient man, will be crowded out of the New York Postoffice to make way for a political worker. James' successor, ex-Senator Howe of Wisconsin, never did anything brilliant in his political career, and has no special fitness for his new position, which he owes entirely to the fact that he worked for Conkling in the Senate.—Geauga Leader.

What higher qualification could be presented for the Postmaster Generalship than a blind obedience to Mr. Cataline Conkling?

HYMN.

FROM THE GERMAN.

God is my light! His holy beams
Have pierced the clouds of dark despair,
And shed around me precious gleams
Of heaven and bliss eternal there,
Its splendor radiates the day—
Of joy too pure for mortal sight;
The gloom of sorrow drives away,
God is my light! God is my light!

God is my Savior, oh, my soul!
Dread naught, thy help is ever nigh;
Faithful he doth thy thoughts control,
And guards thee with a father's eye.
His aid omnipotent is yours—
He bears thee to the highest edge—
Thou shalt not sink—he still assures—
Thy holy Father's word's the pledge.

God is my shield! my breast-plate strong!
He only can protect from harm;
He bears me swiftly through the throng,
Of earthly ills, with outstretched arm.
His is the power, he but commands,
It is performed—he wills—'tis done—
Alone, omnipotent he stands,
And shields me with his mighty Son.

God is my theme of praise! to him
My hymn of glory richly swells;
His triumph is my joyous theme,
Upon a Savior's love it dwells.
Join, angels, join! His glories sing!
Elected choir, your voices raise,
Shout loud hosannas to our King—
God is our holy theme of praise!—Sel.

HISTORIC LANDMARKS.

BY B. W. RICHARDSON, M. D., F. R. S.

I.—ALCOHOL AND ITS PURCHASERS.

First of all I remember that twenty-one years ago it was a very common notion—one of the most common of all notions—that wine, beer and spirits were things quite distinct from water. The common impression was that when these things were taken they were distinctive agents of themselves, that there was no water connected with them, according to ordinary acceptation, and even thru our better classes this view was constantly expressed. A gentleman sitting at table would tell you that it was the best champagne he provided, no watery stuff, and that he had given $35 a dozen for it. You were under this delusion if you took this man's word, that this was no watery beverage, but something different. You found the poor man at the inn smacking his lips and saying, "This is no water; it is good malt and hops." So a person taking a glass of spirit which burnt his lips and throat, thot it all the better the hotter it was, "because," he would say, "it is furthest removed from water." There is no doubt a great advance in the public knowledge on this one topic. We, as men of science, have so impregnated the public mind with the facts of this question, that there are very few who do not know that this which is sold as beer, and wine and spirit is always largely water. The bottle of champagne which costs so much per dozen, when it comes up for investigation, what does it turn out to be? It turns out to be a fluid of which, if you take one hundred pints, ninety pints are water—a large sum, $35 per dozen, to pay for a fluid of this kind. If you turn to the beer which the man is drinking at the inn you find the same story. I remember about twenty-one years ago Mr. Ray wrote a very remarkable and able book on the malt tax. His idea was that the Government was greatly defrauded, not by the great brewers, but by the retailers, who sometimes charge their beer with water, thus reducing the tax. He went about London from day to day collecting at various places bottles of beer, which he brot to my laboratory for analysis. I remember the result of that inquiry was to find that as a general fact (sometimes there was a little excess of spirit) that beer sold conveyed to the man who bot it from ninety-four to ninety-five parts in the one hundred of simple water. So with regard to spirit. In sherry there will be three parts of water to one of spirit; in brandy, the strongest spirit, fifty of water to fifty of spirit; and now I think, thru the length and breadth of the land, we are making an impression, and those who are not engaged in this question of scientific research can use this argument as forcibly as we can, and perhaps more so, that people who think they are paying these large sums of money for something exceedingly choice are after all unwittingly, and in a very unfortunate way, water buyers and water drinkers.

BROTHER GARDNER ON ELECTIONS.

The Detroit Free Press regularly reports the imaginary proceedings of "the Limekiln Club," Bro. Gardner, President. They contain some admirable hits, and are what Artemus Ward would have called "a high moral show." To oblige the friends of constitutional spelling, Bro. Gardner's spelling is amended for the RESCUE. The President opens:

"Bro. Telescope Perkins, I saw you at 8 o'clock on the evening of the election day; you were slued, as the white folks say; you were full of glory; you felt you had saved the country; your breath smelt horribly and you were jumping up and down and hooping."

"But lots of white folks were doing the same, sir."

"Oh yes, certainly. You an ex-slave, unable to read or rite, were only following the rest. I saw curius things that day. Citizens who would not swallo ten drops of whisky to save life, voted for men who have sold poison over their bars for years. That was saving the country!

I saw men, who would turn a servant girl out of doors on a wintry nite, if tha herd a scandal about her; I saw them go up and vote for men who rent from two to six houses to women of bad character. That was going it strait!

I saw men whose wives are braking their harts over the course of their wayward sons, walk up and vote for candidates who are in cahoots with blacklegs, and are steady patrons of gambling houses. That was the glory of politics!

Christian men who pray against vice and weep over the wickedness of society, voted for candidates whose private lives are one long nite of debauchery and corruption. That was standing by the party!

I saw ministers of the gospel vote for drunkards, libertines and outlaws. That was supporting principle!

I saw the honest, decent men of Detroit arrayed on one side and the thugs, thieves and loafers on the other—and the honest, decent men were swept away like chaff before a gale. That illustrated the buties of the elective franchise!

That same nite I heard aldermen bawling like mules, because their favorite candidate had pulled thru with the help of whisky and money. Refined citizens who would not let you in at the front door, rolled in the mud that night like hogs. Men who have sons to bring up, met that nite and shook hands and rejoiced over the election of candidates who kno the way into every saloon and poker room in Detroit. I dont blame you, Bro. Perkins, for following the example of the leading white folks. No sir, go sit down, and feel proud you are so near being an eminent citizen."

THE LEAG OF OUTLAWS.

Are still employing their despicable spy to entrap respectable citizens into selling some trifle on Sunday and causing their arrest. Mr. Smith, of the San Francisco Cash Grocery, 519 Post street, who keeps strictly closed on Sunday, was induced to go into his store on a recent Sunday and oblige the spy of the outlaws with a bottle of blacking, and was fined in court $5. It is presumed that is the only temperance man that they could entrap into arrest for a Sunday sale, and it is hoped that as the only temperance man charged with this crime was fined, all the rumselling outlaws who are found guilty will be fined also—unless we have "law" for the temperance people, who need no law, and no law for the rummies who are the only ones for whom law is necessary.

If the temperance people ever do cause the arrest of ruffian outlaws for selling liquor to little boys, for keeping a den without license, for violating every law of the land, for committing all the crimes of the calendar, there is a pious outburst of newspaper indignation at the espionage, the informing, the stirring up of strife, the injury to business; but when a self-confessed banditti of conspirators against law and decency and morality, and especially against every phase and particular of the public welfare—when they institute a crusade of espionage and entrap well-meaning citizens into an infraction of law, and have them arrested—the independent dailies dare not utter a protest, but penitentially ask with nose to the ground, what next is the will of our beloved master? His slaves await.

MR. SPURGEON ON SANCTIMONIOUS LIQUOR SELLERS.

"Are there not to be found in the world men whose very calling is contrary to the spirit of true Godliness? I did know and may I never know again, such a one—apparently most devout and gracious, who was a deacon of a church, and passed round the communion cup, and yet over the worst drinking-dens in the town where he lived, where the lowest harlots congregated, you would see the man's name, for he was a brewer to whom the houses belonged—houses which had been purposely adapted at his expense for abodes of vice and drunkenness. He took the profits of a filthy traffic, and then served at the Lord's Table. God save the man that can pander to the devil, and then bow down before the Most High. Persons are to be found who earn their money by ministering at the altars of Belial, and offer a part of it to the Lord of Hosts. Can they come from the place of reveling to the chamber of communion? Will they bring the wages of sin to the altar of God? He who maketh money over the devil's back is a hypocrite if he lays his cankered coin at the Apostles' feet. 'Thy money perish with thee?'"—Alliance News.

OBEY THE LAW.

The Index is in favor of enforcing the observance of the Sunday Law, and we regret exceedingly to see citizens band themselves together with the avowed object of violating and defying it. If public sentiment demands the amendment or repeal of the law it will doubtless be done; and let it be fought out on that line. But while the Sundaw law remains on our statute books, let it be obeyed the same as other laws. Wanton and defiant violation of it will breed contempt for law in general. The railroad corporations refuse to pay their share of taxes for the support of the state and county government, and by so doing, violate and defy the laws enacted by the people. And we venture the assertion that there is not a member of the so-called "League of Freedom" who has not bitterly denounced the railroad companies for the lawless course they have pursued; yet, our friends of the League place themselves in the awkward position of advocating the violation of a law, because they do not happen to like it. Were such principles to prevail, anarchy with its bloodshed and reign of terror would result; neither government nor society could exist. The laws of the land must be obeyed. If any of them be unjust, oppressive or bad, wipe them out by legislation; but so long as we have them, let them be faithfully observed. All crime is the result of law breaking.—Salinas Index.

INHERITED.

The poison of sins with which men and women taint their flesh and blood will reappear in their descendants somewhere. A striking example of this inevitable curse is related by Rev. Dr. Deems, of New York, in which the mark left by a drunkard's thirst leaped over two generations, to reappear in the third. Dr. Deems says, "a young gentleman of sincere character, a member of the church of which I am pastor, gave me the followihg experience:"

He said that, to the best of his knowledge, not a drop of any sort of intoxicating liquids had ever passed his lips. He knew it had not, so far back as he can remember in his childhood. He has, therefore, no temptation to drink from either a strong habit, or a love for the taste of wine and other liquor; and yet he maintains a daily warfare with the appetite.

He never passes a saloon without a strong inclination to enter. He has to reign himself up, and draw himself away, not to enter and take his first drink. This is not an occasional or spasmodic feeling; it is the one regular daily conflict of his life.

My friend gave graphic descriptions of one or two such pitched battles when the desire became almost strong enough to overpower his will. I did not ask him about his father, but did say to him:

"Was your grandfather addicted to strong drink?',

He said, "No, neither he nor my father; but my great-grandfather was a habitual drunkard'"—Ex.

FROM J. F. SHEA, Bath.

Looking over our nation's history for twenty years, under republican rule, presents a sad record so far as the temperance cause is concerned.

With a temperance plank in its platform in some states it has, as a national organization, allowed rum to stalk thruout the land.

It was not enough that the traffic which is fostered as a source of revenue, should fire the brain of an assassin who took from us a Lincoln—but a Garfield has followed. The warning is plain. May each one vote as he prays and our future be glorious.—Ex.

CALIFORNIA WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION.

Quarterly meeting held at 1st Congregational Church, Oakland, Jan., 24 and 25th. The meeting opened at 2 P. M. A short Bible reading was given by the Sec. from Nehemiah 4th chapter. At 2,30 business meeting called to order by the President Mrs. P. D. Browne. The first subject for discussion was how to influence the Press. Statement was made that the Press has been universally courteous and we require committees who will assume the responsibility of furnishing articles. A lady said that the drinking custom among the women of the better classes exists to an alarming extent and a long discussion as to the best method of reaching the ladies followed. Among the middle and lower classes of women beer drinking is very common. A saloon keeper stated to one of our ladies that he sold beer to a thousand women in one week. Mrs. Abbot spoke of individual effort. In Boston a lady was appointed in each church to speak once a month before the Sunday-school—Mrs. Spencer of Grass Valley stated in that place temperance received its full share of time in the Sabbath-schools; that the Union also furnished articles for the weekly press and are doing an excellent work among the children.

As a counter attraction to the saloons they fitted up a gymnasium for the young men; and that the temperance sentiment of the place is so strong, the young men are ashamed of saloon associates. The tobacco influence was spoken about and a lady stated that a wholesale tobacconist of San Francisco told her that at the time of the great temperance reform in Petaluma three years ago he passed through there and sold a large stock of tobacco to the saloons. When he went back in ninety days to collect his bill and sell a new lot he found they had the old stock on hand and he was unable to make any sales. This shows the close connection between alcoholic drinks and tobacco.

A letter was read from the San Jose "Union." That Society has rented a suit of rooms on a prominent business street; has a lunch room and free reading room. Also conducts a noon prayer meeting and on Sabbath afternoons Gospel Temperance meetings at its rooms. A fine kindergarten for poor children has been started and a competent teacher engaged to manage the school. In reply to a request to ascertain the jail commitments caused by alcohol, they report two-thirds of the prisoners are brought there through drink. The Society now numbers 90. Watsonville reports an increase in members and they state they have closed all the saloons upon the Sabbath and keep them closed; are also doing a good work with the children.

Alameda Union is gaining in numbers and influence and is actively engaged in introducing prizes for temperance essays in the schools. Placerville was unable to report on account of sickness of its Sec., but the Sec., of the State Society was there in Dec., and the few members are in earnest and will do a good work in the future as they have in the past.

A splendid report was read from the San Francisco W. C. T. U. The Coffee House supports itself, pays expenses of Free Reading Room and last month put $53. in bank for the society. Gospel meetings are held every Tuesday evening in the free reading room, 631 Sacramento St., under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., by the Assistant Sec., Mr. True. Many have risen for prayers and some have accepted Christ as their savior. On Friday evenings Mr. McGee holds gospel temperance meetings in the same room and is doing much good. Mrs. T. K. Noble, President of the S. F. Union, has done very effective work in managing this society and is constantly planning new work that is successfully carried into effect. The Petaluma society has ceased to publish its paper but still conducts the coffee and reading rooms. Oakland Union has been working quietly and is very much in earnest in regard to renewed effort in the juvenile department. Other auxiliaries failed to report. Modesto has given up its organization. After discussion in regard to methods of work and report in regard to the Berkeley liquor suit growing out of the law that no liquor shall be sold within a mile of the University, a matter in which our President Mrs. Browne has taken an active interest, adjourned to Wednesday. Meeting opened on Wednesday with a Bible reading by the Sec., from Isaiah 7th, 8th and 17th verses. The President being absent, Mrs. P. R. Coxhead, one of the Vice-Presidents, presided. It was voted to prepare a tract addressed to Sabbath school teachers. Mrs. Coxhead and Mrs. Potter were appointed a committee to prepare the tract. Mrs. Browne and Mrs. J. B. McChesney were appointed a committee to wait upon the Regents and consult about the law in regard to the sale of liquor within a mile of the University. Mrs. Thos. Varney presented a few thoughts upon "Is it possible to furnish any substitute for alcoholic liquors?" Mrs. Sadler, Dr. T. Annette Buchel, Mrs. Spencer and several others discussed the subject ably. An excellent paper was prepared by Mrs. Damon. The state Sec. gave a full account of the prize effort in San Francisco. A paper was read by Mrs. Spencer, of Grass Valley that brought out a full discussion of juvenile work. It is impossible to give a correct idea on paper of the power and influence of these meetings. Papers presented are always full of ideas and the discussions following them lead to a practical work. We all wish we could give more and do more for this cause, that is, the cause of Christ. The object in view being the salvation of souls. We are, however, rewarded a hundred fold in our own spiritual lives for the least effort in the Master's cause and agree with Mrs. Griswold, the Sec. of the Alameda Union, who writes:

"The smallest effort put forth with faith and prayer shall not be fruitless, but blessing those over whom the loving word or deed or prayer were sent to brood, it will also return and nestle like a silver dove of peace in the heart of the bestower."

M. E. CONGDON, Sec.

FACTS ABOUT WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

BY J. HOOKER. CONN.

Abraham Lincoln says, "I go for all sharing the priveliges of the government who assist in bearing its burdens, by no means excluding women." Benjamin Franklin said: "Freedom consists in having an actual share in the appointment of those who frame the laws. They who have no voice nor vote in the election of representatives do not enjoy liberty, but are absolutely enslaved to those who have votes and to their representatives." Senator Anthony of Rhode Island says: 'If women are fit to rule in monarchies, it is difficult to say why they are not qulified to vote in a republic." Bishop Simpson (M. E. Church) says: "I believe that the great vices in our large cities will never be conquered until the ballot is put into the hands of women." Mrs. H. B. Stowe says: "I think the state can no more afford to dispense with the votes of women in its affairs than the family." George William Curtis says: "Women have quite as much influence in good government as men, and I have never heard or read of any satisfactory reason for excluding them from the ballot-box." Gov. Talbot of Mass. in his message said: "The claims of women to the right of suffrage have too firm a basis in natural justice to be thrust lightly aside." Rev. George W. Boardman, a leading Baptist clergyman of Philadelphia, says: "America's salvation lies under God in America's women. It is precisely because I desire to conserve our glorious past that I plant myself on the platform of woman suffrage." Gov. McCook of Colorado says in his message with regard to woman suffrage. "The logic of a progressive civilization leads to that as an inevitable result." Ex-Senator Lyman Trumbull of Illinois has, in a public address, announced himself as in favor of it. Bishop Bowman (M. E. Church) has declared for it. (The Springfield Republican remarks that "such converts as he are worth making.") Bishop Haven of the same church, who has just died, was long one of its most earnest advocates. The Democrats of Kansas not long ago, at their State Convention, passed a resolution that "the enfranchisement of women is, in our judgement, most reasonable, and cannot longer be justly postponed." The Houston Union says editorially: "Woman suffrage is certain to come, and we regard it as the flower and crown of free government." Pages could be filled with such citations.

And if respectable names are any evidence of respectable thinking, we may mention in addition to those referred to, the late Chief Justice Chase, the late Vice-President Wilson, the late Senator Benj. Wade, Senator Hoar of Massachusetts, who is a very earnest advocate of the cause, ex-Gov. Clafflin of Massachusetts, and the late Samuel Bowles of the Springfield Republican, than whom no sounder political thinker lived, (he was an advocate of it in his paper and a vice-president of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Society,) and Hon. George W. Julian, who has most ably advocated it in the North American Review; and in this State, the following among many; Rev. Dr. Cummings, late President of Wesleyan University, who was for a while president of our State Association; the late Ward Cheney of South Manchester, than whom no more practical man lived; the late Charles Cheney, Prof. C. E. Stowe; Hon. Timothy M. Allyn of this city; Hon Charles Atwater of New Haven; Geo. A. Hickox, editor of the Litchfield Enquirer; besides several prominent clergymen. A paper was signed by a large number of the members of the last General Assembly (1879) declaring themselves in favor of a bill giving tax-paying women the right to vote in towns and cities. Among the leading signers were many members of both houses of the legislature.

It is certain that woman suffrage is to prevail, and that thruout the country, and before many years. Is it not more for the honor of our State to be early in the adoption of it, at least in the limited way proposed, than to come in after all the other States? In future years it will be a record that one's children will not be proud of, to have voted against it.

HOME PROTECTION.

The time for all talk and no work has passed. Less talk and more work is now in order. The following is from a letter of Rev. A. J. Jutkins, Lexington, Ky. chairman of the ex. com. of the Lake Bluff Convocation.

This is a movement looking to an organization from the bottom up. It is to organize clubs in the towns and wards to work for "Righteous law, and its faithful execution." In many towns such a club would need only to combine the temperance men in one organization, to control the politics of the township, and cast a heavy vote in county and district elections. In others they would be in a minority in their town, but with the aid of other towns might be a majority in the county or district. The Township Club reported to, and cooperating with county and state headquarters is the grand unit of political force. The thoroly organized few, are stronger always, than the unorganized many.

I send in connection with this what will more perfectly set forth the facts. The great and strong men and women in the Northwest, especially are in this movement. We believe it has merit so intrinsic and so great that there only needs an adequate delineation to be seen to be the want of the hour. The principles of the party are identical with those of the Prohibition Party; but the methods differ. We begin in the towns, seeking to organize and control them. That party made its effort at electing United States officers.

R. W. Nelson, 106 Franklin St. Chicago, is at present the organ of the movement. His paper, the Liberator, does good service for us here in the North west. All my affiliations are with the Reformers whose center is at Lake Bluff near Chicago. This strong group embracing the foremost and most influential of the lecturers and workers in this country are a unit in this effort to combine all organizations in that last action which completes all other efforts and converts the piers into a bridge, viz. righteous law, faithfully executed. It is useless to look for this without a party committed to it, which shall enact the law, interpret the law, and through its own officers execute the law. We who are well informed tremble for Kansas, because there is not, (unless it is now growing up) a party pledged to maintain its prohibitory law.

Our idea is, organize the towns, no matter how few temperance men there may be; let those few organize in every town. Then do the best they can. Where they can elect their own men, do that; where they can only hold a balance of power, do that: and where they are only a group of political Protestants be that and wait. Yours, A. J. JUTKINS.

CHAUTAUQUA.—A family away off in Canada to whom the RESCUE goes, has contributed three of its members to the Chautauqua circle. Altho they all attend the art school daily and have a number of other daily engagements, they express themselves highly pleased with the Chautauqua course, deem it of great importance and are going to see it out. It would be a glorious thing for several thousand people in California to thro up the card table and spend the time in Chautauqua study.

A policeman in Topeka, Kansay, recently said: "Our business is done for. Since the saloons have been closed, there is nothing to do."—Ex.

GLEANINGS.—Lockford Lodge No. 115 of San Joaquin County, had a well attended and interesting open meeting and public installation of officers at the close of their regular meeting on the evening of the 1st and the L. D., Dr. D. J. Locke reports the Lodge as having commenced the new quarter under favorable auspices.....Igo Lodge No. 155 of Shasta County shows a marked improvement in numbers and influence as reported by the L. D. Bro. E. L. Ballou who gives Col. Goulding credit for having contributed largely toward this desirable consummation. At the close of one of the public meetings 16 persons signified their desire to unite with the Order and 14 of them were initiated at a subsequent meeting.....Headlight Lodge No. 120 San Francisco, recently removed to a new location. Cambrian Hall 1133 Mission Street, held its initial and installation meeting in its new hall on the 1st inst. on which occasion four candidates were initiated and one admitted by card, all of which the L. D. Bro. Wm. Swabel construes to be a good augury for its future.....Success Lodge No. 366 of Knights Landing Yolo Co. presents its returns, showing the largest membership yet attained by it, 74 and the L. D., Bro, M. C. Winchester gives the assuranee that the "Lodge was never doing better".....The Lodge recently organized at Lathrop by Mrs. E. P. Stevens Lathrop No. 373, according to the L. D. Bro. W. S. Reynor, is prospering. He reports the Lodge as having made quite a stir in the community and as meeting with considerable opposition, especially from the six saloons of the village of 200 inhabitants. He adds "if the opposition continues we are sure to make a success of it."

NO WINE samples at the Citrus Fair, is the purport of a request from the Good Templars of Riverside, made to the Citrus Fair Directors.

Lecturers' Reports.

The Grand Lecturers employed by the Grand Lodge I. O. G. T., of Cal., are as follows:

Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, Col. C. N. Goulding, Elder J. W. Webb, Hugh R. Hughes, and Rev. W. C. King.

C. N. GOULDING.

I lectured in Anderson the 27 of January, and on the 28th went to Pinkney (near Gass Point) where I lectured that evening. Again on Sunday morning. Where the people come from is still a mystery to me. To use a familiar phrase, "the woods were full of them." The meetings were held in the house of Dr. Davidson, and not less than 100 were present at each meeting; obtained a large number of names for a lodge, and return there tomorrow Sat, Feb. 4th, and complete the organization. Sunday evening the 29th, and Monday 30th, lectured in Cottonwood to large audiences, thus completing my work in Shasta County. I have had very efficient aid and help from our own order and from Revs. Waterman, Bartley and Kidder ,and am under many obligations to the press for kind notices of my work. Nearly 100 additions have been made to our order, and a general good feeling evinced for temperance.

When in November last I received orders to visit the counties of Siskiyou, Trinity and Shasta, I wondered why such a trip was arranged for the winter months, and questioned the propriety of visiting those counties, on a "temperance mission" in winter; but as the trip has been made, I can look back and say that upon the whole the order has gained thereby. I have traveled 889 miles, delivered 55 lectures, to audiences numbering in the aggregate nearly 7,000 people, collected over $300 and held the banner aloft as well as circumstances would admit; of the 889 miles traveled, 859 have been over roads that I will not attempt to describe; at times on foot, horseback, by stage, private conveyance, in sleds, etc., etc., and in fact learned many things not known before; have been treated everywhere with kindness and been favored with large audiences. The day is not far distant when we shall "capture" the three counties named. Such hard work in all kinds of weather, has about exhausted my energies; and I feel impelled to ask for a few days leave of absence." Something not asked for or had, since May last.

My appointments in this (Tehama County) are as published; after this comes Butte County, on my list—am now getting down in the land of churches. I think I have seen five or six churches in the counties (above). As an old gentleman in Etna remarked to me, "Stranger, we dont go much on churches you bet." No use of betting, I take his word for it. A better day is dawning for these Northern Counties; they are rich in minerals, but poor in this world's goods; but possessed of "large hearts" and generous far beyond their means. I hope some day, to visit them again, and return thanks in behalf of the order, for many favors conferred.

Red Bluff, Feb. 4, 1882.

W. CROWHURST.

At Pleasant Grove, at invitation of Rev. Bro. Gregory of Roseville, we addressed an interested audience. Held two degree meetings, exemplified the unwritten work, and at night addressed a large and enthusiastic audience. This Lodge is building up, and is composed of excellent material.

From Lincoln came Bro. Girard K. Peters and conveyed us in his buggy to the home of Bro. S. R. Elder, preparations having been made by Sister May Brewster, a degree meeting held and the work exemplified. At the request of Bro. Ronald, principal of the Public School and W. C. T. of the Lodge, we addressed the children, and next day organized Triumph Band of Hope, Bro. G. K. Peters, Supt. Rousing, enthusiastic meetings were held, many names were obtained, and "saloon-keepers are scared." One left the meeting and was loudly applauded on his retirement. Mr. Gladding, proprietor of the extensive potteries, whose son is ex-Lodge Deputy, joined, and with his foreman and wife, will give influence to the work here. We were very kindly treated and can always remember Lincoln pleasantly.

At Sheridan, we found the lines very distinctly drawn. Our members there are terribly in earnest —no time for trifling where the saloon traffic burn barns and residences, and poisons cattle. Two rousing meetings, largely attended were enlivened with great enthusiasm. A Justice of the Peace came here from a neighboring town to try violators of the Sunday Law, and managed to clear them every time. When the burning took place, his services were asked again, but the citizens, headed by the Good Templars let him know that if he valued his life, he had better return as quickly as he came. The freight train coming along about that time proved a very fortunate opportunity for him to shake the dust off his feet against Sheridan. The Band of Hope held a special meeting for our entertainment here, and made a beautiful appearance with every member clothed with a scarlet and gilt scarf, had an excellent programme and rendered their parts well. Their Supt., Bro. Y. Dougherty deserves great credit for his energy and patience with these little ones.

On to Roseville, met and greeted by Sister Pratt, L. D., conducted to a hall, we found a large audience to witness the installation of officers. A lecture on "Our Origin" was well received and nine propositions sent in to a meeting of the Lodge after the public meeting. On Sunday forenoon, we lectured to a large audience, in the afternoon organized Roseville Band of Hope. Sister Pratt, Supt., and found many earnestly interested in the children of the town. Balance of work in this place will appear in next report.

Roseville, Placer Co., Feb. 6, 1882.

H. R. HUGHES.

On the 21st, at Hill Top, Sacramento Co., had a fair audience, and a good meeting; the lodge is not so strong as it once was, but a few families like the Addingtons, Hurleys and Heaths will "hold the fort" in spite of every discouragement. At 2 P. M. next day went back to Carbondale and completed the organization of Starlight Lodge, with 25 charter members. That evening, at Forest Home, secured names enough for a lodge, which the storm prevented us to organize the following evening.

The 24th, at Latrobe found the school-house being painted, and no place to meet. Went back to Forest Home and organized Forest Home Lodge, with 16 charter members, Orion Finch, W. C. T., night of meeting, Saturday.

The 26th, drove 16 miles through the rain to this place; no meeting on account of storm; the heaviest of the season.

The 27th, had a fair meeting here; got 27 names for a lodge, and come back to-morrow afternoon from Shingle Springs to complete organization and confer degrees.

Our old mining counties bid fair to take the front rank in temperance work, and become the "banner counties" in Good Templarism in California.

Cordua School-house	28
Camptonville	Mar. 1

ED. RESCUE:—Sister Stevens has accomplished a grand work in Stanislaus County during the past two weeks. Her labors at Oakdale, Ceres, Turlock and Modesto, have resulted in the accession of more than one hundred members to the four Lodges by initiation, with about forty additional names secured for future membership. If she can return to complete the work thus inaugurated, it is hoped that another hundred may be added to our effective membership in other Lodges not yet visited.

Sister Stevens gave three lectures at Oakdale, three at Ceres, three at Turlock and five at Modesto. Her audiences were large and attentive. On Thursday evening, Feb. 2nd, W. E. Turner, Esq., gave a complimentary social, at his residence, in honor of Sister Stevens, to which all friends of the temperance cause were invited, Mrs Stevens being his guest during her stay in Modesto. The spacious mansion, the finest in the county, was crowded with guests, including many of our most worthy citizens. The evening was devoted to social exercises, consisting of solos, duetts, choruses and recitations of varied character.

Before the serving of bountiful refreshments, Mr. Turner, who has identified himself with the cause of law and order in securing the enforcement of the Sunday Law in Modesto, announced his intention of becoming a member of Morning Star Lodge, and urged his friends to join their influence with his in giving ther names and services to the Order of Good Templars. Several of our most worthy citizens responded to the appeal, making the list of names secured during the visit of Sister Stevens nearly fifty. The evening was one of the most delightful ever enjoyed by the people of Modesto.

On Monday evening, after Mrs. Stevens' lecture, a presentation of testimonials was made to Messrs. W. E. Turner and J. C. Simmons, for their gratuitous legal services in the enforcement of the Sunday law. Rev. Mr. Urmy presented Mr. Turner with a valuable watch charm, of beautiful design and highly ornamented, and the writer presented Mr. Simmons with an elegant gold-headed cane, both made to order for the purpose, and purchased by the ladies of Modesto with funds solicited from the citizens. Both gentlemen responded in appropriate speeches, Mr. Turner enlarging upon the general subject of temperance and kindred topics, thus evoking the comments of the local press, favorable or adverse as the feelings and interests of the various editors dictated.

On Friday evening, Feb. 3d, Mr. Turner filed his promise of the previous evening, and was duly initiated into the Order of Good Templars, with twenty six others, most of whom are young men or heads of families. It is confidently anticipated that Morning Star Lodge will soon stand among the banner lodges of the state, as many others have given their names. Forty-four were proposed and elected on Friday evening, seventeen of whom were not present. It is hoped that most of these, with many others, will be initiated at our next meeting.

It is very important that the movement now inaugurated in this county be pushed forward with unabated zeal and energy. To this end, the return of Mrs. Stevens is greatly desired, as Knights Ferry, Westport, Hill's Ferry and other points must be visited soon. This we hope can be done, after Sister Stevens shall have visited the lodges of Merced county.

Modesto has contributed $52.75 for the Orphans' Home, during Sister Stevens' course of lectures, making her collections for that object over $100 during her campaign in this county.

M. D. GAGE, Dist. Dep.

ONE of the good results of Mrs. Stevens' work at Ceres was the purchase and closing up of the only saloon in the village. That is one more community of the state freed from the pestilence of a sink of iniquity. Mrs. Stevens sent a report from Ceres, but it seems to have gone to Washington or Boston, as it has not arrived after more than a week's voyage—perhaps it has encountered a storm on the way and perished.

BROTHER THOMASSON, L. D., writes from Gilroy, and sending a club for RESCUE, that they are gaining ground in the lodge as they increase their use of temperance literature in the community. But he adds they have not half enough yet.

Juvenile Department.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, Calaveras Co., Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

PLEDGING YOUNG FOLKS.

There has been a wondrous variety in the objections urged against the temperance reform; some would not help it because the preachers were favorable to it; others opposed because the preachers were opposed to it. Some wont help it for fear it is going to get into politics; some because it dont go into politics; some object to it because they say it is a terrible sin to whisper a password in the Good Templars and some oppose it, because they dont like old Deacon Jones or old Mrs. Jenkins who believe in temperance and work for it.

Luther says he was terribly tempted by the devil, and other very good men have thot they were; perhaps it is not disrespectful to think that the spirit of evil puts crotchets into the heads of some very good people nowadays, and they dont suspect it. Possibly he gets an item into the RESCUE now and then, and if he does, no doubt he crows over it, for he and this paper are not on kindly terms if they know it.

Some people were in former times terribly shocked at our wickedness in pledging hard drinkers or any drinkers, because they said it was such an AWFUL SIN to break a pledge. If a poor fellow had been drunk for six years and took a pledge and after five years or two or one, or in a week he should break that pledge, what a terrible thing that would be; they believed temperance would be a good thing if it were not for the sin of those pledges.

Now, we should regard our pledge, our promise, our simple word given to do anything that is proper and right for us to do, as solemnly binding as the most stringent oath can ever be; we should all take a pride in believing that all the gold in this world offered us to break a promise, to betray a trust or tell a lie would not tempt us a moment. Who would like to have it supposed that his honor could be bot for 20 dollars or 20 millions.

But the people who pledged others, did their best to help them keep their pledge; those who thot it was so wicked to break a pledge, did nothing whatever to prevent people from breaking it. The pledge reformed John B. Gough and thousands of others; and those who broke their pledges did a terrible wrong; but they did no worse than if they had kept on drinking. Drinking and getting drunk is such a sin, so degrading and debasing that the poor wretch addicted to it cannot easily become any worse. Let him try to reform; if he tries and fails and breaks his pledge, can he be any worse for that, than if he had kept on sinning without trying to amend? Surely not; however great the sin of breaking the pledge, it could make the drunkard no worse.

Then when it was proposed to pledge the children against making brutes of themselves. Oh, what a fuss there was about that. The people who wept and mourned the loudest, and had their tender consciences tortured the worst, were the poor, dear, tender hearted rumsellers, who were so afraid that pledge would demoralize the boys and make them lie. They fretted about it; they came near praying about it, but they could not remember any prayers to say; so they swore about it.

They wanted the boys to be able to come up to their bars and spend their money like men and get drunk and swear and gamble and smoke without any pledge to demoralize them and they cursed that pledge. They hired a fellow to write about it and their papers everywhere including the wine dealers Gazette of San Francisco copied a long sermon, showing that the Band of Hope boy was pretty sure to turn out bad and be a "prig," which sometimes means a conceited fool, sometimes a thief.

Many very good people too, were much more afraid that the boys would break that pledge than that they should become drunkards. It would be such an awful thing, they said, if they were to break their pledge: So it would, but it is no worse than drinking and thereby qualifying oneself to become guilty of all the other worst sins.

And yet every day they were making their children promise lots of things, take lots of pledges; now Johnny, go strait to school, you will, wont you? You will be good to-day, wont you? promise me now, you will. Come strait home after school, say you will, sure. Promise me you wont say bad words. Promise me you wont play with that naughty bad boy. Promise that you will be good to your little sister, etc., etc. This was all right, but promise you will not drink and smoke and become brutes, that is dangerous. It is a matter of thankfulness that most of these people who objected to pledging the children have gone up the chimney or have nearly all disappeared. The best of people now desire to pledge all the children to avoid their greatest enemy. They dont want you to promise to avoid any harmless or wholesome or pleasant thing, only those things which have a sting or a bite worse than a rattlesnake's.

And remember if it dont make a hopeless drunkard worse to give him a pledge that he breaks, it is a different case with young folks; you are not enchained by a master appetite; to break your pledge is certain disgrace of the deepest dye; it may be forgiven, but the shame of it can never be washed away. Thousands of times the breaking of a pledge has been death and ruin—and if there could be a thousand million people break the pledge of the Band of Hope, it could not help but bring a curse to every one. The Hon. Thos. H. Benton lived among drinkers and smokers and gamblers all his life, and hear what he said:

"WHAT I OWE TO MY MOTHER.

'My mother asked me never to use tobacco; I have never touched it from that time to the present day. She asked me never to gamble; I never gambled; I can not tell who is losing in games that are being played. She admonished me, too, against drinking; and whatever capacity for endurance I have at present, and whatever usefulness I have, I attribute to having complied with her pious and correct wishes. When I was seven years of age, she asked me not to drink, and then I made a resolution of total abstinence; and that I have adhered to it thru all times, I owe to my mother.'"

And the most precious comfort you can carry with you thru life will be the consciousness of having faithfully kept the counsels of a loving, faithful, Christian mother.

THE CHINCHA ISLANDS.

Some may say, what have the Chincha Islands to do with the juvenile department of a temperance paper? The answer is, if parables and fictions have always been used as vehicles for the conveyance of useful moral lessons to mankind, surely it is proper to make a relation of interesting historical facts the medium of a few moral lessons for the young and old readers of the RESCUE, especially when these facts are accessible to them from no other source.

Last week allusion was made to what rum did at the islands and at Callao. A great many vessels not quite as good as new but nearly so, went there that needed much care in loading them properly; not getting any care at all they became leaky as soon as they got out from the shore into the fresh trade winds and headed into the great swell which is almost constant there from southwest. Those that came back were called lame ducks and were made to discharge cargo and stand a survey. If anybody in Callao wanted then to buy such a ship, she was sure to be condemned and sold; two or three men in town decided how much he was to bid for her, they agreeing not to bid against him, everybody in the ring having a similar promise when it should be his turn to purchase a vessel.

If nobody wanted to buy a vessel, she would be repaired and the carpenters, Englishmen and Americans would make up a grand bill of costs which would almost make a San Francisco lawyer turn pale. It was understood mostly that the costs came out of the insurance offices and nobody had any compassion on them.

As an instance, an English bark was in Callao Bay ready for sea, had been to the islands and loaded, returned to Callao and cleared and but for the fondness of the Captain for pisco, would several days before have gone to sea all right. The Captain was having a nice little time on shore with his friends of various kinds. A French frigate came into Callao Bay and anchored beside the English bark. The French master made a slight miscalculation and struck the bark a slight blow on the starboard bow which was enough however to crush two of her planks away above water.

The French Captain made signs very politely and talked French to the English mate, who returned the compliment by making signs and talking English and neither had the faintest idea of what the other said. In about an hour a crew of carpenters and sailors from the French ship were slinging stages over the bow of the English bark and were gabbling French as if they had been instructed by Mother Shipton that it was the last day that the French language would ever be permitted. When the English Captain came on board he asked the Frenchmen a string of English and added "Bono?" which he thot was French for "good." The others replied with a copious dose of French, elevated one shoulder and the other eyebrow and made a diagram on their fingers and no one understood anything; for English and French have a great contempt for each others language and very few of them learn to speak it.

To be concise, in a very short time the Frenchmen had cut out about 15 feet of one plank and 25 of the other, and had put in new ones in their places, fastened, caulked, smoothed and painted them, doing the whole job in excellent workmanlike manner. Altho they had done it so well, the ship was not quite as perfect as before, because the broken planks had been 70 feet long; now there was a joining in each, which was of course an exceedingly small detriment; and no doubt the Frenchmen would willingly have paid a little sum for that damage had they been asked.

The carpenters on shore rebelled against Frenchmen interfering with their work. They talked to the captain of the bark, smoked cigars with him, drank pisco with him. They said, this might have been a grand job for us and you; we could have made a little money out of this, and we could have spared you so many hundred dollars for your share. Well, they trapped the drinking captain, called a survey, and condemned all the work and ordered the whole length of the seventy feet plank to be taken out and replaced with whole planks the same length. For about $150 you could have had a survey there on the moon and the planet Jupiter, and had them ordered under repairs, or condemned as unfit for further service.

Now this work when done, made the ship no better than before; but it detained her there about two months. There were no 70 ft. planks in Callao, and they had to send to Ecuador first, and Valparaiso afterward for them—and it was not worth $5 more to make the alteration at all. While waiting for the repairs, the captain and the carpenters (they were three Johny Bulls of super-enormous sponge capacity) employed the time in enjoying life; and they enjoyed it. One early morning, when the Captain was ashore with one eye badly damaged in the previous evening's enjoyment, he was pointed out to me by a citizen; "there is a pretty fellow, plays pitch and toss for gold ounces ($17 pieces), has not been on board his ship for a week, and has three of my shirts on now which he has borrowed, and puts the clean one on over all."

It will seem incredible, but these rascals trumped up a bill of $15,000 for repairs, that were not in the least necessary, and if necessary ought not to have cost over $250. They had persuaded the stupified and stultified captain, that they had only to present the bill to the French Admiral, who had also arrived in Callao, and he would draw a bill on his government without question. But the Admiral declined to pay a cent, as he had made the repairs perfectly well previously.

Then the captain drew bills on his owners, and when he arrived in Liverpool he was a well dressed, gentlemanly appearing man, sober and well-conducted. It was surprising to see the change; but next day the papers reported that he had been arrested and imprisoned. What was the charge or the result I never heard. But had it not been for rum, the bark would have been at sea with a sober Captain, in place of being damaged in the first place. But for more rum, she could have gone to sea all right in less than a week after the accident, without a dollar's loss, for her time would have been paid for by the Frenchman. But for more rum, the Captain would never have been led into a trap by that gang of thieves on shore; and very likely the owners of the bark employed another drunken man to waste their interests again.

And those carpenters got rich trumping up bills with drunken captains, furnishing 300 lbs. of oakum and charging for 900 at double price; sending caulkers on board to do 75 days work and charging the ship 182 days; setting a boy to tend the pitch kettle 4 days at 25 cents a day and charging 17 days at $2;

all of which they habitually did and every thing else in proportion. They each bought a rich sugar plantation and several ships and a railroad after a few years, did they not? No, they ought to, but they did not; they drank rum or brandy all day, were always treating or being treated; they had to treat the captains to keep them blind and deaf and dumb; and because of rum, they failed in business as partners and again on their separate account, and all three died of rum, miserably poor in a very few years after.

There was a man in Callao who was such a rare artistic penman as only one person in a million can ever be. He had a handsome wife who was a smart business woman; she sold rum and kept a clothing store. He bought and sold sailors, just as a certain class of men do now in San Francisco and always have done in all the large seaports where the American flag is supposed to protect the sailor. Selling rum and selling sailors was profitable and they made money. A ship came back leaky, was sold, they bought her; put a carpenter to do the repairs who would take his pay in pisco chiefly; job complete, the work was surveyed and condemned, had to be done over again at a much larger expense. Then the vessel was loaded and had a good freight and went to sea. Golden dreams of an ample pile of English gold from the big freight and the ship to be sold. Buy a nice home or a little estate in their native Ireland and be retired gentry there.

The owner and his wife started for England to meet their vessel there, having sold out and closed up business in Callao. They had as usual to stop over at Panama. Bad news. Our ship ashore, captain thot he would like to go thru the straits of Magellan; ship ashore, total loss of ship and cargo. Owners returned to Callao. The man went to Talcahuano, as near as he could get to the straits; got all the news he wanted there, borrowed money to get back. The old business was resumed, selling rum and clothes and sailors: said they did not care: measured their trunk: said it would hold just $250,000 silver dollars (which was a terrible mistake). Fill that trunk in two or three years. But they did not. Rum began to come home to roost. Man and wife separated. In two or three years rum slew them both; the woman attempted suicide in a fit of delirium tremens and died soon after in a mad house.

While all this ruin of rum was going on, there was one individual who did not use it. In 1854 he was a boy clerk in a ship chandler's store, in Callao, was promoted till he became a junior partner in an immense mercantile business, married a captain's dauter from the state of Maine, became senior partner and is so now, and more than that, the smart sober little boy of 1854 has been for a year and is now Mayor of the great city of New York.

NOTES FROM THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT.

BADGES!

Another invoice of Badges has been received at this office, and again it is needful to speak a few words of caution. Perhaps, only those most closely connected with the work, realize how large a sum is paid, by the Grand Lodge each year, for these attractive badges. And, judging from orders received some of our Supt's must distribute them without stint or caution. For instance, the same letter will contain a report of 40 members, and an urgent request for 50 more badges. When the books of Gen. Supt. show that said Band has already received 50 badges! This is not the case of one alone, but of many Bands. One Supt. may think "There is Tom, he has broken his badge and Dick has lost his, and Harry's has got shabby, and they all want new ones; it's only three! and they don't cost anything." So the badges go, and soon an order is sent for more. This would not matter much, were it only one Band, but when the state of affairs is the same in many, the amount is no trifle. This is the result of thoughtlessness, not of wilful waste. No Supt. would deliberately throw away the funds of the Grand Lodge, and at the risk of being thought a grumbler, I deem it my duty to call attention to this subject. It has been suggested that each member be supplied with one badge and if that be lost or broken thru carelessness, the one replacing it shall be paid for. No doubt the children themselves, would place a higher value on their badges if they knew, that when destroyed thru carelessness, they would be obliged to replace them themselves.

AT LAST!

The revised Band of Hope Directory is published. As will be seen, each band is numbered. Apologies are offered to those Bands whose numbers have been changed. It was unavoidable. It is expected that henceforth each Band will make use of its numbers in all communications. Information in regard to any mistake, in name of Band or Supt. will be gratefully received and errors promptly rectified:

PROGRESS.

The juvenile work is advancing well, upwards of fifty Bands have been organized since the session of the Grand Lodge. On every hand adults are awaking to the necessity of properly educating the children, and it seems to be the general conviction, that in the Band of Hope, they are not only taut just what they ought ot know, but are pledged to practice their teachings. "The children are gathering from near and from far," and when, a few years hence the "trumpet shall sound the call to the war," we, who have, perhaps, borne the burden in the heat of the day until our vigor is exhausted, will find in this brave and dauntless army of young soldiers, whose feet are steadfast, because their training has not only pledged them to avoid wrong doing, but thoroly educated them in the consequences of it, the reinforcements that will take the enemy by storm and will march on till victory shall be written on our banners.

"The conflict is raging
Twill be fearful and strong
Then gird on the armor,
And be marching along,

M. E. RICHARDSON.

NOT FAR.

Not far, not far from the kingdom,
Yet in the shadow of sin,
How many are coming and going,
How few are entering in!

Not far from the golden gateway,
Where voices whisper and wait,
Fearing to enter in boldly,
So lingering still at the gate;

Catching the strain of the music
Floating so sweetly along,
Knowing the song they are singing,
Yet joining not in the song;

Seeing the warmth and the beauty,
The infinite love and the light,
Yet weary, and lonely, and waiting,
Out in the desolate night!

Out in the dark and the danger,
Out in the night and the cold,
Though he is longing to lead them
Tenderly into the fold.

Not far, not far from the kingdom,
'Tis only a little space;
But it may be at last and forever,
Out of the resting-place.

OUR BAND OF HOPE.

GUADALUPE, Santa Barbara Co.,
Jan. 21, 1882.

What is the Band of Hope good for?-is what many people say. Everybody can do as they please, but I think it is very wrong for parents to object to the children,—especially boys—joining the Band. They will be very sorry some day, as they may early learn to use strong drink. It is a much better place for children to be at the Band of Hope on Sunday afternoon, than to be loitering around the streets, getting into bad company and learning all kinds of bad habits. Those who are not members of the Band of Hope will say, when they see other boys and girls trying to do right, they just joined to have the name of being a member of the society, but pay no attento the rules of the Band of Hope.

People will try and make you break your pledge, or say you have, and vex you in many ways. Strong drink is the mother of all mischief and the root of all evil. How does it look to see a man staggering around the streets, senseless because of strong drink?

We hope none of this band may ever be seen in a saloon or a gin shop.

Let us heed instruction, that we may learn of the evils and miseries of intoxicating drinks. Let us try and advance the cause of temperance and succeed in the work which we have undertaken.

SARAH STEVENSON, Guadalupe B. of H.

"BOYS WANT TO KNOW THE ROPES."

This is what Eddie Deane said to his mother when she learned he had been, time after time, to play Pool at the "place" of a man who made a business of luring young boys into his den.

A kind friend informed this widowed mother how her son was tempted. Taking him to her own room, where he had so often knelt at her knee in prayer, she said:

"You must stop now unless you wish my heart to be broken."

Poor woman, she knew the awful power of the fiend she was battling against.

"But, mother, I never cared for such things; but boys want to know the ropes, you see," replied Eddie.

Thanks to the wise guidance of this loving mother, and the mercy of a loving God, the boy was saved; saved from the rope that often ends a life begun in this very manner.

It was not many days after the talk with his mother that, as he was passing down the street, the tempter stood at his door and said, "Come in and have a game."

"No," replied Eddie, "I've done with that!"

"But why?"

"When my mother says 'stop,' that ends it!" aaid Eddie walking away. Would there were more such boys.—Gracious Words.

"I BEG YOUR PARDON."

A civil word is the cheapest thing in the world, yet it is a thing which the young and happy rarely give to their inferiors. See the effect of civility on a rough little street boy. The other evening a young lady abruptly turned the corner, and very rudely ran against a boy who was small and ragged and freckled. Stopping as soon as she could, she turned to him and said, "I beg your pardon. Indeed, I am very sorry." The small, ragged and freckled boy looked up in blank amazement for an instant; then, taking off about three-fourths of a cap, he bowed very low, smiled until his face became lost in the smile, and answered, "You can have my parding, and welcome, miss, and you may run agin me and knock me clean down, an' I wont say a word." After the young lady passed on, he turned to a comrade and said, half apologetically, "I never had any one ask my parding, and it kind o' took me off my feet."—Anon.

TOP HEAVY.

Not long since we passed a group of merry boys engaged in launching a miniature ship. It was a beautiful craft, and we did not wonder at their enthusiasm. All was ready. It started, wavered a moment, then turned upon its side, the sails and bright streamers trailing in the water. Evidently a failure—what caused it?

"Top-heavy," the boys said.

As we walked on, we thot this word might be applied, now and then, to persons as well as ships. The top-heavy boy thinks it manly to smoke, play pool, drink beer, use profane language, laughs at the Bible and disregards the Sabbath. The top-heavy girl is idle, slovenly, impatient and disobedient; her whole care is for self; most of her time is spent in running about the streets, or in reading novels. When these persons are launched on the sea of real life they are wrecked by the first gale.—Ex.

"THE OLD OAKEN BUCKET."

A large steel engraving, 19 x 24 inches. Price 50 cents. The National Temperance Society has recently secured the steel plate of the beautiful engraving entitled "The Old Oaken Bucket," which it has printed on extra plate-paper 19 x 24 inches. This beautiful picture would adorn any home, hall, or meeting-room, and it should have a wide sale at the low price of 50 cents, post paid.

Also, the National Temperance Society has for sale the elegantly bound and illustrated copy of the original poem, "The Old Oaken Bucket." Price $1.50. Address J. N. Stearns, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, New York.

A TWENTY-THOUSAND EDITION.

On the 16th February it is proposed to issue an edition of 20,000 copies of the RESCUE. An excellent opportunity of advertising will be afforded on that occasion. And it is hoped some of the correspondents of the paper will help make it an interesting and useful number.

CHEAP BOOKS.

Just think of a dollar book to be had every week for a year for $2.50 and all choice reading. See David C. Cook's advertisement in this paper. No more use for dime novels and miserable literature, when you can get the best that was ever published at five cents a volume. And newspapers too at five cents a year. Send for samples and you will have a pleasant surprise

BOUND VOLUMES of the RESCUE (18th volume) for sale at $2.00, delivered at this office.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

BUT THEY ARE EVERYWHERE.

When temperance men who have intelligently studied the simplest arithmetic of finance, strive to direct the attention of the ordinary man of business. to the self evident fact of the deadly war which the liquor traffic in all its branches, wages against every honest trade, profession and industry—it is and always has been the custom to attribute the idea to the fanaticism of temperance men, to the exageration of prejudice, to disbelieve it and give the crushing retort, "but dont they have them every where?" Is not New York rich? Boston rich? London rich? Paris rich? Liverpool rich? and have they not always had grogshops?

Men, who have written mighty chapters on the future of California, upon tarif and free trade, who swell out with high pressure lore on political economy and international law, who give decrees on national policy and are Solomons in statesmanship and history, will say, "but they have grogshops every where;" and they will positively refuse to hear any thing further. To every arithmetical argument, to every proposition of figures like that of 2 and 2 are 4, they turn a deaf ear and repeat the old parrot twaddle; "But dont they have them every where?"

The man who puts up a large building or a block of buildings for rent, has sense enough to refuse to let the favorite front and corner rooms at any price, to an Italian organ grinder to practice there; or to a slauter house man, to a soapboiler, or for a powder depot. He is not a fool thus far, but nine times in ten he will let the favorite store to the filthiest, wickedest, meanest, most property ruining, rent destroying, pauperizing and infamous business the world has ever seen. He will repeat the old parrot cry, and keep repeating it till the grogshops in his buildings and vicinity have reduced his rents, and the value of his property, to one-fourth of the original figures, and have driven all decent business to another street.

Now what would you think of a man who objects to a fire company or fire precautions, saying fire dont hurt business, dont hurt a town, dont they have them every where? look at Chicago, at Boston, at New York, have they not had dreadful fires and are they not rich and great cities? Oh, fires help business and make trade, same as any other business, dont stop the fires, let us have trade. But the parallel is good between the fire and the grogshop; they help trade alike, tho the grogshop is infinitely the worst of the two to destroy property and business.

Burglary, murder, forgery, dont stop them, they have them every where; look at Chicago, Boston etc. dont they have thieves there? are they not large growing rich cities?

If you should converse with an educated experienced business man, who would argue that fires and cholera and yellow fever and thieves and war and crime and beggary and failure of crops and bad debts, none of them at all hurt the trade and progress of a city or state, saying, pooh, pooh, "they have them every where," look at London, Pekin, Paris, Vienna. New York, Boston, are they not rich cities? is not France rich? is not England rich? are not the U. S. rich?—you would go home and think over whether your friend was recovering from the jimjams or had sunk into hopeless idiocy.

But you will find men of the highest public reputation as editors, statesmen, politicians, financiers, merchants, etc., and who deserve to be credited with more than ordinary intelligence on other subjects—so hopelessly idiotic and mentally imbecile upon this most important question, that there is not a particle of hope for their reformation on this side of the grave; because "their eyes are holden that they cannot see," and they stop their own ears so they cannot hear and understand.

But it is safe to say that any well-behaved studious 15 year old pupil of our public schools, male or female, would arithmetically, rationally and logically solve the question of the true financial relation of the grogshop to the welfare and progress of a city, state or nation, after an unassisted study of half an hour; if they later in life get their morals poisoned with beer and unlawful greed, perhaps they will be like so many of their elders.

WHAT WINE IS MADE OF.

As wine merchants are petitioning the government to put a stop to the manufacture of artificial wines, the petitioners asserting that not one-third of the wine used in Paris is made of grapes, the many Americans who turn up their noses at the juice of our own grapes, will naturally wonder what spurious French wines are made of. An exchange says there are a number of large factories near Paris in which wines are made from damaged dried fruits of al y kind, beets and spoiled molasses. But there is not enough of these materials to make as much wine as is required by foreign trade. Turnip juice has been worked over into wine, and American cider is the basis of millions of bottles of champagne; but good apples and turnips are too costly to be wasted on cheap wines, such as most Americans buy. Some of the temperance societies might find the returns they are after, by satisfying public curiosity about what wines are made of.—N. Y. Herald.

The temperance societies and temperance press and other literature have for 30 years given the most explicit description of what wines were made of. The practice of fabricating wine in France out of all the things named above, is no newer thing there, than raising grapes is.

In 1855, premiums were awarded at the Great Exposition in Paris, for the best fabricated imitations of wine. And it was no new thing then, nor for 50 years before that. It is no new thing in any of the large cities of the United States, to make the larger portion of the wine that is sold, without a particle of grape juice and at a cost of ten or fifteen cents a gallon. Wine, too, that sells from $1 to $3 a bottle; all sham and alcohol and water from the sugar and juice of the turnip and potato and rotten apple.

But let us be careful to deal justly with all men. The wine made thus is just the same, just as good, just as wholesome as the choicest qualities that are evolved from the rotten, putrid, vile odored corpse of the most choice and luscious grapes. The alcohol is just the same; it is made from rotten sugar of any kind; the water is the same; the flavor is the same tho differently produced; the bottle and cork and seal and label are the same; the drunk is the same; the incitement to lust and blasphemy and lying and dishonesty and strife, which the so called natural wine generates, is equally produced by the imitation; and altho the original cost of the latter is not one-fifth, perhaps, of the other, the cost to the drinker is the same. One is as good as the other, and perhaps better!

Wine is wine; its only use is to produce drunkenness. The patent turnip and swill tub and drug store and glucose forgeries, are not a whit more dis reputable than the other, save in one thing, that the dealer and maker has to add more falsehood to the other crimes of his infernal business; and a few lies cannot make it much worse.

And so long as the material which produces SUGAR—the only thing from which wine or alcohol can be produced—so long as sugar can be obtained by any process, from any grain, fruit, cane or vegetable at a cheaper rate than from grapes at $10 a ton, just so long will that cheap material be the base of the bulk of the wine of commerce here and elsewhere, wherever there are people who are fools enough to drink wine. And the price of that cheap sugar will regulate the price of all grapes to be used for wine. Everyone should have sense enough to know that. Wine merchants are not saints nor philanthropists. They have dealt in frauds for 100 years; they will sell wine at the highest price they can get; they will buy wine or make it, at the cheapest possible rate. They can already make more profit on glucose wine than on grape wine. It will pay grape growers to look into these things.

COMMUNION WINE.

When total abstinence societies were first formed in America and England, there were numbers of respectable men who gladly and confidently took the platform to resist their unscriptural and unsound tenets and doctrines and prove their falsity. But they were after a very few experiments utterly exterminated. Only one man has for many years past dared to denounce total abstinence as unscriptural, and he covered himself with ignominy in having been canonized by the brewers and rumthugs, alongside of Bacchus and Gambrinus in the temples of sin.

When the fact was brot to light and proclaimed that in past ages of ignorance and corruption and monkish depravity, a monstrous desecration had been imposed upon one of the most solem and sacred ordinances of the church, and that the devil had so cunningly contrived matters that the servants of the Most High God were innocently using in His worship, the most pronounced and appropriate symbol of Satan worship that the world could present—there were plenty of ardent open defenders of the old system, which they had invested with a sacred reverence, not from any logical reason, but from an unquestioning tenacious preference for ancient usage and custom.

In argument and history and scripture they have been defeated most signally and completely. For 30 years past they have not improved upon one of their old arguments, nor invented a new one. The only one they have left is in the utterly shallow and bottomless and baseless and absurd refuge, that the highest scholarship of the world which has been devoted to the examination of this subject is not of the first class; that there is a higher scholarship which dont agree to our deductions; that they know better without ever having looked into the matter at all.

But while no one ventures to publicly discuss the question, to bring out the proofs on both sides and let the people judge in an honest open search for the truth, there is a very strong majority in many churches who are persistently adhering to a system which they dare not publicly defend nor discuss. This does not seem right. The churches and ministers and church members who have made this a matter of impartial intelligent research, are, it is quite safe to say, surprisingly of one accord in discarding the cup of sin and pollution from its stolen place on the table of the Lord, and the numbers so doing are daily and rapidly increasing.

Now if this is wrong, if the temperance wing of Christianity are mistaken, they are guilty of a monstrous profanation and desecration, and to see them daily adding new converts to their heresy, without protest and vigorous reproof and effort to reclaim them from their mischievous and mischief making error, seems to be a positive and very glaring sin of omission on the part of our friends of the other side. If they are right, we are offering strange fire, guilty of sacrilege, profaning the temple and are deceivers of mankind and ot to be suppressed.

If a product of death and corruption, were it wine or gin or pure alcohol, or if a diluted poison of any other kind, arsenic, mercury, opium or nicotine, had been the thing commanded at the institution, our attempt to substitute something better or less harmful or more in accord with our prejudices or preferences would be simply sacrilege, blasphemy, contempt of Divine authority. Were we sure such had been appointed, we should believe there was some wise reason for it, which tho we may not understand, we have no right to set ourselves up to override.

On the other hand, if the proof is positive and overwhelming, and leaves no loophole of uncertainty that something poisonous and devilish and accursed "an abomination of desolation standing in the holy place," has been substituted in the days of ignorance for the sacred and holy emblem, the fruit of the vine, which was used and commanded—and that perversion is being continued in the face of better, light and full knowledge to the contrary, and the practice has no advocates who dare defend it openly —well—it is left to themselves to assess the quality and quantity of the transgression of contempt of heaven and wrong to humanity.

FANATICAL EPISCOPALIANS.

The Public Leader (wife-beater's organ) laments the degeneracy of the times, when the "fanatic" members of the Episcopal Church have made it so uncomfortable for the Rev. C. C. Burnett, of Iowa, that he has resigned his charge. They objected to his "independent and eminently sensible course" in engaging with the wife-beaters' organization to deliver 50 lectures in the State of Illinois against prohibition, and in favor of licensing rum thieves to rob the workingmen's wives and children of their daily bread. The Leader says Mr. Burnett is one of the most level-headed men in the Union, on the subject of prohibition; which means, probably, that he can see ten times the money in preaching lies on the devil's side that he can in preaching the truth to a "fanatic" church membership.

THE MURDERER'S GANG.

CASTROVILLE.

It is time that not only the murderers traffic was suppressed, but it seems as if a good many of the murderers themselves will have to be put out of the way, before any approach to law and order in this state can be attained. Barn burning, mill and house burning and cattle poisoning in one place; beating infirm and aged Good Templars in another, shooting constables and threatening the life of a minister of the gospel and his wife, mobbing courts of justice in another, is what we have now to face; but it is exactly the natural outcome of the thrice accursed murderous system of licensing a banditti of murderers, thieves and ruffians all over the state to rob, plunder, debauch and kill our citizens by wholesale.

It appears a challenge was made in the Argus (Castroville) to attempt the enforcement of the Sunday law. In reply, the Rev. Mr. Burkholder, M. E. church, complained of violators. A Swiss rum-seller was fined, and attempting to shoot the constable he was shot by that officer. Mrs. Burkholder, returning to her home in Castroville, found the following note in the door yard:

"Jan 17th 1882.

Mr Burkholder we now warn you to leave this place you was the cause of that poor fellow of loosing his life which was as sweet to him as yours is to you you are guilty of murder in one sence and we will not permit you to stay here we have got our number of vigerlance which we will do our part every one of us now take warning our promises will be fullfilled as sure as there is a god in heaven we will give you fifteen dayes to leave and you must be sure and never come back no never not once now take your choice leave or take the concequences for we have pledged our selves so remember the day is close at hand"

"As to the charge there made against Mr. Burkholder, any one acquainted with the facts of the case can see at a glance that it is in every sense absurd, utterly false, and grossly malicious. It is doubtful if he would ever have made the complaint against Tomassini had not that taunting challenge, which at the trial Mr. Dodge fathered, been published in the Argus. That could not be passed by in silence and self respect maintained, to say nothing of law, order, decency, etc., which were specially outraged by it. The charge once made, the case passed into the officer's hands, and proceeded in due legal form to its conclusion. The unfortunate defendant's violent and threatening conduct, both before and after the trial, are all known, and are now matter of sworn court record. The facts in the case show very plainly who were as well as who were not responsible for his death. His own thirst for bloody revenge against the officers of the law, cost him his life. As to the authorship and threat of the above note, the former is already more than suspected, and the latter is being well prepared for. Any violent demonstration against Mr. Burkholder will be promptly met, and treated as it deserves by his many friends who are prepared to protect him at any cost. We live in America, not in France, Germany, Ireland or any other foreign country. We believe in the maintenance of American law and institutions. We mean what we say. The case has been placed in the hands of the officers, and the guilty parties may find themselves in the meshes of the law sooner than they anticipate. We close as we began, with the hope that the above statement of our creed and purpose will not be misunderstood or neglected.

Respectfully,

MANY CITIZENS.

Afterward Mr. Burkholder received the following from another professional man-butcher, who professes to date from Santa Cruz:

VIGERLANCE NO. 2.

SANTA CRUZ Jan 30 82

"Mr. Burkholder

"I will just say to you you can boast about not leaving Castroville untill you are took a way in your coffin there might not bee enough left of you to put in one so you can take your friends advice if you like I hear all that is going on there you need not think that we go blind folded for we are not that kind of people and your days are all numbered and the day draweth near so remember your warning all the men in Castroville cant stop us so now take your choice"

THE OLD TOWNS.

It is indeed a just cause of sorrow, to see how the old towns and noted places in California are going down and giving place to new towns, etc. The industries of the state have been completely changed in the last thirty years, and of course our business centers have been changed. We feel sad when we pass such a place as old Kingston, on Kings River. True her painted signs and sidewalks tell the tale of a good large population, but they tell only the tale of departed splendor. We read that Princeton, Colusa county, is now without a mail route. Princeton was at one time, and that within our memory, one of the most business-like places, and now is without any importance whatever. What may be said of one old California town may be said of nearly all, yet somehow we hate to see the old places die.—Hanford Journal.

It is sad indeed, friend, but the industries have not so much changed. The principal and all absorbing and all engulfing industry in every one of these old places was selling liquor and gambling. There are any number of these deserted towns that took enough out of the ground to have laid the sure and lasting foundation of a permanent popular city. But whether the place made $10,000 or 10 million, the whisky and gambling industry got away with about every dollar of it every night, and when the mine or other real industry petered out, nobody had anything left but unpaid bills and an appetite for rum and play. And that industry has not changed a particle, it is as busy as ever all over these states and territories. But as it pauperizes and desolates one place, it has to move to another, and now wherever an honest industry is making one dollar a day there are all over California, Arizona, Nevada, etc., from 2 to 100 grogshops, beer dives and brothels and gamblers scuffling to steal that dollar and to blast and curse and pauperize and strip bare not only the old towns but all the new and green spots of this beautiful and pricelessly rich country. There never was in this state any other reason or agency that had anything to do with making deserted towns and ruined hamlets except in the rarest instances of a little camp here and there.

THE WOMAN BEATER'S LEAGUE.

The outlaw conspiracy of San Francisco have kept their general agent pretty actively employed drumming up accusations against violators of the Sunday law with a view of horsewhipping and buldosing and kicking honest and welbehaved citizens into a partnership with the brothels and beerdives.

But it seems a mistake occurred in causing the arrest of two professional Sunday outlaws, who not understanding the joke retorted with a charge of thieving and swindling against the out door manager and legal representative of the league. They accused him of stealing several dozen bottles of beer from their cellar in May last. Whether itwas thru fear of facing this charge or whether the league did not want the real violators to be convicted is not known, but their witness did not appear and the case against the outlaws was dismissed. Some people complain of the employment of such a man as Schetzel by the league; it ot to be considered the most appropriate thing of the season: Because of the failure of the league to appear against their own kind, the courts have refused to issue more warrants of arrest for the present.

GOOD OF THE ORDER.

BY H. C. CULTON.

Consistency is always highly prized, even by those who are not themselves consistent. The Good Templars, as a body, favor the Sunday Law and its enforcement. This is good. They are on the side of right, of truth, of humanity.

But we must be consistent. The lodges should not have their regular meetings on Sunday. Regular meetings are for the transaction of business.

Secrecy may keep the hands of the law off us, but secrecy cannot right our wrong nor cover up our inconsistency. Let us set a good example as well as promulgate sound precept. This is one reason why some churches are not in sympathy with the Good Templars. It is not strange that preachers and churches should not fall in with the Good Templars when they have their business meetings on Sunday. Until this practice is discontinued by our lodges, let no temperance speaker or writer rail out against preachers and churches because they decline to cooperate with us. Even if preachers and churches should get wrong, this railing out at them is not the best way to bring them around to the right track. We will not make many converts to the temperance cause by abusing the churches and finding fault with their plans and methods of work.

The more excellent way is found in kind words and duty faithfully performed. This will win men to us, and close up the gap between the lodge and the church.

Winters, Cal.

The matter of holding the regular meetings of Lodges on Sunday has been well considered, and by men and women who have the highest regard for the proper observance of the day of rest. The Good Templar Order has been behind no other religious organization in the effort to defend from all assault, either the law or the custom which gives us a day of rest.

The idea that a lodge meeting is a secular or business affair, has been shared in by Good Templars to some extent; therefore, they are seldom held on Sunday, and then only in mining localities and sparse settlements where, perhaps, half the members could not assemble on another day. It is supposed they are never held in any community where there are regular church services, or at the same hour.

As to the business transacted in a Lodge it seems to be precisely the same as that of the church: Money is collected and work is proposed for the same end; the salvation of mankind from the dominion of sin and Satan. If a Lodge is properly conducted there is nothing done there, that does not seem to come within the scope of the Sabbath work which the Lord of the Sabbath justified to pull our neighbor himself, not his ox, out of the pit.

It is not deemed by the Lodges that they are running an opposition to the church, but to the saloon. And where such a meeting is held and does not interfere with a more religious service it may be the very best employment of the time of the members on a Sabbath afternoon or evening. If a lodge is true to its obligations and the purposes of its existence it will have no exercises that are unfit for Sunday. But it is entirely foreign to the animus of the Order to be lacking in respect for the Sabbath. The good old farmer from the country lodge said well of his lodge, we used to meet in the church but now we worship in the schoolhouse. The lodge work is a worship, and when the question of holding our meetings on Sunday has been discussed in Grand Lodge the practice has been strenously defended where it exists by earnest Christians and ministers. It is admitted that a lodge meeting may desecrate Sunday or any other day but if our worthy brother would visit a few of the Lodges which for cause meet on Sunday he would find probably less business and more worship than he is prepared to expect.

THE HOME PROTECTION ASSOCIATION OF CALIFORNIA.

Enquiries have been made in regard to the objects of the above named organization. For the present it is sufficient to say that those originating it are all known as reliable temperance men, and that when work is commenced it will be both earnest and effective.

Next issue will give the names of its officers, a statement of its principles and the objects it seeks to attain.

STAND BY YOUR CAUSE!

The Pathfinder (What paths? Crooked ones?), of Kansas City, Mo., is making a dirty tirade against Gov. St. John. In a recent issue it says the editor returns thanks for a $50 bill sent by the Saloonkeepers' Association, as a token of friendship. Now, as a set-off, let fifty or five hundred Good Templars or temperance people send to the editor of the RESCUE $1.25 each, as a token of friendship to that clean, moral, patriotic paper. And they will receive 52 numbers during the year, and be better posted and more enthusiastic for the good cause.

J. W. W.

CIRCULATE THE TRUTH.

There is no easier, cheaper, or more effective method of reaching the great mass of the people than thru the medium of a systematic and prayerful distribution of tracts, leaflets, or handbills. We have a great number of instances of a change of life and of conversion of souls thru their instrumentality. All the great tract and mission societies of the age receive the same testimony; and we are glad to know that the people use this cheap and economical method to reach the masses. The children's tracts published by the National Temperance Society alone have reached a circulation of over fourteen million of pages, and the hand-bills, which have only been issued two or three years, of four and a half millions of copies. With this arrangement each and every one can find a field of usefulness, and not delegate their work to some one else, who may or may not perform it. We trust that every locality will have their special tract-distributer, and see that every person in the community is supplied with the important truths which this kind of literature contains, and which has had and will continue to have a great influence in moulding and shaping public opinion upon this great reform. *

DEMING, New Mexico, Jan. 28, 1882.

I am located for the present on this end of the S. P. R. R.—am running from here (West) to Bowie, A. T. Am enjoying splendid health. I greatly miss my lodge meetings and the hallowed influences of the same. Yes, feel sometimes as if I am out of the civilized world entirely. Christmas and New Year's to me were lonely enough—spent both days in Yuma, A. T.

The RESCUE is a source of infinite pleasure, for thru its colums I sometimes live again in civilization, and among the noblest of the noble people—the brothers and sisters of our noble Order.

With kind remembrances to all, I am fraternally, &c. J. T. MARR.

DAVISVILLE, Jan 31, 1882.

Our order in this county is advancing in numbers and also greatly in influence. We have so far not succeeded in closing business on Sunday, as we could wish, but have given the league some trouble and think that their arrogant defiance of law, has placed them where they belong, among the thieves and murderers and law-breakers; they are certainly in the same company, and they have been well held up in that light; thanks to the local paper, the Yolo Mail," which has stood in for right and principle notwithstanding the saloon interest have withdrawn their patronage entirely.

Now let the temperance people do their duty and sustain this noble paper in the stand it has taken, by patronizing it as it should be. To increase its circulation, is to help our cause of right.

"YOLO CO. GOOD TEMPLAR."

RED BLUFF, Jan. 28, 1882.

Please address RESCUE to me at Red Bluff, Tehama Co., as I am at present located at this point and do not desire to be without it.

The lodge at this place is doing a good work and intends soon to put up a building of brick worth $10,000. I am preaching temperance and judgment to come, with all my might. The temperance cause is wide awake at Marysville, and my father, Rev. C. A. Bateman, is kept very busy lecturing thruout that district.

Success to you my good friend, in your work of editing the RESCUE. C. C. BATEMAN, Pastor Baptist Church.

THE TEMPERANCE BALLOT, Bucyrus, Ohio, 4 page weekly, $1 a year, has set out to help destroy apollyon in that state.

THE PROTECTIONIST, Nashville, Tenn., is a four page semi-monthly, 10cts for 3 months; a smart live paper, devoted to prohibition, equal suffrage, and antimonopoly. Best wishes for its success.

THE NORTHWESTERN NEWS, Davenport, Iowa, $1.50 a year, is an able advocate of prohibition, neat in appearance and with copious, interesting and useful matter.

EVERY lodge of Good Templars in England is invited by the Watchword to petition Parliament to enact a local option law, and similar action is suggested to churches, schools, etc.

IT seems a recomendation of the publications of David C. Cook that an anonymous circular has been sent round asserting that his papers and lessons are not so cheap after all, as some other ones, which is true if an article sold at twenty cents is cheaper than one of the same or of a better quality sold at five or six cents. The circular raises, too, a startling, blood-freezing suspicion that from some certain peculiar standpoints, and under some extraordinary circumstances, or on certain days of the year or month, some peculiarly disposed individual might be tempted to fear that Mr. Cook or some of his ancestors or some of his wife's distant relations, are unsound in doctrine. That is an awfully sublime attack upon Mr. Cook's magnificent work for humanity; but it is presumed his steam power will still remain true to him and continue to pull the belts and turn the wheels of his machinery. And the doctrinal unsoundness as to whether Moses came thru the wilderness on horseback or footed it like the rest, we can all wait to see settled on the other side of the river.

CITIZENS of Watsonville have petitioned Judge Holbrook to suspend the Sunday law because it is not enforced in some places, and until it is decided once more by the Supreme Court: which indicates a sad lack of brain equilibrium and moral level in the petitioners. It would be as dignified and in as good taste, to petition the Post master to suspend the laws of gravitation till next election.

Every member of every church, especially the M. E., is violating their church rules when they deal with grocers who sell intoxicating liquors. There are many grocers who do not deal in such sinful trash.—Sunbeam.

That applies with equal force in California. There is a cash grocery advertised in the RESCUE that can supply all the temperance people of the state.

AT the Home Protection meeting of the 21st, Dr. Merrick said that Miss Willard in the few years of her temperance work had done more real effective service to the cause, and exhibited more sagacious and judicious generalship than any man has ever done who has labored as a temperance reformer. That may not have been exactly what he said, but it is to the same effect. The doctor might as well have had the courage too to confess that he is a complete uncompromising convert to the doctrine of just and impartial suffrage.

THE MICHIGAN GOOD TEMPLAR of Detroit, 4 page monthly, 35 cts a year, is a new bright addition to the temperance papers of the day. C P Russell and Caleb S. Pitkin editors. Some states that have had for many years a widespread temperance sentiment, Michigan and Ohio notably, have tried to get along without a temperance paper, and for a number of years piously starved out every troublesome spirit who attempted to run one. Consequence, farther away from prohibition, and the rum power stronger than 20 years ago. The Good Templar and the Lever will educate the people to drive out the evil spirit from the state.

Dr. J. Hall. L. D. writes of Riverside: "Progress in San Bernardino Co. Riverside Lodge met Saturday evening, Jan. 21, and conferred the beautiful and impressive higher degrees on seven recipients. Bros. Brooke, Paris and Curtis and Sisters McDonald and Livingston, all of San Bernardino, were present as visitors and acting officers, the first named being District Deputy, and Bro. Curtis Degree Templar. In the course of a short address after the initiations, Bro. Brooke remarked that owiug to the enforcement of the Sunday law, San Bernardino was in a better state of order on the Sabbath than he had known it to be before during a fifteen years' residence there. The law prevails also in Riverside.

THE REV. MR. DOWNTON in England has dared to enter into a controversy with the Rev. R. V. French an Episcopal rector, in the Temperance Record on the subject of communion wine. The latter uses about the same authorities, facts and deductions that have lately appeared in the RESCUE upon that subject. Mr. Downton on the other side asserts what a very ordinary student of history knows to be utterly false, "that no process was known in the first century of arresting fermentation a fortnight;" and his other argument is that teetotalers "invent a a number of fables," "often alledge falsehoods," and his opponent, the Rev. Mr. French, "handles the word of God deceitfully." That is a comfortable way and the only way the advocates of the use of the cup of blasphemy can prove up their case: comfortable, because it will equally prove any other fallacy, even that two and two make seven hundred and fifty. As usual.

The Chronicle reports Mr. Healy, the envoy from Ireland, as saying: " 'Ireland under the heel.' All law is practically at an end in Ireland. The country has been divided between five military magistrates, with supreme powers. The police shoot and stab helpless women and children, and verdicts of 'wilful murder' against them are quashed by the Crown." Without any sympathy for the landlords who possess an inheritance of the land of Ireland, stolen in ancient times from the people, and hoping that their oppressions may be speedily brot to an end, it induces a feeling of intense disgust to hear such a baseless, scandalous lie uttered by Mr. Healy. There is not a particle more danger of women and children being shot and stabbed by the police in Ireland, than there is in the churches of San Francisco. Surely no one is fool enough here to believe anything a man says, who is so depraved as to say that. The case of the Irish tenants has always been bad enough without any lying about it. But the people of Ireland have one worse enemy than the landlords; they have for many years paid more to their rumsellers for nothing, than they paid the landlords for the use of the land.

HOW MUCH.—A friend desires information in regard to the "amount" of misery caused by intemperance. We give it up. We are overwhelmed every time that we try to find an adequate answer to this question. The "amount" of misery caused by the liquor traffic. Estimate, if you can, the amount of misery caused in some single families. Tell how much some single persons suffer on account of this diabolical business. Count the tears and weigh the sighs of a single drunkard's family. Can't do it you say? Then how can we tell you the amount of misery in all the drunkards' families?—Lever.

The Lever's friend shall have a little more help. The area of the surface of this globe is about 196 million square miles and about 140 million of those miles are covered with water, say averaging two miles in depth; a cubic foot of sea water weighs say 1027 ounces. Figure up the number of tons of water in the combined oceans of the world and you will have as near as can be estimated the number of tons of human agony and misery and sorrow and woe annually inflicted upon the human race by the rum devil and his scorpion priests.

THE Redding Independent speaks highly of Col. Goulding's lectures in Shasta county, and reports large audiences and numerous additions to the lodges there. It says: "The people of Tehama county will find him a genial, pleasing, earnest speaker." The Visalia Delta devotes a column to a synopsis of an "able and interesting lectnre by Rev. W. C. King, subject, "Influence of alcohol on the brain." The Delta says it is a treat to listen to a speaker so far above the average, aside from the pleasure of hearing a good cause well defended.

A VALUABLE ADVICE.

My dear friends, and fellow sufferers. If you want to save a hundred dollar doctor bill, hours of agony and months of valuable time, buy a bottle of "BOSCHER'S LE ROY," the only positive cure for chills, fever, ague, and all fevers originating in biliary derangement. Prepared and sold only by

ENORMOUS SAVING TO SCHOOLS.

There is usually quite as much money in selling 100,000 copies of a publication at 5c. as 5,000 at 25c., or 500 at $1 00, and we are quite contented to make prices on this basis. It is scarcely four years since we began publishing Sunday-school Requisites on the "Revolution Plan;" we then issued two publications; we have now 36, besides 133 Library books, 5 Song books, and a large number of miscellaneous Requisites. Sales last year aggregated over twenty-six million copies. There is not one of our pub ications but what during the four years has been either dropped in price or increased in size and quality, or both, besides expense of adding new publications, and every new school that patronizes us will help us to sell still cheaper. Has any other publishing house shown any disposition to do the same? We are not the least afraid of the cry of "cheap, cheap." There hasn't been half enough said in that direction, for we not only sell cheap, but even stand ready to give away our goods where a trial does not demonstrate to the buyer that they are BETTER than others, no matter how dear. We employ the ablest writers and pay for all MSS., using more original matter than any two other publishers in this line, having employed and paid nearly two hundred writers during the past year, besides seven editors. Nothing partisan or sectarian admitted.

Lesson Helps. Such helps as will secure the best possible results from the study of the lesson. (Sold on trial, and if not better, no pay). A special teachers' help and scholars' help in five different grades. Credit for lesson preparation on the day-school plan. The song service of the school utilized in the interest of the lesson, by the introduction of purely lesson songs written expressly for us, and growing out of the lessons. The whole series in perfect keeping. Lesson hymns are arranged to sing at sight (without rehearsal) by the introduction of old and new tune combination. Saves cost of song books. Scholars' helps, with music and all, cost but 1½c. to 11c. a year. Teachers' helps, 18c. to 30c. a year. Circulation over one and one-fourth millions. Samples, etc., free.

Sunday-School Papers. OUR PLAN. 1st. Put as much matter into each paper as possible by setting in a fine, but clear and readable type. 2d. Use only the very best articles from the best pens. 3d. Make attractive to the reader, by beautiful illustrations, attractive titles, frequent paragraphing, etc. 4th. Make as useful as possible, introducing nothing without it has some good teaching in it. 5th. Furnish at prices based on an immense circulation. Fifteen different papers. Specimen copies free. No single subscriptions.

FIVE CENT PAPERS.—Four monthlies, at 5c. each per year, or 1¼c. per quarter, when bought in lots of five or more. Price 6c. each last year, now reduced to 5c., owing to increased circulation. Each paper contains as much matter as the average Sunday-school paper, and more than many.

SIX CENT WEEKLY.—The LITTLE LEARNER'S PAPER, a weekly paper for the infant class; costs but 6c. each a year, or 2 in a quarter, in lots of five or more. Other infant class papers cost from 18c. to 40c. a year. Contains the lesson with little lesson pictures: also one illustrated story in each number.

TEN CENT WEEKLY.—The SABBATH-SCHOOL WEEKLY, for the main school. In clubs at 10c. a year, or 3c per quarter. First issue began with April; contains as much matter as some papers costing 60c. a year, weekly. Five times cheaper than any other main school weekly published. A great boon to poor schools.

THIRTY CENT WEEKLY.—The WEEKLY MAGNET, an illustrated SERIAL WEEKLY paper for the main school. In clubs, at 30c. each per year, or 8c. per quarter. An immense thing—five times the matter of most Sunday-school papers (please count words); also a choice serial, running through the quarter. Nothing like it to keep up the attendance; invaluable as a means of doing good in the home, besides, in many cases, preventing the reading of bad books and papers. Other papers, with less than one fifth the matter, cost 50c. to 60c a year.

5c. Library Books. One hundred and thirty three library books now issued; one new one following each week. First 52 are reprints of best books written. Original price, from 60c. to $2.15, the whole 52 originally costing $57.45.

Volumes above No. 52 are partly reprints and partly written expressly for us. Each book printed without abridgment, in large, clear type, on good paper, bound in pamphlet form, wire stitched, and put up in a neatly engraved cover—a different style for each book. Far better for Sunday-school library use than the ordinary; being light and flexible, and wire stitched, will last three times as long. Being carefully selected beforehand, saves selection: books being numbered, and containing descriptive catalogue of the whole, saves numbers, catalogues and labels. A new book coming each week replenishes the library, with little trouble or expense. PRICES postpaid—Five or more books, 6 cents each; 10 or more, 5⅝ cents each; 20 or more, 5½ cents each; 30 or more, 5⅜ cents each; 50 or more, 5 cents each; 100 or more, 4¾ cents each; 200 or more, 4½ cents each.

7½c. Packages of S. S. Reward Cards. 25c. packages of reward cards for 7½c. New designs. No. 1. Poems for children, with pictures, glazed cards, assorted tints, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 2. Scripture text, with picture and verse of hymn, glazed cards, assorted tints, 48 cards, size 2⅝x3. No. 3. Beautiful chromatic card, floral design, short Scripture text, 64 cards, size 1⅝x1¾. No. 4. Scripture text, chromatic card, 96 cards, size 1¾x1¾. No. 5 Miniature Scripture text, colored designs, 192 cards size 7⅛x1½. No. 6. Precept, promise and verse of hymn, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 4¼x2¾. No. 7. Illuminated Scripture text and verse, beautiful chromatic designs, 12 cards, size 3½x1⅝. No. 8. The Lord's Prayer, floral border, glazed tinted board, 24 cards, size 3x4¼. No. 9. Ten Commandments, floral border, glazed and tinted, 12 double cards, size 4¼x6. No. 10. Band of Hope, triple pledge, beautiful chromatic card appropriately designed, 12 cards, size 3½x1¾. Prices, sample package, 10c.; three or more packages, 8½c. each; ten or more packages, 8c. each; twenty five or more packages, 7½c. each. Prices include postage.

Revolution Bibles. From "Oxford" plates. Teachers' Bibles, with concordance, encyclopedia, dictionary, tables, maps, etc.—most complete teachers' Bible extant, as low as $1.30, postpaid. Gilt edge, brass bound gift Bible, with clasp and tasseled book mark for 60c. postpaid. Magnificent gift Bible, new pattern, round corners, etc., for $1. 25, equal to any $1.50 gift Bible.

Lesson Commentary. On the International Lessons for 1882. Covering not only the lessons for the whole year, but the entire book of Mark, and accompanied by the "Revised Version Text," a revised reprint of the "Cambridge Scholars' Commentary." Prepared by G. F. Maclear, D. D., and J. J. S Perowne, D. D. Price, 10c., postpaid. 5 or more, 9c. each; 25 or more, 8c. each. Book is put up in strong postal card covers. No similar work for less than $1. We also publish at same rates a complete Bible Dictionary of two thousand complete articles, 512 columns, and nearly 100 illustrations. The "Teacher's Compendium," nine books on teaching, in one; The "Ideal Sunday-School;" "Sunday-School Management" (a choice book for teachers); "Word Pictures," and "Normal Half-Hours."

Holiday Lesson Calendar. For scholars and teachers. 12 beautiful chromatic cards, 5x8 inches, one for each month, containing the International Lessons for the whole year, the Home Readings, Memory Verses, lesson pictures, verses and maxims tending to promote nobler living, etc. The whole making a beautiful and inexpensive present for the whole school, or for a class. Punched for hanging up, sold at the following marvelously cheap prices: Single calendar (the 12 cards), 10c., 5 or more calendars, 8c. each; 25 or more calendars 6½c. each; 100 or more, 5½c. each. Ready in December.

Alphabets. FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S DECORATIONS, etc., etc., on good paper. Style 1 are printed in red. Style 2 in blue. Style 1 are eight inches long and proportionate width. Style 2 are six inches long and proportionate width. We send five alphabets of Style 2 for 25c., or five alphabets of Style 1 for 30c., 10 alphabets, five of each, for 50c.

Holiday Reward Books. Reprints of choicest $1 to $1 50 story books in holiday binding, 12 kinds from one to twenty-five copies at 12c. each postpaid—25 to 50, 11½c. each postpaid—50 to 100 copies, 11c. each postpaid—100 copies or more, 10½c. each postpaid. Imported Holiday reward books from 5c. up to $1. Send cash for samples, stating prices.

35c. Sunday-School Record Book. THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL ENGINEER. Space for 50 classes, reports for each Sun ay in the year, cabinet of printing press helps, containing 96 blanks—all for 35c. by mail, postpaid.

A POSTAL FROM MISS WILLARD.

En Route in Arkansas, Jan. 28th.

Of all the proofs that "Home Protection" is the way out, Arkansas is the most shining and unanswerable. Last winter the Legislature gave women the right to vote by signature against dramshops. To day the "State of pistols and bowie-knives" (as Arkansas is called) has three-fourths of its towns under prohibitory law. "Haste to the rescue," dear women, and tarry not in all the plain.

FRANCES E. WILLARD.

MISS WILLARD and the officers of the W. N. C. T. U., have issued a circular rebutting the charge made by the WIFEBEATERS ORGANS, that the late convention was captured by the "female suffragists." If such a capture had been made by the temperance advocates of woman suffrage, it would seem to be an eminently fortunate incident. It is to be hoped the captives will be allowed parole and all the privileges of "civilized" warfare.

A HEAVY LOAD to carry was Gov. St John when the Republican Party of Kansas renominated him for Governor. So said the polyangular politicians, with his prohibition sentiments he would defeat any party that should take him up. Result, his majority on election day was 21,000 higher than any previous governor of Kansas had ever received. In the large edition of next week a glorious speech of Gov. St John delivered in Brooklyn Jan. 22, will be reproduced.

BEING an ardent advocate of how to spell, light is requested from the orthodox orthograffers as to how it is that throug hout, or throu-ghout, or thro-ughout, or thr-ough out, or thro-wout. or thr-ewout spell thru-out so much better than thruout itself does. Let us have a good sensible reason; same time, why buty wants any more letters than duty.

A correspondent of the Topeka Commonwealth writes from Eureka as follows: During the last three terms of court in Greenwood county the criminal cases have been from three to five per term, while in past years there have been from fifteen to twenty-five, Judge Graves is given as authority that the same proportion holds good in each county in his district, which is attributed to the prohibition amendment and law.

In Parsons, Kansas, one E. P. Marvin, Proprietor of the Belmont House, and leader of the club of outlaws there, was so strongly of the opinion that prohibition was a failure in the state, that it took $2000 in fines and costs to convince him of his error. The Kansas Methodist says quite a number of saloonkeepers in the jails of Kansas, are under the impression that prohibition prohibits. Yet the rum fed papers are still harping lies on the old string.

BRO. KING'S work for this month looks rather smaller than usual; reason, he has been for a good part of it confined to bed with that wretchedly dispiriting sickness, chills and fever. But by. last accounts he was better and hopes to be out in a few days. It is dry season up there too, so far.

THE first to respond to the circular addressed by the ex-Com. of Grand Lodge to the W. V. Ts. was Miss Mary Lee, of Savanah, with a club of 6; next Mrs. S. A, Lawry of Forest City with 20. The holidays are now over and it is hoped we may have at least 100 new subscribers every week during the year. Better send them along and not drive us to the desperate resort of borrowing Mrs. Pinkhams picture.

BRO. HINMAN of Twilight Lodge, Walnut Creek writes that it is hard work there working against six saloons—one for every ten families, but they expect hard work will enable the Good Templars to win the day. One of the best articles against those six saloons would be to put a temperance paper into each of the 60 families. They can get that many papers for one days rum money. and it would enable the community to save at least $60 or $70 every other day of the year. When it is nip and tuck, as Bro. H. says, they want temperance literature to keep nip from winning.

A PUBLIC-HOUSE census was taken in Bristol, on a Saturday evening last month, by the temperance societies. The city was divided into fifty districts, an enumerator being stationed at the door of each licensed house. According to the returns nearly 105,000, or one-half the population of the city, entered these places during the four hours between 7 and 11 o'clock—54,074 men, 36,803 women and 13,415 children.—Chronicle.

That is an apalling exhibit of the universally debauching influence of the grogshop, and still there are people who want them open on Sunday. Think of all the horrible sequence of 50,000 women and children visiting the dens of crime on one evening in Bristol to say nothing of the 54,000 men.

LOS ANGELES CO. DISTRICT LODGE.

The District meetings are growing in interest and importance in this county. The next is appointed for El Monte, at 10 A. M., on 22nd Feb. 1882, a holiday, Washington's birthday. My observation during a thoro canvass of the lodges and county make it of the highest importance that every lodge be fully represented and send full statistics. This quarter several new lodges have been instituted and united counsel and work will speedily lead to others. El Monte and Savanah Lodges are preparing for a good number of delegates and at night El Monte will give a grand entertainment—public of course, with music, speaking, etc. J. W. WEBB, Lecturer.

DIXON, Feb. 6, 1882.

The Solano County District Lodge met at Dixon, Feb. 3d. Bro. Frazier, District Deputy Chief Templar, came up on Thursday, and entered energetically upon the work of preparation. The Dixon Temperance Union, an open temperance organization of about seventy members, having learned of the expected meeting of the District Lodge, invited its delegates to meet in union mass meetings with them on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights, which invitation was readily accepted. G. W. C. T. Thompson was informed of contemplated meetings, and dispatched Col. Babcock, of San Francisco, to champion our cause, and right nobly did he come to the rescue. I regard him as the most intelligent and able advocate of the cause I have yet met in the state. He is more than a Colonel. He is a General, brave, courageous and wise. The meetings were held in the M. E. church on Friday and Sunday nights, and in the Presbyterian on Saturday night, the congregations filling the houses. Thirty-one persons gave their names as candidates for initiation into the lodge of Good Templars at Dixon. On Sabbath afternoon, by invitation of your correspondent, Col. Babcock spoke to a large assembly at Binghamton, and at the close of the address, thirty-two gave their names to become charter members of a new lodge, which will be instituted next Thursday. So we have a genuine temperance revival in this community, which has given our well-nigh discouraged lodge new heart. God bless Col. Babcock. May his lips ever press the temperance trumpet, which we know will never give an uncertain sound while his brain and heart are back of it.

J. L. TREFREN.

The writer of the foregoing is the pastor of the M. E. church at Dixon. As he has spoken of my efforts in such complimentary terms, and refused me the privilege of changing his communication, I can only say that his devotion to the cause and his modesty has prevented him from seeing that the results attributed to me, are very largely due to himself. Without his zealous and able co-operation the most gratifying results could not have been secured. The earnest and energetic supervision of the Dist. Deputy cannot be stated in too complimentary terms. Much is also due to him. The work in this district is in safe hands. GEO. BABCOCK.

BRO. N. D. Hulse reports Eureka Lodge as having over 100 and gaining members every night, with few losses. Good for Humboldt County.

A package of papers of next issue, Feb. 16th, will be sent to every lodge of this jurisdiction and of Oregon that has been reported at this office and it is hoped that the L. D. and officers will in accordance with the decision of Grand Lodge furnish a copy to each of the members of their lodges.

JUNE LODGE No. 321 near Yuba City presented Mr. and Mrs. Lee Douglas with a handsome pictorial family Bible and Mrs. M. E. More the L. D. made them a pleasant and excellent address, recognizing their faithful service of 8 and 12 years respectively in June Lodge and conveying the good wishes of the membership on their departure to a new home.

REV. P. POWERS, S. D. of Chico, desires to organize several other colored lodges and Bands of Hope up in that vicinity; but railroad fares are high and walking is toilsome at this season. He returns thanks to Rev. C. A. Bateman and other friends at Marysville, for valuable help in his late visit and labor there. In the spring, we shall doubtless hear of some new incursions by Bro. Powers into the enemy's country. He is evidently a practical and successful as well as an active worker.

REFERRING to no journal in particular but to a good many in general, a visitor from another planet to this earth might feel surprised at the large amount and variety of quack medicine deemed necessary by so many religious and temperance papers to make their contents sit lightly on the stomachs of their readers.

TWENTY-ONE HISTORIC LANDMARKS.

One of the most excellent pamphlets has just been issued by the N. T. Society, from the pen of Dr. B. W. Richardson. It treats of every phase of the temperance reform. No. 1 will be found in this number of the RESCUE. Send 10 cents and get it from J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St., New York. It is a twenty-four page pamphlet, and tells of all the discoveries that have been made as to the question of alcohol, and reviews all the advances made by temperance reformers.

A MURDER and a suicide in Sacramento on Monday; the latter a ruined young girl. Hurry up the anti-mormon legislation.

THE Spuyton Duyvil disaster was caused by rum as usual. The drunken rowdies elected from the city of New York to its legislature, were returning home from Albany; and one of them, while the customary carousal of such occasions was at its hight, pulled the cord attached to the air brakes and stopped the train. Before it got started again, the collision occurred. As is often the case too, the innocent were the sufferers and the drunks whose removal would have been a blessing, escaped.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.—SANTA CRUZ, February 6.—On Saturday night Jacob Barth was found lying on Front street, outside the back door of Christy & Handly (the parties arrested last week for violation of the Sunday law), and locked up for drunkenness. Later it was found that he had been drugged and robbed, and a warrant was issued for the arrest of George Saunders for the crime. Constable Clark started this morning for Watsonville, where Saunders was reported to have gone in company with a lewd woman. Clark followed him to Salinas and brot him back to-night.—Chronicle

THAT is a fair sample of the work of the leag of wifebeaters, is it not? What a pity it would be to interfere with these nice, foreign institutions running on Sunday.

IT IS said that on Monday, "when nobody was paying attention to what was going on," Mr. Burrows got a bill passed in the House of Representatives, providing that no bigamist or polygamist shall be elected as a territorial delegate. When the members found out what had happened they had a burst of laughter. The Chronicle dont like it, don't see where the laugh comes in. It seems quite reasonable that they should laugh at a bill which wars against the polygamy of Utah, and recognizes as harmless the infinitely worse and more extended polygamy that prevails all round the homes of the people who are clamoring for vengeance on the modification and improvement of the prevalent system which has been adopted in Utah. A bill to restrict polygamy that does not apply to all the States and reach the broader and deeper and viler polygamy that is winked at, unresisted and unreproved in almost every locality, great and small, where a grogshop has found a place, deserves to be laughed at as a broad exhibition of the meanest hypocrisy.

MORALITY AND MISERY.—This is how the Huntington Advertiser preaches morality and misery alternately: "Be sure that you do not stray from the paths of rectitude and temperance during the Christmas festivities."

"HOTEL AND SALOON, ———, proprietor.—The bar is stocked with the choicest of liquors, wines, etc. Guests will be shown every attention."

"Our exchanges are all full of murders, suicides, robberies, etc., and crime seems to be on the increase in all portions of the United States."

Considering these three items as logic, the premise is sound, but the argument is outrageous and the conclusion at once inevitable and lamentable."—W. Va. Freeman.

Another sign of the growing demoralization is the fact that people of all classes tolerate the daily papers, which have the brazen effrontery to come into the family, reeking with advertisements of groggeries and beer dives and beer garden prostitute factories, and every class of filthiness and quackery and fraud, that will pay the advertizers of vice and nastiness a few dollars a month, to assist in debauching the sons and daughters of the state. Some of these servants of the drunkard makers ornament their pages with a picture of a big bottle of whisky or champagne with a recommendation of it, which they know to be a lie and a cheat, and its makers and sellers, robbers and murderers. Somebody will say this is intemperate language; so it is, if it is not true; but the language that is intemperate, is that which puts a coat of whitewash on the liar and cheat and debauching vendor of pernicious and obscene literature.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institu ion. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. Carpenter, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

PATENTS

We continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, etc., for the United States, Canada, Cuba, England, France, Germany, etc. We have had thirty-five years' experience.

Patents obtained through us are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN. This large and splendid illustrated weekly paper, $3.20 a year, shows the Progress of Science, is very interesting, and has an enormous circulation. Address MUNN & CO., Patent Solicitors, Pub's, of SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, 37 Park Row, New York. Hand book about Patents free.

CONTRACTS TAKEN

To sow every town "knee deep" with Temperance Literature,

At 5 cents a head, without any labor on the part of society or individual, by means of our Class Papers and post-office delivery system.

We furnish papers (not tracts), send them out addressed, wrapped and mailed separately every month for a year to each individual, for 5 cents a year—or semi-monthly for 10 cents a year. Each paper contains 6,000 words, the matter of a $1.50 book in a year's issues, all for 6 cents—eighteen different papers to choose from, each for a special class of readers or special field of work. Thus for $5, one hundred persons can be reached every month for a year, and the individual or society is to no trouble distributing. Every one will subscribe if asked, when it is only 5 cents a year; or the expense to society for a whole town is trifling. Sample of each, and full particulars for 10 cents. We publish Band of Hope supplies including weekly paper, library, badges, pledges, certificates, pledge rolls, etc., so cheap that penny collections pay expenses, (sample outfit sent for 25 cents, full particulars free), also a whole library of $1.00 temperance story books at 2 cents each, (samples of three numbers for 10 cents). Temperance posters ½ c. each; samples of six for 5 cents; many other supplies, all at prices suited to general distribution. Address,

WANTED

150 NEW SUBSCRIBERS FOR THE RESCUE every week of January, February and March. Every person who reads it could very easily get one other to take it who does not. The contest is now waxing warmer every day, and the best work that can be done for the moral and financial welfare of the whole people, is to educate the people on the question of the suppression of the GROGSHOP.

The Beer and Rum mills have always been outlaws, but now they are in open rebellion against the law, and are threatening all sorts of vengeance against such of the American people as will not bow submissively to the dominion of a league of malefactors and criminals. The paper that does not openly and directly advocate prohibition of the crime factories, is on the side of the enemy, and is no friend to the people.

ADVERTISING MATTERS. It is of very great importance to establish the fact that the RESCUE is a good advertising medium—if it is a fact and true. It will confer not only a favor but a positive benefit upon this paper and the financial interests of the Grand Lodge, if all who are induced by seeing the advertisements in this paper, to make purchases or enquiries about purchases of the articles offered therein, will mention to the advertisers that they were directed to them by seeing the advertisement in the RESCUE. Please dont forget that nor the other fact that no man can buy an advertisement in the RESCUE at any price who is not a square, reputable and reliable dealer.

PROHIBITION VOTE.—Ohio cast 16,597 and Wisconsin 13,225, Pa. and N. Y. 4,512 and 4,445 votes last year for prohibition strait. And the great old temperance State of Massachusetts has had her people so debauched with beer that they only voted 1,640 for a temperance party.

DAVID C. COOK.—A full and lengthy advertizement of Mr. Cook's periodicals appears in this issue, which it is hoped will be attentively scanned over. There is something there to interest every one of us; something that every body wants and would be delighted to have if they knew what it is—and the price is so trifling. Be sure to scan it over and send for what suits you.

THE VIEW at the Golden Gate Academy, Oakland, is most enchanting; and if there is anything in nature calculated to lead the mind to a contemplative mood and take in its beauties, it is to be found right there where parts of seven counties can be seen and no one who has a conception of the beautiful, need ever be despondent or longing for a change while pursuitg their studies in this homelike institution.

33½ PER CENT.—One of the customers in an adjoining state writes to the San Francisco Cash Grocery as follows: "My goods came safely to hand in good order, and gave entire satisfaction. When I want again, shall send to you for them, as I save 33¼ per cent by doing so.

SUBSCRIBERS this week. Delton Wis. 1; Napa 1; Murphys (A. J. Cooke) 4; Red Bluff 1; Colusa 1; Butte City (Eunice Roberts) 12; Oroville 1; Livermore 1; Rocklin (Mrs. R. A. Mills) 6; Chico 1; Ophir 1; Norwalk and Duarte (J. W. Webb) 2; Pleasant (Grove Mary E. Trevathan) 8; Dixon 2; Mok Hill 1; Copperopolis 4; Angels Camp 2; Evansville Ind. 1; Drytown 1; (the last 9 from C. Duffy). In all 51.

ONE of the canvassers for advertisements for this edition was asked about the circulation of the paper, when a travelling agent of the house, who was present, spoke up and said, "I can assure you in my travels over the state, I meet with that RESCUE everywhere I go.

One more County in Nova Scotia has adopted the prohibitory Scott Act by a large majority and the vote will soon be taken in St. John New Brunswick. Professor Foster is working the case up there and he will make things lively for the rummies wherever he goes.

THE railroad Syndicate blister which the Canadian Government recently applied to the backs of the Canadian people is already beginning to draw with such effect that the patients are squealing. Wait till it stays on for five years, for ten years. Oh that wont be joyful!

LINCOLN reports thru Miss Pet Boyden, formation of a Band of Hope, to meet once a week, which "proposes to address itself to social enjoyment, literary culture, and to some extent to dramatic entertainments; Gerard Peters, Supt." It is hoped the Band will find time for some temperance instruction as well.

FRESNO.—Bro. King says a notice was sent to this office, of meeting of Fresno District Lodge, by the D. D., three or four weeks ago, and it never appeared. As notices of all D. L. meetings are invited for publication in this paper, no other reason could exist for its non-appearance, than that it never reached this office; or if it did, it must have been mysteriously lost.

Amador District Lodge has elected a Dist. Supt. of Juvenile work, and voted to pay the expenses of the D. D. to visit every lodge in the district. Good for Amador. That is all there is room to say this week.

THE "CALL" thinks the Chronicle has not been paid any money by either the Railroad Company or Claus Spreckles to speak well of them. Is that considered the only condition of keeping quiet upon the subject of public wrongs, and abuses and robberies of the people? If so, about how much money is considered a fair price for silence?

CARDINAL MANNING, in his address before a large temperance meeting at Oldham. England, said that Scotland, Ireland and Wales had, one after the other, won a Sunday closing bill, and that, altho the struggle would be more severe in England, the time was fast approaching when the force of public sentiment in England would compel the public houses to keep shut on Sunday.—Ex.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 3, 1882.

ED. RESCUE:—I am rejoiced to see the subscribers rolling in to the RESCUE, for it is a true index of the steady advance of our cause. Temperance workers are fast learning that knowledge is power. Now, if there ever was a time when the RESCUE should be supported, that its warning voice should be heard on every hearth and in every home in the land, it is now; for a most important battle is now being fought. Each subscriber is an unsheathed sword that glitters in the field, it is not alone our great duty, but it should be our pride to support this paper, as we would a banner on the battle field; in truth it is a cannon. Temperance aside, the RESCUE is an ably edited paper, and will compare favorably in ability with any on the Pacific Coast, and I would recommend its outstretched hand to those who are looking aloft, and are interested in the moral culture of mankind.

Grand Lecturer Webb is doing a mighty work for temperance in Southern California. His sleepless vigilance and inspiring energy are crowned with success: Lodges and Bands of Hope are springing up in all directions under his able management. A lady once entered a room unperceived, in which Mozart was playing a grand piece on the piano: When he had finished she exclaimed, "Why, Mozart, you are inspired." "Yes," he replied, "but its thundering hard work." Now, Elder Webb may be inspired, but he is doing some "thundering hard work." If devotion, determination and never-say-failism are qualities that should be found in a temperance speaker, then Bro. Webb is master of the situation. Respectfully, "OBSERVER."

MONEY LOST.

Many persons lose money by not buying for cash. One of the best places to patronize for family supplies, is the San Francisco Cash Grocery, 519 Post St. S. F. Cal.

FIRST-CLASS AGENTS WANTED.

The great reputation of JOHN B. GOUGH, the magnificent make-up of "Sunlight and Shadow," and the universal demand for it among all classes, makes this the best opportunity ever offered to energetic agents to make money. We want first-class agents in every township, to whom liberal terms will be given. Address, for territory and terms, J. Dewing & Co., 420 Bush St., San Francisco.

HISTORIC LANDMARKS.

BY B. W. RICHARDSON, M. D., F. R. S.

II.—ALCOHOL—WHAT IS IT?

Then another point has been brought out. When the idea of spirit was brought forward, and we talked of the strength that was in beers, wines and spirits, it was thot that this one particular alcohol or spirit was the only thing of its kind. Men of science knew better, but the general impression was, and is to some extent still, that the substance which we call spirit is a thing alone of itself, that it stands as tho there was nothing else like it. Now, I hope we have pretty fairly imbued the nation with the fact that this spirit of wine is only one of a great family; that there are an immense number of alcohols—dozens, in fact—some derived from wood, some from wheat, the potato spirit, and so on—all bodies of the same chemical family, and not in any way distinct, except by the simple accidents of taste, and weight, and a few other physical varieties, from that alcohol which we drink. As Professor Gladstone has pointed out, it is a mere accident that this came into common use—this alcohol from grain. It might have been any other alcohol that came first into play. We now know that this is not one of the special things coming to us as a distinctive thing, but as one of a family, and has only come into use or habit, as it were, by accident.

III.—ALCOHOL NOT A FOOD.

Another point. I do not think we have fairly brot out what is the positive effect of this particular alcohol we take in this sense—that it can in no way be considered a food. We have shown that foods are substances that either make up the great mass of the body like water, which exists to about seventy-five per cent, or substances which build up the tissues like albumen, egg, cheese, meats, etc. They are substances that burn in the body like fat and oil and starch and sugar, which go to produce animal warmth, and keep up the vital fire, or substances which go to make up the bony structure. We have shown that alcohol does not belong to water, and there is nothing in alcohol chemically which it can represent in regard to meat substances, and the same with the structures which fill up the skeleton of the body. Thus, when we ask whether this agent can be classed with the foods which keep up the animal warmth, we find that its imbibition reduces the animal temperature, and prevents the creation of those products which come from the burning of the body. Therefore, so far as alcohol is concerned, we can positively affirm that it is no food at all, that it produces exceptional effects upon the body, but it is no more a food than chloroform and ether or anything of the kind are foods.

TEMPERANCE COLONIES IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

BY J. W. WEBB.

Ed Rescue,—For your special edition of 20,000 I send an epitome of the several Temperance Colonies or communities that I have visited in Southern California. I cannot undertake to answer letters of enquiry about these places for I am constantly traveling and have too much correspondence for the press and about my lecture appointments and work and am not in the land and home advertising business. I will name some person at each place who may reply to bona fide letters of inquiry, if a stamp be encluded, but I have no permission to so name them and they may not thank me for taking the liberty.

Lompoc Temperance Colony, in Santa Barbara Co. a coast valley on the Santa Inez River, half way between San Luis Obispo and Santa Barbara, is my present home and I have the honor of being one of its founders. It is a wonder how it has grown in 7 years from an immense sheep and cattle farm to a prosperous settlement of over 1,000 people. It now has six School Districts and houses with a $5,000 house in town; a good weekly paper, fair and square for temperance; a neat church house, stores, a large hall, etc. We have excellent society, the best of attendance and programs at our Literary and Musical Society and open temperance meetings. We have two strong Good Templar Lodges in our valley, one each of Oddfellows, Masons, Knights of Pythias and Grange. The great attraction that has brought so many from almost all the states of the Union is the great fertility of soil and variety of agricultural and dairy products and the fact that every piece of land sold or rented has been on the express written condition that no intoxicating liquor, shall ever be sold thereon. Public sentiment has grandly sustained that principle and no saloon has ever been able to hold a footing there; two have been tried but earthquakes or Nihilists from Russia with Nitroglycerine tumbled them over. It need hardly be said that we have no poverty, crime or extra taxation thru drink. Mr. Geo. Roberts is the Land Agent and E. A. Gregg is Lodge Deputy.

Compton near Los Angeles city, on the R. R. once had a saloon but the strong winds (or strong hands ?) tumbled it over. It is everywhere noted for its intelligence, sobriety, and harmony; good M. E. Church and school. I have just organized a strong Good Templars Lodge with 72 charter members of the influential citizens and families. Some fellow is talking of building a saloon just outside town, he applied to a gentleman to do the carpenter work but was refused in this language, "No, sir, I can get plenty of decent work to do." It is well adapted to dairying; from the alfalfa they cut four to seven crops of hay per year and overflowing artesian wells are numerous. Mr. Harshman, an excellent business man and a christian, temperance gentleman, has a good and rapidly growing cheese factory and buys all the milk the farmers bring. Deciduous fruits do well. Like some other parts of Los Angeles county, it has some alkali land but it is said alfalfa and beets for cow feed will grow thereon. Rev. J. B. Green pastor M. E. Church and H. N. Newark, merchant are leading members of the lodge.

Artesia, in the same county and near R. R., has never had a saloon; farming community, as name indicates, flowing wells are common; raises grain, alfalfa and good fruit; has a fine two-story schoolhouse and M. E. church; several other denominations preach regularly. Good Band of Hope, Mr. S. H. Olmstead, Supt. Hope soon to organize a good, strong lodge.

Westminster, same county, was started as a Presbyterian Temperance colony; but now has also Congregational and M. E. churches. Good society, good school, Band of Hope and strong lodge. No saloon; some fellow started one, but was so much despised, and so poorly patronized as to be soon "frozen out" and he left. Fruit, alfalfa, grain and excellent raisins produced. Some alkali land, fine flowing wells. Rev. Robt. Strong, I believe, is agent for sale of land.

Tustin, near the flourishing town of Santa Ana, which is destined to be the county seat of a new county, is a quiet, orderly community, with many Eastern people. Oranges, walnuts, raisins and deciduous fruits flourish; water for irrigation is abundant. Mr. L Utt keeps the only store, but no liquor, and closes all day on Sunday. A church house, good schools and some beautiful residences and well kept gardens and grounds, make it very attractive. It is near the railroad. It has a good Band of Hope, Mrs. H. K. Snow, Supt.

Florence, between Comption and Los Angeles is quite a nice place and with its artesian wells, fruits, and alfalfa, quiet and harmonious society, M. E. church and school, and absence of saloon, resembles Compton. Am sorry to say that some parties contemplate setting out 1500 acres of grapes for wine and brandy. If they do, drinking and demoralization will surely follow, and its attractiveness and fair fame be marred. And what a pity when it is demonstrated that raisin grapes pay best. My namesake, Mr. B. G. Webb is Postmaster. Ought to be a lodge and Band of Hope here.

Orange, on the R. R., is a beautiful place, devoted to the culture of oranges, limes, lemons, raisins, walnuts, apricots and other deciduous fruits, having water for irrigation. It has Presbyterian and M. E. churches, Revs. Halliday and Nixon the respective pastors. An excellent school is taught by Prof. Norton and Mr. Armor, temperance men. There is no saloon, no liquor sold at the stores, no bar at the first class, homelike hotel kept by Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, fine Christian people. Here again, it is proven that raisin grapes pay better than wine. It is a grand sight to see the thousands of boxes of the handsomest raisins I ever saw, put up by McPherson Bros. and others. It is asserted that a family can make a good living on 20 acres of land here with raisin grapes, oranges, deciduous fruits and alfalfa for the horses and cow and chickens. W. A. Bartley is agent for the Rescue and a good correspondent. The lodge is strong and intends to build a good hall soon. Perhaps Bro. Beach is as well posted as any one here, about the place, its productions, adaptibility and prospects.

Pasadena is far famed for its beauty of situation, orange groves, good society and absence of liquor selling. It has two churches, M. E. and Presbyterian. Bro. Farnsworth, pastor of the former, is a Good Templar, and Rev. Mr. Butte, of the other, is a strong temperance man, but has "conscientious scruples against joining a secret society." They have a Lodge here but I am sorry to say it is treated to some opposition and a great deal of apathy on the part of the older and more influential people. The Band of Hope has been allowed to die and I could get no encouragement to start it again. There is a great deal of temperance sentiment but it is not crystalized or unified or publicly cultivated. I was informed but three copies of the Rescue are subscribed for in the whole colony; to Temperance Lectures but moderate audiences can be secured. The majority feel secure because there is no saloon and those who indulge in drinking bring it in from abroad and do not use it excessively or publicly. But people are coming in rapidly and young men are growing up and need to be induced to enlist in the temperance ranks for their own safety and the increase of public sentiment on the right side. Am glad Revs. Farnsworth and Butte contemplate co-operating with the Lodge in holding open temperance Sunday meetings, monthly. That will help. Something must be done or some dirty, disreputable fellow will slip in a liquor selling establishment and once more it will be seen that the reverse of the general rule is true—the supply creates the demand. The M. E. Sunday school takes 20 copies of the Youth's Temperance Banner. Dr. Congar publicly states that his raisins netted him, after paying for the work $115 per acre!

Duarte, about five miles from El Monte R. R. station, is a very pleasant place, both for situation and clever, sociable and harmonious people. No saloon, no liquor sold at store; the gentlemanly storekeeper being greatly offended when some one reported that he did sell it. He didn't want to be thot that kind of a man. A good school is taught by a Christian temperance gentleman, Mr. McDowel; preaching every Sunday. I started a good Band of Hope there with Mr. Young Supt. and Miss Helen Shrode, Sec.; also received an application for a Lodge, signed by 35 of the best citizens and their families. Before this is in print Bro. Gould will have organized it.

Ojai Valley, in Ventura Co., has no saloon or bar. It is exceedingly beautiful and fertile. Its elevation above the sea makes it an exceptional climate for consumptives and bronchial troubles and a health and pleasure resort for Californian and Eastern people. A brick school house is used for Lodge and church etc. The Valley is reached from Santa Barbara or Ventura. At the town of Nordhoff, Bro. F. Barrows keeps an excellent hotel.

Pine Grove, near Central City in Santa Barbara Co. has no saloons nor liquor selling stores. Over a year ago some of the leading men, some of the hard drinkers, pledged each other to total abstinence and then began to presuade young and old to do the same. They started a local secret society called the "Pledge of Honor" and nearly all the residents are members and when I was last there they had begun to make inroads on neighboring valleys. Hon. Joel Cooper, who once represented the county in the Legislature, a lawyer, is President. He and Capt. Whitford, the (——?) teacher, Coleman Stubblefield and others take the lead and at their open meetings make ringing speeches while the singing and readings by the young ladies and gentlemen make it lively and edifying. It numbered about 100 when I last heard. They have a good school and stated preaching.

Santa Rita, eight miles from Lompoc, is the last but not least that I recollect. They tolerate no liquor selling, have a good school and building, preaching, Sunday school, Lodge and fine open meetings. It is a good, clever community, settled on what they call Government land. If it prove such, it will make a very good neighborhood. It rises fine barley, wheat, "garden sass" and children.

GOVERNOR ST. JOHN.

"Call it "St. John's luck" if you will, but the fact remains that he is rising in the estimation of the people of the country at large, faster than any one else. And he is rising because he is an aggressive leader of an element that is bound to rule the nation. That he will be a leading candidate for the Presidency in 1884, we have no doubt, and if he has the sagacity to take the stand on the monopoly question which the times demand, his chances of success will be better than those of any other man—and, even if defeated in 1884, he will be almost certain to triumph four years later."—Nationalist, Ks.

There is probably not one man in the United States who would get such a sweeping popular majority for President in 1884, as Governor St. John—if the people could vote untrammeled by party fetters and unbewitched by the enchantments of political machinists. Why cant the moral, good citizenship, the real voice of the American people, nominate their man for once, and boom him into the White House.

TEMPERANCE WORK.

When I think of all that is done by the strong souls of earth for the less strong, I wonder that there is a drunkard or an ignoble one in the city, or state or U. S. All the societies for brotherly help, the fine lectures, pleasant socials and good reading offered as moral props; all the natural incentives to good lives, and the penalties to the bad, it is amazing how any can fall.

The lodges, pledges and vigilance of the temperance people ought to exorcise the heredity of generations of evil.

I used to think that nothing new could be said on the temperance question; that it was as threadbare as the coats of the topers; but there are continual, living incidents against the use of strong drink, that would form arguments for an original lecture every hour in the day; and we only have to look out upon the street to pick up the facts; we do not have to enter the saloons, for the results are sown broadcast.

Only yesterday I heard a lady who likes wine say that she did not think temperance societies did much good; inebriate homes were better; and I thot if it were not for temperance societies, how many inebriate homes there would have to be—one in place of each temperance society, think of it, what a fearful state that would be! and how many homes would be nothing better than an inebriate asylum, where father or brother or husband or child could go and hide his shame.

Not long since, we saw a well dressed, good looking boy reeling out of a saloon to go home to his mother in a maudlin condition that was dangerous, navigating the crowded streets; but the saloon keeper had got all he wanted, the boy's money. Any one that will traffic in sin of course does not care to be worried with the results.

Let us have all the reform work we can; but let it be consistent. "Consistency is a jewel;" inconsistency is not. Reformers who work for abstinence from intoxicating liquor, should themselves abstain from indulgence in tobacco; and hold a moral character above suspicion, that none may be able to turn and throw stones at the cause. BETH.

THE BIBLE ON WOMAN.

FROM SERMON BY MR. TALMAGE IN "CHRISTIAN HERALD."

Mr. Ingersoll caricatures and denounces the bible because, he says, there is not a word in the Old Testament but is and then he picks up the bible and reads a few verses in the New Testament to show that the bible all the way thru is the degradation of woman. Come now, let us see. Come into the picture gallery, the Louvre, the Luxembourg of the bible, and see which pictures are the most honored. Here is Eve, a perfect woman, as perfect a woman as could be made by a perfect God. Here is Deborah, with her womanly arm hurling a host into the battle. Here is Miriam, leading the Israelitish orchestra on the banks of the Red Sea.

Here is Ruth, putting to shame all the modern slang about mothers-in-law as she turns her back on her home and her country, and faces wild beasts and exile and death, that she may be with Naomi, her husband's mother. Ruth, the queen of the harvest fields. Ruth, the grandmother of David. Ruth, the ancestress of Jesus Christ. The story of her virtues and her life sacrifice the most beautiful pastoral ever written.

Here is Vashti, defying the bacchanal of a thousand drunken lords, and Esther, willing to thro her life away that she may deliver her people. And here is Dorcas, the sunlight of eternal flame gilding her philanthropic needle, and the woman with perfume in a box made from the hills of alabastron, pouring the holy chrism on the head of Christ, the aroma lingering all down the corridor of the centuries. Here is Lydia, the merchantess of Tyrian purple, immortalized for her Christian behavior.

O, how the bible hates women! Who has more worshippers to-day than any being that ever lived on earth, except Jesus Christ? Mary, For what purpose did Christ peform His first miracle upon earth? To relieve the embarrasssment of a womanly housekeeper at the falling short of a beverage. Why did Christ break up the silence of the tomb, and tear off the shroud and rip up the rocks? It was to stop the bereavement of

THE TWO BETHANY SISTERS.

For whose comfort was Christ most anxious in the hour of dying excruciation? For a woman, an old woman, a wrinkled-faced woman, a woman who in other days had held Him in her arms, His first friend, His last friend, as is very apt to be, His mother. All the pathos of the ages compressed into one utterance, "Behold thy mother." O, how the Bible hates women!

If the Bible is so antagonistic to woman, how do you account for the difference in women's condition in China and Central Africa, and her condition in England and America? There is no difference except that which the Bible makes. In lands where there is no Bible, she is hitched like a beast of burden to the plow, she carries the hod, she submits to indescribable indignities. She must be kept in a private apartment and if she come forth she must be carefully hooded and religiously veiled as though it were a shame to be a woman.

Do you not know that the very first thing the Bible does when it comes into a new country is to strike off the shackles of women's serfdom? O! woman, where are your chains to-day? Hold up both your arms and let us see your handcuffs. O! we see the handcuffs; they are bracelets of gold bestowed by husbandly, or fatherly, or brotherly, or sisterly, or loverly affection. Unloosen the warm robe from your neck, O! woman, and let us see the yoke of your bondage. O! I find the yoke is a carcenet of silver, or a string of cornelians, or a cluster of pearls that must gall you very much. How bad you must all have it!

Since you put the Bible on your stand in the sitting room, has the Bible been to you, O woman! a curse or a blessing? Why is it that a woman when she is in trouble will go to her worst enemy, the Bible? Why do you not go for comfort to some of the great infidel books, Spinoza's Ethics or Hume's Natural History of Religion, or Paine's Age of Reason, or Dedro's dramas, or any one of the two hundred and sixty volumes of Voltaire? No, the silly deluded woman persists in hanging about the Bible verses, "Let not your heart be troubled," "All things work together for good," "Weeping may endure for a night," "I am the resurrection," "Peace, be still." Why do more women read the Bible than men? Because while the Bible is a good book for a man, it is a better book for a woman, and it has done her more good and more kindness, and brot her more grace. The Bible is a friend of man; it is a better friend to woman.

Just read some of the cruel injunctions this Bible gives in regard to woman. See how the Scriptures maltreat her case. "Honor thy mother," "Husbands love your wives even as Christ loved the church and gave Himself for it," "Let them"—that is, the male converts—"let them learn first to show piety at home," She hath done what she could."

Ah! you know there is not a person in all the house to-day but knows that the Bible is woman's emancipation, woman's eulogy, woman's joy, woman's heaven, and yet, Mr. Ingersoll stands in the presence of an audience and declares that the Bible is woman's shame, woman's degradation, woman's enemy, and one thousand idiots clap their hands in commendation!

THE IDIOTIC LIE OF MODERATE DRINKING.

A few days ago I heard a lady who is the mother of grown up daughters, beautiful and pure as any in the State, say, "I see no harm in drinking so long as the practice is not abused. It is not drinking, but excessive drinking" (and she put great stress upon the word "excessive") that ruins people. "For my part, I own I am rather partial than others to a moderate use of wine; and I even believe stronger drinks may be cautiously indulged without harm; and sometimes, even with real benefit to the drinker. I drink it myself because I feel it is to me, and I believe it is to many others, a needed stimulant. I have even taken stronger beverages, and can truly say I have never yet experienced the least injury, or been intoxicated by it in the slightest degree."

Misguided, foolish woman, how little she knows of the nature of wine or other liquors! Wines and all other intoxicating (poisonous) liquors—not decoctions—are inert the moment they are cleansed of alcohol. It is the alcohol contained in them which intoxicates, poisons. It is the alcohol contained in them which creates the appetite for them. This alcohol is a double acting poison. Upon the mucous membranes it is an irritant poison; upon the tissues of the body its effect is degenerative. There it acts chemically, and this action begins with the first drink taken and never thereafter ceases. Entering the stomach its immediate effect is upon the nervous system, of which the brain is the central and commanding force. It is also the seat of mentality. Whatever affects the nerves, therefore, must affect the brain, the culminating point of the nervous system, and whatever injures the brain must injure the mind as it is the organ through which mental impressions are made outwardly manifest.

Without consciousness we should be but inanimate matter; without the power of imparting consciousness we should be, to all except ourselves, inanimate matter. The more delicate the instrument of sensation the more quick, perfect and profound will be the perceptions and the impressions received and given out. Upon the purity of the blood and the lymphatics depend the healthful preservation of the nerves and brain. As has been already stated, alcohol affects the nervous system. It does this by depriving the blood of its red corpuscles, as can be readily inferred by contrasting the carmine hue of the drinkers blood with the beautiful purple blood of health. Alcohol is a narcotic, also. The well-known effect of all narcotics is to deaden the sensibilities. Alcohol first excites the circulation, doubling the pulsations. This crazes the mind; and the insanity produced is in exact proportion to the quantity of poison swallowed. When this excitement dies out, as it does always in a few hours, stupor succeeds. This stupor, overpowering at first, diminishes in time, but never wholly disappears. Though the effect of one or two drinks, or even of one or two debauches, may not seriously injure the mind of the drinker, he need not flatter himself that he has entirely escaped or can escape the consequences of such a violation of a natural law, any more than he could burn his finger and escape pain. Both acts—and all other wrongful acts, for that matter—are sure to be followed by the penalty denounced against them—suffering. It is written in irrepealable law that whoever sins shall suffer, and, madam, you have not escaped, cannot escape the common doom. Moreover you have been intoxicated, as often as you have taken alcohol into your stomach, for "intoxicated" means poisoned, and has no other meaning. It is a word, however, which came into use at a time when language was used chiefly to conceal the thoughts of the speaker, and is not yet understood in its proper significance by the multitude. After a while we shall cease to say "he is intoxicated" and say "he is poisoned;" then everybody will know just what we mean.

But there is still another view of the "harmless moderation" business, I wish to present. You madam, say it is only the excessive use of strong drink that brutalizes. I admit for the once that you are correct. What then? Do any drink moderately without running a risk of becoming immoderate drinkers, so great as to be almost a certainty? I deny that they do, or can, but whether they do or not, moderate drinking in nearly all cases ends in excessive drinking. This is undeniable, for all are moderate drinkers before they are drunkards. It is only after habitual drinking has benumbed the susceptibilities and deprived men and women of a proper degree of self-esteem that they become drunkards, debauchees and brutes. And, bear in mind that drunkenness is never moderate, and never moderately debauches anybody. It robs its victim of every ennobling, every human attribute, robs him of physical and intellectual power and leaves him a wreck and a ruin, viler than the vilest beast.

Think you any woman ever trod the path of sin which shall be nameless here, without being crazed at her entrance to it by rum? Think you that any mother ever yet looked upon her fallen daughter, as she went staggering and reeling to her place of concealment, bloated and disfigured by drink and shame, and thot well of lying moderation as she gazed? But you are a mother. Take this matter to your own house and your own heart! Call your beautiful daughters around you! They are the jewels of your mother love—the most priceless of your "hearts treasures." Now suppose the rum fiend to demand one of those to be sacrificed upon his polluted altar and call his demand moderate. How could you answer? Would you surrender the eldest? the next? the youngest? Only one is to be sacrificed, no excess about that. The fiend—he of your own excusing—means to be moderate. Which shall be his victim? Many thousands of mothers have been compelled to surrender one equally good and pure as yours; and you who excuse the monstrous barbarism have no right to complain. S.

MISSION STAR.—The public meeting and hall dedication of Mission Star Lodge No. 160, San Francisco, which occurred on Tuesday evening of last week was a highly creditable affair. The hall was filled to overflowing, many remaining standing all the evening. The dedicatory address was delivered by Col. George Babcock. An interesting programme of literary and musical exercises followed the public installation of officers. Mrs. Emily P. Stevens, G. W. V. T., made one of her capital talks, as did also Wm. H. Barnes, Esq. A canvass for names was made, resulting in a list of 21 persons who were desirous of uniting with the lodge. Tho the hour was late, it was decided to initiate such as desired to be made members, by dispensation. Fifteen candidates were initiated; among them, W. H. Barnes, fraternal editor of the Call and G. M. W. of the A. O. U. W., who will prove a valuable acquisition to the lodge. Bro. C. E. Naylor was re-elected and installed W. C. T. Mission Star Lodge as lessee of its own hall, one of the neatest and best adapted for lodge room purposes in the city, commences the new quarter under most favorable auspices, and if it shall continue as it has commenced, it will prove the banner city lodge. May it ever continue

"To shine, and cheer the lonely cot,
Where sorrrow long has dwelt,
And tell the heart to sorrow not,
In anguish not to melt."

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.—The Home for Orphans donation of $100 acknowledged in last week's issue as having been received from Mr. D. Jacks of Monterey, was solicited and procured by Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Grand Lecturer.

DEFERRED.—The reports of proceedings of the Executive Committee and Trustees of the Home for Orphans, held last week, are deferred for want of space. They will appear in full as usual hereafter.

HISTORY OF THE I. O. G. T.—Parker's history of the I. O. G. T.- authorized and endorsed by the R. W. G. L., a neatly bound volume of 311 pages, is now ready for distribution and on sale in the G. W. S. office at $1.25 for cloth binding and $1.75 in half morocco. It should be in the hands of every Good Templar. Send for a copy to the G. W. S.

STILL INCREASING.—Since the commencement of the present fiscal year, Oct. 1st, there have been forty-five new lodges instituted, with a charter membership of over one thousand new members. This is the best showing ever made at a corresponding period in this jurisdiction.

THE DIME COLLECTION.—Bro. N. E. Manning of Guerneville, in last week's issue gives the reasons why his lodge refused to join the movement to send the literature due the contributing lodges, by reason of their contribution to the "Thanksgiving dime collection," to the Literature committee of the R. W. G. L., for distribution among the Freedmen of the South, principally, and other weaker jurisdictions.

No controversy will be entered into at all, nor will the matter of his article be again referred to; but simple justice requires that he and his lodge, which is one of the best of this jurisdiction, be set right upon the question.

Every California Good Templar believes just as he does upon all the propositions he urges, and were it the intention to distribute the literature in New York or Missouri or Nebraska, or any other jurisdiction which is, or even ought to to be able to do this and other work for themselves, his argument would be well enough. But as such is not the case, he argues from entirely false premises, and his argument falls to the ground.

Eastern papers have frequent allusions to the temperance work of the South. The current issue of the Liberator has the following:

"This Southern work cannot be over-estimated. The amendment in North Carolina was lost through the colored vote under the control of revenue and other administration officials. With proper effort several Southern States will fall into line under prohibition laws. The South is being Mahoneized and whiskyized at the same time. It is important, therefore, that it should be temperanceized as well.

The white population of the South will, by a large majority, be found on the side of temperance, as will the colored ministers. The great danger lies in the mass of colored voters who can be easily led to fear their liberties were encroached upon. They must be taught the difference between home protection and saloon protection, and shown what slaves to appetite are those who drink. It can be done and must be done."

All jurisdictions should, and doubtless will, aid in the good work of "temperancizing" the freedman of the South through their ministers and teachers, and in no way can so much be done as to furnish the printed page to them and their teachers.

Every state gained for prohibition, will aid California, the hardest of all states to win to that side, because of its widely extended and all permeating "viticultural interests." If Bro. M's arguments were correct, all churches and Sunday schools would immediately cease all collections and efforts for Missionary purposes. It might, perhaps, have been as well for Bro. Manning to have simply notified the G. W. S. that his lodge voted "no," and not have "rushed into print" about the matter, which necessitated a reply, but which, as before stated, will be pursued no further.

Meanwhile, the following additional lodges have added their desire to have the amount of literature due them to be forwarded for distribution among the Freedmen of the South, and others in need of it, viz-Marysville Lodge No. 25; Virginia, No. 124; Nil Desperandum No. 216, Hueneme No. 236; Valley No. 293; Western Star No. 303; Spring Valley No. 314; June No. 321; Hydesville No. 322; Pride of Tulare No. 329; Lone Oak No. 391; Bay View No. 393; Rincon No. 443; Table Bluff No. 460; and Garden Valley No. 1 (A. T.). The total amount of literature so far contributed is $87.50. It should be made up to at least $100 and doubtless will as there are a number of lodges yet to hear from, altho a majority have already favorably responded.

CHARTERS.—The new supply of charters have finally been received from the R. W. G. L. and the charters due all new Lodges have been issued and forwarded.

SILOAM.—Siloam Lodge No. 2 of Sacramento, installed its one hundred and second corps of officers on Saturnay evening last. The installation service being rendered by P. G. W. V. T. and L. D. Sister Mrs. M. Alsip. Subsequent to the regular Lodge meeting the hall was thrown open and soon filled with invited guests. A choice programme of of literary and musical exercises was rendered, followed by a light collation served by the Sisters of the Lodge. The whole arrangement was well planned and executed and the general verdict was, that the occasion was alike pleasant and profitable.

PERSONALS.—During the week the Grand Lodge officers was honored with calls from Dr. J. F. Dillon L. D. of Faithful Lodge of Blacks Station, Bro. B. H. Hoag of Orion Lodge Davisville and Bros. J. E. Givens and F. J. Rhoades of Cosumnes Lodge No. 183. The latter is a Good Templar raised boy, one of the right kind. Has latterly branched out as a farmer on his own account and will of course make a successful one. Before leaving the office he left a deposit of five dollars for the benefit of the Home for Orphans.

SACRAMENTO ADVERTISERS.—Special attention is called to the Sacramento business houses who have shown their enterprise and good wishes by securing advertising space in this issue of the RESCUE. The Mechanics' store, conducted by Messrs Weinstock and Lubin, is one of the most extensive retail houses of the state, comprising in their establishment and stock, every article of clothing worn upon the human form. They invite the readers of this issue to send for a copy of their illustrated catalogue, which will be sent free upon application.....In the way of printing and book binding and stationery, no house on the coast excels, or has better facilities than that of H. S. Crocker & Co., and this can be best demonstrated by sending them a trial order.....One of the best and most reliable clothing houses of the city is that of S. J. Nathan & Co., who are manufacturers and direct importers of all the goods handled by them in their particular line. They keep the best article always and guarantee their goods in every case to be exactly as represented.....The house of W. A. and C. S. Houghton, booksellers, is one of the most extensive in their line. Lodges or individuals requring books for library or personal use should consult them and learn their prices, which will prove most satisfactory.....Ladies requiring anything in the millinery line, and what lady does not? will find it to their interest to order directly from the leading millinery establishment, conducted by Mrs. E. Katzenstein. Orders are filled and forwarded by mail or express with perfect safety, ...In the way of household and hall furniture, as well as for the office and library, there is not a more reasonable or reliable house to call upon than that of W. D. Comstock, who is an extensive dealer and direct importer of all the goods peculiar to his line. .....For crockery, glassware, plated ware and household goods, the leading house is that of Ackerman & Co., who will be found stocked with every household requisite in the newest and latest styles and at most reasonable prices.....When writing or ordering goods from any of the above houses, state to them that your attention was called to their house by their advertisement in the RESCUE.

COL. J. T. LONG.—This eloquent Kentuckian, who has filled a short lecture engagement with signal success, for the Grand Lodge of Oregon, writes that he must return Eastward so as to reach his home in May next. Negotiations are pending, by which it is hoped to secure his services for a month's work and lectures directly under the auspices and in behalf of the I. O. G. T., in and about the city of San Francisco. It is expected that he will spend the month of March at least, in the embloy of the Grand Lodge of California.

CROWDED OUT.—The usual statistical reports and acknowledgements of the G. W. S., are omitted from this issue to make room for the large amount of matter especially prepared for insertion.

The Long Red Mangel Murtzel Beet

Is the most profitable crop a farmer can raise for feeding hogs and cattle. It is very crisp and sugary, hence a great fat-producer in hogs, and splendid for milk cows. Produces immense crops, even on clay and adobe soils, when well cultivated. Every farmer should plant it, and plant largely this dry year. Look out for old and inferior seed, as there is much on the market. Address, PROF. W. C. DAMON, Napa College, Napa, Cal.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

THE CHINCHA ISLANDS.

NO. 5

When they set about shipping guano, they cleaned off and thru into the sea the top covering of the immense bed that was to be removed. As before stated, this covering consisted of a mass of dead sealions, seals and birds, then bones, feathers, wings, eggshells, mixed with guano of a poor quality, improving as they went down to a depth of 20 to 30 inches, where the pure, strong dust was found hard packed right down to the surface rock of the island, whether it was 10 or 150 feet. The surface of the island was a level plain at first, but when the guano was removed it was irregular. There was only one way to remove this hard packed mass, that was to work it out patiently with picks. They tried to blast out large masses of it, but the powder only blew out a hole a little larger than itself; so they worked on one side, picking out steps of stairs from top to bottom, and then picking away the steps so as to leave a new set in their place.

The guano which thus fell to the bottom was loaded into a railway car; that was dragged on iron rails by a wretched mule or horse who had been born under an unlucky star. The rails led to the edge of a precipitous cliff, where a rickety framework had been built, into which the cars were dumped. From these "canchas" a large shute made of extra strong canvas, was suspended to within about two feet of the edge of the water, and was secured fast to a heavy chain that led up from a heavy anchor off shore. To this chain the ships boats or launches were secured with strong tackles, so that the shute led into the boat. When all ready to receive the load, a signal was given from the launch, the valve was opened above and an avalanche of guano thundered down the shute, enveloping men and launch in a thick cloud of choking dust. When the boat was full, (in two or three minutes), the sailors shouted and the valve was closed.

To load a boat there, looked a little dangerous at the best of times to a newcomer. In the smoothest days there was always a surf, which made the launch tug and surge with tremendous force, being within a very few feet of the rocks and moored so closely as to have no play at all. Then on surf days a monstrous swell from Southwest would come in, that had rolled up from a distance of 1200 to 2,000 miles and worked its way thru the trade winds at right angles to the wind. Sometimes a fine smooth morning would be followed by a most dangerous surf at 1 or 2 P. M., that would break feather white clean over the islets in the offing that were 16 to 20 feet out of water.

Of course on such occasions, no launches could go in; but while the surf was getting up, and after prudent men had quit risking the loss of their launches, there was always some enterprising captain who thot it would be safe to try it once more; he was anxious to get loaded quick; ahead of the rest; if the one forlorn hope escaped miraculously, and came off in triumph with her load, the captain would say to his mate, well, Mr. Brown, they have got their load; guess it aint so bad as it looks; guess we'll risk another load. Send the boatswain in with his launch. And almost, if not every surf time that came up, there was one man who would try that other load, till his launch was torn from the moorings and smashed upon the rocks. For the greed of getting that 8 or 10 tons more cargo on board on that afternoon, and probably after a good day's work already, he would try it once more till he lost a launch worth $200 or $300. There was always one man at least like that, and whenever a launch was stove, the last man was satisfied and quit for the day.

The cargo was taken on board from the launches sometimes in baskets thru the ports, but generally hoisted up in barrels with about one-third of the top sawed off. When the barrels were dumped from the upper deck into the lower hold a cloud of dust finer than the finest flour would rise and flow fore and aft, and would settle down at last on everything in the ship, everywhere; after a few day's works, the fine dust had snowed over every thing about a quarter of an inch thick, but pressing a finger upon it, it was as thin as tissue paper; almost nothing of it after all. Some people said it found its way into the inside of their watches and chronometers, but you know there are some people always a little grasping; if they have ever so much land they want a little more; ever so much money, they want a little more, etc., and when they have ever so much truth they will pile on a good deal more. If they catch a trout two feet long they will contrive to pile on another foot when they tell about it.

About those surf days, it was generally allowed they occurred at full and change of the moon; but it is not so; that is an old superstition. They sometimes occur on Monday, and again on Thursday or Friday of the same week; sometimes it is smooth for 20 days, and again there may be 3 or 4 surf times in 3 weeks; sometimes the tumult lasts 3 days, sometimes 6 or 8 hours. The true reason is doubtless the storms far, far South from Southwest which occur irregularly, but raise such swells that they send their undulations thru all the region of the trade winds and even to 400 miles north of the equator; more than 2,500 miles. When the S. E. trade winds are light, the S. W. swell generally gathers force.

There were a good many of these shutes around the Islands for boats. A high, steep cliff was necessary, with deep water close to the rocks. In two places there used to be shutes for ships, the cliffs being very high and the water very deep; the ship was moored close to the rocks and rolled wildly; the big shutes were led over the hatch and held by guys and ropes in all directions, above and below, from ship and shore. Large ships would load thus in two or three days; but in surf days they had to haul off and wait; on several occasions a Chinaman came down in the shute, but he never came out alive to tell how it felt. Sometimes the great lumps of packed guano jammed and choked the shute; then they had to let go and shake and beat it out into the sea, and 6 or 7 tons of guano were lost; after a few years the big shutes for ships were abandoned.

There was a S. W. and S. E. shute on the north Island. The cargo from the former was dusty, powdery and light; men working in it were enveloped in a cloud of dust and it was stifling. The other was heavy and somewhat clagged, and when it was thrown down into the hold made little dust. Men wondered at the difference; how could it be. But after many a discussion, one man announced on examination of the circumstances, that where the heavy, oily, solid material existed, was a very low portion of the island where the sea lions could easily reach. The other had a frontage of perpendicular cliffs which they could not scale; then it was simple; the one place was the cemetery of the oily seals, and the other of the feathery birds.

Frequently at a depth of 80 feet or more, there were found eggs of the pelican and other birds whole and broken; if whole there was a dried and shrunken cake at the bottom of the interior, how many thousand years old no one could tell; if broken or cracked, the shell, or half shell as it might be, was full of clean white pure ammonia. This used to be found in lumps by itself also, and the Chinamen gathered it and sold it in bottles to the sailors, who thot they had a prize when they paid a dollar a bottle for it. Some of them invested in three or four bottles of it to start a monopoly with the proceeds when they got to Europe. But when they went to Liverpool and found it was only worth 8 cents or 8 pence a bottle, I forget which, they thot of the Chinamen and concluded never to subscribe to Chinese missions. Still as long as sailors went there the Chinamen had a good market for all their product at the old price. Jack did not read the papers nor market reports. Sometimes the remains of a penguin, wings, bones, etc., would be found 70 or 80 feet down.

The handling of all the money that came to the Government of Peru was a great temptation to the politicians. Their politicians are not holy, devout, immaculate, spotless timber for saints like ours. Their politicians some of them would steal; not like ours. In the year 1856 one General Vivanco formed a conspiracy partly in Peru, partly in New York, to upset the Government and steal the Islands. Ramon Castilla, an Indian soldier, who had risen from the ranks, was President; he was one of the best Presidents Peru ever had, but he was a helpless gambler, like most of his countrymen, however. One Sartori, who said he belonged to New Orleans and was a citizen of the U. S., spoke, acted, read, ate and drank Spanish and American with equal facility and perfection, was the agent of Vivanco in New York and the agent of the conspirators of New York in Peru.

The monied men of New York, some of them, agreed to furnish money, Sharps rifles, ammunition, arms of all kinds, to enable Sartori and Vivanco to drive out Castilla and make Vivanco president; first of all to seize the Islands, and the principal Custom houses at Callao and Iquique (that sounds e-ké-kay with us). Then the New York men of money were to be repaid for all their advances in guano, at ten dollars a ton on the register of the ship that took it at the islands. It was worth $45 a ton of 2240 lbs. on the spot but the ships that registered 1000 tons would carry 1300 to 1700 tons each so that they would get for $10,000 a cargo worth $60,000 on the spot.

They chartered about 20 vessels to go to Iquique to carry thence nitrate of soda to Europe intending to have them go from there for the guano; they would have chartered a good many more but wide awake captains tho not suspecting the reality, felt there was something crooked and would not accept the charters.

The Peruvian rebels were armed with American accoutrements or material bot with American money. They got possession of the custom house at Iquique and of the Chincha Islands, and they landed from a rebel vessel under command of the arch traitor (then Lieut.,) Montero to capture Callao but they were quickly and signally repulsed and driven off with loss.

They loaded two of their piratical vessels and got them away and were loading some more when President Castilla understanding well the national vulnerable points, went down to the Chinchas with a large fleet of ironclads? not at all; a more powerful armament; a little squadron of bags of silver half-dollars; the islands were surrendered at discretion at the first summons, without the loss of a man or a drop of blood. The two vessels which had sailed, had to give up their cargoes to the Government's Agents in Europe. The Rebels and Mr. Sartori carried on a predatory war for many months after, but Sartori and his New York conspirators never got a pound of guano nor any return for their outlay. There was one thing they ot to have got which I regret they were defrauded of; that was 20 years each in the penitentiary with hard labor.

WHISKY BIBLE READERS.

My Dear Juveniles:—What wonderful Bible readers the whisky men are! Very many of them have actually read about the marriage at Cana, and the institution of the Lord's Supper, and Paul's advice to Timothy; and each of those passages, to their far-seeing eyes, is the clearest justification of the rum-shop, making its keeper a saint, and the Savior who turned the water into wine, and St. Paul, who advised Timothy to take a little for his stomach's sake, clearly responsible for the human butcheries, wife beatings, and starvation of children. Those passages have been much conned over since the publication of Dr. Crosby's lectures, and even those of the den brotherhood that cannot spare time from the cards and pipe to read for themselves, are thoroly taut and indoctrinated by their dear ministers, the Rev. Bar-keeps. Now when you and I read in the Bible the accounts of the Lord's Supper, we do not find the word "wine" used there.

The evangelists tells us that the "fruit of the vine" was used to symbolize the Savior's blood. The "fruit of the vine," being pure and life-giving, was, and is, a most apt symbol, while the product of decay—the essence of rottenness—after the "fruit" has passed away, is a most fitting symbol, (the very article, indeed,) of death, present and eternal, and all that is vile and unclean. Such was strictly forbidden, and carefully avoided at the feast of the Passover, where the Supper was instituted, and it is likely that the Savior rejected the pure and life-giving tirosh, (unfermented grape juice,) which was truly the "fruit of the vine," and sent away for the emblem, (and substance,) of death to represent his life-giving blood?

We cannot think of a thing more unlikely and absurd; tho the other two favorite lessons of the rum worshippers are, perhaps, equally so. Let us look a little into the case at Cana. John, the Evangelist, telling us of this miracle, (chap. 2, v. 11, says: "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory, and his disciples believed on him." Now, boys, girls, let us suppose a case for illustration. Suppose the Savior had delayed his coming till the present time and some stable in California should be his birth place, and as he "went about doing good" many of my dear juvenile friends should have the pleasure of seeing him, and hearing his gracious words, and feeling his loving hands clasping theirs and laid lovingly upon their heads with words of warning and advice. Suppose that in his journeys from city to city he should honor Astoria with a visit, in order to establish his divinity and purity in the minds of our people. Now, how vivid is the imagination of the scene in these streets!

Church members are crowding near, some in full belief of him: others, like Thomas, a little doutful. Another class are dodging around corners and into dark places behind screens. The housetops are covered with the curious, looking down upon the surging mass below. Boys climb the lamp and piazza posts to see over the men's heads. The upper windows and piazzas are crowded with women and girls. Every morning, large editions of the Daily Astorian are grasped with eager hands, read and mailed to friends, telling of the wonderful speeches and pure example of our strange visitor. But, in the midst of all the excitement, a wedding, possibly some of our good lodge folks, is to come off, and the happy pair, after much deliberation, resolve upon inviting the city's wonderful guest. He pleasantly accepts, and is there, also, the chief object of notice, as every word and act is weighed in the delicate balance of absolute purity and wisdom, as he claims to be the perfect teacher of righteousness.

Hymn books are passed around for singing, and by miracle, are changed into decks of cards for the people to play at. Some nice cake is passed, and lo! it is turned into plugs of tobacco. Nuts are turned into pipes, sticks of candy into pistols, and nice slices of melon into bowie knives, and all to manifest his glory, that the people might believe on him as the pure and holy One. You think that would be a great inconsistency. I think so too, but not quite so great as to take six pots of the beautiful life-giving water and turn it into the deadly poison that the holy book charges us not even to look upon, and assures us that "it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder," and that "whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." True, the Savior turn the water into wine; but what kind of wine? We may reasonably suppose that he made a kind that was in common use on such occasions, and would not show at once a gross violation of his own teachings and the warnings of the bible. Much of the wine, (and some think the greater part,) in those days was unfermented, pure and wholesome; and in remembrance of the Saviors purity and love for his people, which kind do you think he made at the marriage at Cana? and which do you suppose Paul advised Timothy to drink; the pure, wholesome kind, easily digested, or the kind that always hinders digestion and deranges the stomach.

T. J. Alley.

Those who wish changes made in the Band of Hope list in the Rescue, must notify Mrs. M. E. Richardson, Murphys, and not the editor of the Rescue. Changes cannot be made every day, but at stated times, the necessary amendments will be made under direction of the General Superintendent, and all corrections made to that date.

This is not a notice of unwillingness to be courteous and accomodating, but it would keep one printer busy about all the time, to make separate changes one at a time; to add two or three names, disturbs two or three colums and perhaps more than a page of such matter, which has to be broken up and rearranged at great trouble and expense; look at the list and see yourself how it is.

TEACH THE GIRLS TO VOTE.

Ed. Rescue—"Excelsior" Band of Hope of this City held its semi-annual election of officers last Friday evening.

There was one very suggestive phase of this election business to me. I announced that there would be an election two weeks in advance, and also by notice in local papers, made a little speech to the children on the importance of the occasion, and requested all to be prepared with pencil and paper so that we could hold the election by ballot. I called the attention of the girls especially to the manner and form of voting and electing officers by ballot, told them I hoped they would all grow up with the idea of their right to take part in the election of our civil rulers, I said to them that in my opinion we should never be able to effectually stamp out the liquor traffic until woman was given the ballot; desired them to become familiar with the idea of the ballot as in this instance of the election of officers, etc., etc.

The result was very interesting, a full attendance was out on the evening in question, when the nominations were announced in order, boys and girls arose in their places and nominated their choice in a very orderly and business like way. Tellers were appointed and when the balloting commenced the scene was very animated—sixty votes were polled on the first ballot, they were duly counted and recorded, and the choice announced by the President. I relate this incident hoping that other Bands of Hope and their leaders will make there elections a medium of instruction to boys and girls as to the duties soon to devolve on them; the girls in our band took the liveliest interest in the balloting. We must inculcate a taste for the ballot early in life in their minds. Woman must be recognized, she must have the ballot, then the days of rum are ended, and the nation saved from moral and physical bankruptcy.

THE YEARS PASS ON.

"When I'm a woman, you'll see what I'll do!
I'll be great and good, and noble and true;
I'll visit the sick and relieve the poor—
No one shall ever be turned from my door;
But I'm only a little girl now."
And so the years pass on.

"When I'm older I'll have more time
To think of heaven and things sublime;
My time now is full of studies and play,
But I really mean to begin some day;
I am only a little girl now."
And so the years pass on.

"When I'm a woman," a gay maid said,
"I'll try to do right, and not be afraid;
I'll be a Christian, and give up the joys
Of the world with all its dazzling toys;
But I'm only a young girl now."
And so the years pass on.

"Ah me!" sighed a woman gray with years,
Her heart full of cares and doubts and fears,
"I've kept putting off the time to be good,
Instead of beginning to do good as I should;
But I'm an old woman now."
And so the years pass on.

Now is the time to begin to do right;
To-day, whether skies be dark or bright;
Make others happy by good deeds of love,
Looing to Jesus for help from above;
And thus you'll be happy now,
And as the years pass on. —Ripon Free Press.

WHY?

BY MRS. HELEN E. BROWN.

When I was a child I was continually asking why? I was told then that I must "do as I was bid and not ask why," but yet that little question would be forever popping out.

I am old now, but I have not done asking why. And here is a matter which puzzles me. Perhaps some of you little children can answer me. If alcohol is good, and you know how many people say it is, why hasn't God made it for us? We go all over the earth and we can't find alcohol growing naturally anywhere. There's water, good cold water, everywhere; lakes and rivers and brooks and springs enough to satisfy the thirst of every living being. But there are no rivers or lakes or rills of brandy, whisky, wine, or beer. There are medicinal springs in a good many places, soda springs, sulphur springs, iron springs, and many other kinds, and invalids go to these and drink the waters to make them well. But you never yet heard of an alcohol spring, did you?

And God has made all manner of beautiful fruits on the earth, oranges, lemons, peaches, plums, pears, apples, grapes, melons, berries, oh! how many kinds there are, and all very nice, some sweet and some sour, so juicy and so wholesome. And yet not one, no, not one of them, contains alcohol. I am sure it would be just as easy for God to make alcohol in some of them as not. And if it is good for us to take, why didn't he? That is what I want to know.

Then look into the Bible. There was Hagar's poor little son Ishmael laid under the bushes to cry himself to death for want of something to drink. Yes, he was dying of thirst, and the poor mother ready to die of grief, when "God opened her eyes and she saw a well of water, and she went and filled the bottle with water and gave the lad drink." Now wouldn't it have been just as easy for God to have given her wine to fill her bottle with as water? The wine would have been so strengthening, some people say, for the poor famished child; it would have been meat and drink both, as they tell us and if it would have been so much better, why do you suppose God didn't give it to him?

And when the Israelites were traveling from Egypt to Canaan, when they started on that long forty years' journey through the wildernees, you remember they came to a place where they found nothing to drink, and the whole multitude cried from thirst. And God told Moses to smite the rock, and there flowed out a stream of pure cold water, a stream that followed them all the way. If wine had been better for them, couldn't God have made a river of wine for their use?

When Elijah, the prophet, fled for his life into the wilderness God sent him a cruse of water to daink. Why didn't he give him something stronger?

If brandy and whisky make people strong, why did God tell Samson's mother to be sure not to drink any strong drink before he was born, and not to give him any? Samson was the strongest man that ever lived. How strange that he should become so strong on nothing but water!

How did it happen if wine is good for people that Daniel and his companions were fairer and fatter in flesh than those who took it?

And the Lord forbade the priests ever to drink wine on pain of death, and the kings, too, were told they should not take it. And when a person in ancient times took a vow of consecration to the Lord one of the things they resolved to do was to abstain from wine and strong drinks; and so particular were they that they wouldn't taste a grape or even a raisin. If these liquors were really strengthning and nourishing, I shouldn't think the good God would have required this, would you?

And you remember about the Rechabites, who obeyed their father so faithfully and never tasted wine, even when the prophet at God's command offered it to them to see what they would do. How pleased God was with them because they were so true to their total-abstinence pledge.

Don't you think, children, that this is a great puzzle? Why, if alcoholic drinks are good for people, shouldn't God have provided them? Why should he have so strictly forbidden them? And why should he have been so pleased with those who never touched or tasted?

How can you explain it?—Banner.

GIRLS AND THE PLEDGE.

W. N. B.

"I dont see what's the use of girls signing the pledge and joining temperance societies and such things," said pretty Minnie Proctor the other day, as she tossed back her head and seated herself at the piano. "Girls never drink, anyway; its only men and rough boys."

"Guess your education's been neglected in that direction, Min," said her brother Harry. "Girls ought to sign the pledge if for nothing else than to help them keep from offering wine to callers on New Year's day. Lots of 'em either drink or help to make men drink, and I guess they need a pledge as much as men and boys do."

"O, well, I suppose some of the rich ones do, where they have wine in the house all the time," returned Minnie; "but we dont have it. What do I want to sign a pledge for?"

"The time may come when you'll need it as much as Harry ever will," said Uncle Fred, looking up from his paper. "I am not sure but that women are in almost as much danger nowadays as men. I've just been reading something to the point in the morning paper. Listen:

" 'Yesterday morning about two o'clock, a drunken woman was found half dead in the refuse race near the gas works. From what could be learned at the time, she was under the influence of liquor and had fallen into the ditch while walking about looking for more of the stuff.'

"Even tho you may never be tempted to drink or to put the cup to the lips of another," continued Uncle Fred, "you ought to put your name to the pledge. It might influence some one else to do the same thing, who would otherwise yield some day to temptation and get as low as this drunken woman who lay in the ditch yesterday morning. Dont always think of yourself, Minnie, when such matters as this come before you. Learn to act for the good of others."

Minnie Proctor's name looked up from the pledge after that day, sending out its influence in favor of total abstinence. Did you ever think, girls, how much it may mean just to have your name written where it will cast an iufluence for good?—Royal Road.

A few National Temperance Almanacs can be supplied at the Rescue office; a 10 cent stamp will get one, and that is the cheapest way of remittance. The volume for 1882 is, as usual, full of good matter.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

EVERYBODY'S PAPER.

The object of this large edition of the Rescue which is 47 reams, or 22,560 copies is to give every Good Templar on the Pacific Coast an opportunity of seeing the paper and becoming a constant reader of it, if so desired.

A disastrous war has been actively waged against us by the agencies of evil to demoralize, debauch, pauperize, enslave and destroy the American people and to dedicate this youngest of the continents to the degraded and miserable service of Satan, which has made the older civilizations of christendom the worst and most degraded nests of cruelty, crime, starvation and utter misery that this sinful world has ever produced.

The agency which has been,and which alone could have ever been successful in degrading the Christion civilizations to a lower level than the heathen and Mahomadan, in spite of all the numerous and magnificent machineries for good that christianity has initiated and erected and developed and spread broadcast thruout the land—is the grogshop—the devil's cabinet and congress brewers, distillers, of winemakers and their slaves and dupes and victims and all their helpers. Hell's grand army of this Republic enlisted for the conquest of this nation and its annexation to the beggared, debauched, played out and devil-owned kingdoms of Europe.

This agency, the only obstacle to a reign of peace and comfort and universal prosperity in this country, has been particularly bold and brazen and impudent for the past fifty years, and more than ever defiant the past ten years and this year. Its leaders and the greater part of its rank and file are by the nature of their business, engaged in poisoning the bodies and morals and souls of the whole people; they carry on a wholesale butchery, which slauters from 60 to 100 thousand American citizens every year by the most painful and miserable deaths, and it seduces from the path of virtue an equal number of young victims every year, boys and girls, to take their places in due time at the slauter block in their vast human butcher pen.

Beside the fact that these men live solely by robbing and murdering the people of this country as a matter of business, most of them are the most pronounced and outspoken enemies of American institutions, American customs, American ideas and American people. They are graduates of the beer system and wine system and rum system which has made drunkenness, harlotry and beggary the distinguishing characteristics and most prominent land marks of the older countries, which have starved them into exile, and vomited them forth to spread the leprosy of crime and pauperism and nastiness over all the world.

While these beer leags and leags of freedom and leags of liberty, are the most deadly and malignant and utterly poisonous enemies of American ideas, and more emphatically of American women, they are no less so of the virtuous and respectable and honest citizens of their own respective nationalities, who have come to a new country to be good citizens and are so—who came to help make this a happy country, not to blast every green and pleasant thing on the face of the land, not to distil a poisonous venom which makes the report of the murderers weapon and the flow of innocent blood and the death moan of murdered innocence rise up to heaven in a conuous despairing wave of accusation and cry to heaven unceasingly for vengeance upon this most cruel and bloody despotism.

The press of the country, secular and religious, with but few exceptions are tongue-tied; either voluntarily, or from coward fear of the rum conspiracy, they will not or dare not say a word against the wholesale domestic ruin, wholesale drunkenness, wholesale harlotry, wholesale pauperism which this infernal leag of monsters is inflicting on the country.

The temperance press is, in short, the only agency which dares stand up in defiance of the country's enemies, and tell the plain, unvarnished, honest truth about them; the only agency which proposes to take or offer any measures against the murderous traitor leags who plot the country's death—or at least any measures that have the least show of effectiveness.

Therefore, the temperance press and the temperance people appeal to you reader, to signify your appreciation and approval of this paper, this only vehicle and mouthpiece of the truth on this most vitally important matter, this only vehicle of information to the people, this only agency of the coast that dare champion the whole truth and stand up to defend the country from utter woe and ruin. You reader, every reader, you are appealed to, to become a constant reader yourself and invite your neighbor to become so too—not to help the paper, not to help its editor, not to help or oblige anybody; but to enable the Rescue to fulfil its mission of informing and awakening the people to thro off the foreign yoke of infamy, which seeks to rob us of our honor, our fortunes and our lives.

THE 22,560 EDITION.

The Rescue this week goes to all its usual readers in the usual manner. Then to every lodge reported at last session of Grand Lodge will be sent one copy of the Rescue for every member so reported. To the new lodges organized since then will be sent one for each member as near as can be estimated and to the lodges in Oregon and W. T. a package of 25 to 30 each will be mailed.

It is particularly requested that the parties who receive these papers will see to their distribution; or if the parties to whom they are directed are absent that some of the officers will see to that duty.

A 20,000 edition was promised; 2,560 more copies have been printed and it is expected that a few sample copies say 200 to 400 will be left on hand and will be furnished to any who may have been overlooked.

APOLOGY.

Quite a number of good friends have kindly sent in a helping contribution for this number. But the second and third, sixth and seventh and every alternate pair of pages comprising one side of the paper, had to go to press Friday morning, and took two and a half days to finish. Then the larger part of the advertisements and most of the articles contributed, came in after the first side was printed; the former had to go in, and the latter to be deferred till next week and some of them till the following. Quite a number of them would have appeared had they been in time for the first side.

Therefore, next week a fuller and better paper may be expected so far as reading matter is concerned. The lecturers reports are laid over and most of the editorial space given up.

This edition of the Rescue will be largely circulated. If three persons on an average should read each copy more or less of it, it will speak to an audience of 70,000 persons. There has been a desire to make this a readable, instructive and useful number; but precisely the same desire has governed every issue of the paper and in place of making this sample copy the pet one of the year, and superior to all the rest, the next one will if possible be better; and every succeeding one will be an improvement on its predecessor if the wish or the effort can accomplish it.

About a year ago, a talented editor in a distant state wrote that his temperance principles had been fortified and his prohibition sentiments nurtured into permament shape by reading the Rescue for a year or two long ago. Various other temperance papers would probably have had the same effect upon him. There are many men and women active and earnest in good works of every kind who will readily confess to having been interested and profited by reading for years in the Rescue the sayings and doings of the writers, authors, speakers and thinkers of this country and Europe who have made the temperance question a subject of special study.

It is a matter of general agreement that if we hope to put away the grogshop leag we must come as near as possible to getting temperance literature into every family. Wherever the beer keg or jug enters a house we should put in a temperance paper there too, and whoever desires to reclaim his intemperate neighbor or preserve his own family and friends from becoming intemperate, should take a temperance paper to enable him to maintain and defend his principles and give an intelligent reason for his faith and practice. In fine, it is idle and useless to attempt the destruction of the grogshop without making active and general use of the temperance press. We want 10,000 subscribers for the Rescue on this coast and will have them soon.

GOOD WORDS FROM AFAR.

The Hon. James Black of Lancaster, Pa., renews his subscription and writes, Jan. 7th, "Enclosed find renewal of my subscription to the Rescue. I congratulate you most heartily on the vigor, neatness and ability with which the Rescue has been conducted. It ranks among the ablest of our temperance journals and is the very best of the journals of the order of which I have knowledge. I have desired at several times to write to you, but really have not been able to find the leisure with the inspiration.

Wishing you a happy New Year and joining you in increased effort for the advancement of the cause during the present year. James Black.

If any man can get along without a temperance paper and especially without one from California it is Mr. Black. He is one of the great and good writers and speakers and workers who stand among the leaders of the temperance reform: knows all that any body knows about the cause; has read about every thing that has been written on the subject; could write a better article every day than any he finds in the Rescue; has all the papers, magazines and books that any body could wish, and yet he wants the Rescue. He practices law and is deeply interested in the Ocean Grove temperance and Christian Colony and gives much time to various worthy causes, but altho always busy, he has time to want the Rescue and a variety of other temperance papers. It is not because they possess an extraordinary merit or cleverness, but he wants to know everything that transpires in the line of this reform as soon as it happens; desires to commune with his fellow temperance workers and interchange thots and sympathies with them. And yet again the fact that he encourages with his good wishes and kind words, the hazardous enterprise of publishing a paper in this interest, makes every one of us more hopeful and cheerful and faithful in maintaining the contest to the final day of rejoicing over an emancipated free and equal, sober, Christian home of peace and security.

How different Mr. Black's practice is from that of many very excellent but inconsiderate people who believe because they do not drink and are in no danger of becoming drunkards, they have no need whatever of reading up on the various phases of the temperance movement.

Attention is requested to an interesting article in this number of the Rescue accompanied with cuts of the Studebaker Brothers' Carriage and Wagon works at South Bend, Indiana. It will well repay a careful perusal; these gigantic industrial enterprises are the outgrowth of the mighty energy and onward progress which distinguish the American people; they are trophies of victorious peace of which we can all be justly proud. When you want any thing in the line of wagons, etc., go right to 31 Market St., and say you read about it in the Rescue.

Solutions of the Mensuration problem have come to hand; one from Rio Vista and one from A. E. Hiddleson, Woodland. The former asks for something worthy of his steel or pencil. More next week.
